"We will make the New Haven what it should be—the best and safest railroad in the United States."—PRESIDENT HOWARD ELLIOTT.

DIVIDE SHORE LINE IN PLAN OF SAFETY

New Haven President in Statement to the Press Outlines Scheme of Reform—Important Changes Are Made Public

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 6.—Two operating divisions, instead of the present Shore Line division, will be one of the results of the considerations by the New Haven railroad officials of the North Haven wreck.

This and other important announcements of future policy and methods were made by President Howard Elliott in a statement which he gave out late this afternoon after newspapermen to the number of forty or more had urged him to grant an interview.

After the Connecticut territory is split into two divisions there is to be still closer supervision by the divisional heads.

The Pullman company has agreed to rush the hundreds of steel cars under contract.

The present hodge signals are to be abolished and the "advance" danger signal semaphore, or automatic block system, is to be substituted.

Other obsolete signal systems are to be given way to modern signals as soon as plans and material can be arranged for.

And when the New Haven bylaws are changed, by the cooperation of employes with officials, and officials with President Elliott as chairman of the whole New Haven system, every effort will be directed "to that wonderful property to make it what it should be—the best and safest railroad in the United States."

In concluding his statement, Mr. Elliott says this about former President Mellen and his relations with Mr. Elliott and the road:

Explains Mellen's Position.

"There seems to be a slight misunderstanding as to the relations Mr. Mellen has with the present management. When he left the Northern Pacific, Mr. Mellen very kindly told me that he would be glad at any time to give me any information that he had concerning that property and once or twice I called upon him.

"When I came here he very kindly made the same offer, but he has retired from office and from the board, and has no connection, directly or indirectly with the present and future policy of the management of the New Haven company or any of its various properties, or in the selection and direction of any officers working for any of those properties.

"I, of course, deplore more than any words can express, the terrible accident of Tuesday last and I shall use all means in my power to create an organization and to provide facilities that will reduce to a minimum the danger of such occurrences.

Mr. Elliott regretted that he had missed Mr. McChord of the Interstate Comerce Commission, who had left New Haven this afternoon.

Concerning the notice of Morgan & Co. that they are to retire as fiscal agents of the road, Mr. Elliott said he had no advancing information of such action and that he first saw Mr. Morgan Friday when he came in late to the meeting of the executive committee.

He said the notice would be laid be-

Says She Knows of No Ban on Indian Dance Tour.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Maud Allan, who is away resting from a slight breakdown, in answer to a telegram, replied: "I have absolutely no knowledge of any official ban on my dancing in India."

Her manager, James Mc Leod, said today that she intends to proceed with her program and is undisturbed by the agitation created here.

Girl Finds Baby in Franklin Park

Pink-Cheeked Infant Taken to Home Pending Inquiry.

A pink-cheeked, pink-cheeked, white-coated baby, about six months old, lay on the grass, kicking its feet in the air and blinking at the afternoon sun, near the spring in Allentownd, Franklin Park, as Florence Hahn of No. 26 Canterbury street passed yesterday. The baby looked lonesome and Miss Hahn stopped. Finally she notified the park police and the baby was sent to the Charlton Street Home to await further investigation. It wore expensive white clothes and a white all-wool jacket.

Revelation of Prominent Persons Expected from Gerry Tuesday.

SALEM, Sept. 6.—Back Bay and North Shore society people are still trembling in their high-priced shoes because of the revelations it is feared are still to come in the case against Harry K. Mansfield of Ferncroft Inn at Danvers, which will be resumed Tuesday morning.

Herbert Franklin Gerry, the Watch and Ward spotter who figured in the investigation that led to the raid of August 23, will resume the witness stand for cross-examination, and is said to have information about certain socially prominent people that will make Boston gasp if it all comes out.

St. Louis Belle's Hand Won by James Hope Nelson.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The announcement of the engagement of James Hope Nelson to the lovely Miss Isabel Valle, daughter of Dr. Julen T. Valle of St. Louis, vastly surprised some members of the lucky young man's family and all his friends here.

In fact, Nelson had kept the engagement secret even from his brother, Hugh, who knew nothing of it until told today by the AMERICAN correspondent. Hope Nelson is son and heir of Sir William Nelson, Bart., a millionaire ship owner and chairman of the Nelson line of steamships.

THOS. G. PLANT IS MARRIED SECOND TIME

HONEYMOON ON MOUNTAIN

News reached Boston late last night that Thomas G. Plant, whose first wife, Mrs. Caroline Griggs Plant, divorced him last year, has married a second time. His new bride is a young woman of twenty-six.

The second Mrs. Plant was formerly Miss Dewey, whose father is said to be president of a suburban Chicago bank. The marriage was performed quietly two months ago, but not even a whisper of it became known in Boston at the time.

The first Mrs. Plant, when asked over the telephone at her Summer home in Canasset last night if she knew of her husband's second marriage, replied:

"Yes, I know about it."

Mrs. Caroline Plant declined to discuss any further the affairs of a man from whom she had freed herself in the Divorce Court.

Mr. Plant and his second wife are at the McDonald house, one of the buildings on the edge of Mr. Plant's vast estate on Oedipee Mountain, N. H. The house is on the Moultonboro side of the property, and is connected with the long-distance telephone by a private line.

"Nobody's Business."

Mr. Plant was asked over the telephone from Boston last night—with considerable difficulty on account of the distance—if he would give the details of his second marriage.

With marked emphasis Mr. Plant replied that it was "Nobody's business, merely his own, private affair."

The second Mrs. Plant is a comely young woman, according to other residents of Moultonboro. She and Mr. Plant seem very happy in their honeymoon. They spend much time automobiling along the lake and mountain drives. They can motor for miles without going out of Mr. Plant's big reserve on Oedipee Mountain.

Thomas G. Plant is one of New England's biggest self-made men. He was a lister in a Lynn shoe factory. He established a business which finally required the erection of a huge factory in Jamaica Plain, where he employed from 4,000 to 6,000 hands until he sold a controlling interest to the United Shoe Machinery Company at a figure estimated from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

First Married in 1895.

In 1895 Mr. Plant married Caroline Griggs of Chicago. When he rose to wealth they became more and more prominent socially, with a particular interest in horses and smart horse shows.

In the Fall of 1910 Mrs. Plant, having separated from her husband, filed suit for divorce, with an attachment of $1,500,000 put on her husband's property. The attachment was later lifted and it was reported that a reconciliation had taken place.

But, on October 28, last, Mrs. Plant, with four witnesses, came quietly before Judge Hardy's session of the Suffolk Divorce Court late in the afternoon, and began testimony. She said she had begun to suspect Mr. Plant in September, 1910, in regard to a young girl.

The most important witness was Miss Florence J. Stoddard, a Brooklyn teacher, who testified that Mr. Plant had engaged her in August, 1909, to educate a Miss Catherine Hadley, or Katherine Hadley, who had been a waitress in the lunch room of the Plant shoe factory. Mrs. Stoddard undertook this education until she learned things which led her to inform Mrs. Plant.

A hotel keeper, chambermaid and one other testified. Mr. Plant did not contest the suit. Mrs. Plant was given a decree nisi, which was made absolute on April 28 last.

JAIL WOMAN AS HANAN PIER JEWEL THIEF

Fashionably Gowned Suspect and Male Companion Held in Cleveland.

OF GEM GANG, SAY POLICE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 6.—Under arrest here today is a fashionably gowned woman who, the police say, they have reason to believe, is one of the mysterious robbers who succeeded in stealing jewels worth $250,000 from Mrs. John H. Hauge, wife of the millionaire shoe manufacturer, and Mrs. C. C. Ramsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, at Narragansett Pier, R. I., a few weeks ago.

The woman is held as a suspicious person. Her name has not been revealed. With her at the time of the arrest was a man whose name is also being kept secret.

The arrest was made at the instance of Eugene Bowman of St. Paul, who was in Cleveland on business. He saw the woman on the street, and says he recognized her as the same person who picked his pocket of $600 at Atlantic City some time ago.

He followed her into a hotel here and tried to detain her long enough to secure her arrest, but she escaped.

Police then searched for her and finally captured her and the man early today as they were on their way to the Union Station.

Slain Man's Body Horribly Mutilated

Biddeford Victim Found in Water With Throat Cut.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Sept. 6.—The horribly mutilated body of Kassen Suleman of Biddeford was discovered today against the grating in the water that surrounds the turbine at the Topsham Pulp Mill. The murderer had cut Suleman's throat, slashed the abdomen, made two stabs in the chest, cut the left cheek and ear, and thrust a knife into seventeen other places in the body.

The only clew to the murderer is furnished by a man in Topsham village. A stranger called at his home early today, said he had been in a fight with a man over a woman with whom they were both in love, and asked for assistance.

Cole Raps Gardner as "Silk Stocking"

Benton and Cole Urge Defeat of Congressman as Head of Ticket.

Heated denunciation of Congressman Augustus P. Gardner as a "silk-stocking candidate for the Republican nomination as Governor," featured the speeches of former Speaker of the Legislature John N. Cole at a dinner participated in by 200 business men Republicans at the American House yesterday.

Ex-Speaker Cole said in part:

"In the opinion of Congressman Gardner, no one out of every five of you is fit to deal with important State problems because you haven't been through Harvard and can't stand the acid test of the Back Bay. He is a silk-stocking candidate and as such he must be defeated."

Crowd in Park Attacks Officers

Patrolman Maguer Badly Hurt While Making Arrest.

The arrest of a man last evening about 8 o'clock at an amusement park on the South Boston flats, at D and First streets, was followed by an attack on the two officers who made the arrest, by the crowd, which tried to rescue the prisoner.

Patrolmen Patrick Maguer and James Breen were the officers. Edward Cook, twenty-seven, of No. 162 Sixth street was the man arrested. The crowd hurled stones, bricks and sticks. Both the officers were struck by missiles, Maguer sustaining a deep gash over the left eye.

THAW MUST QUIT CANADA, INSISTS CABINET CHIEF

Acting Minister of Interior Doherty Scorns Montreal Move of Prisoner's Counsel and Declares It Will Not Be Allowed to Interfere With Deportation Plans — Arrange to Secure Lengthy Delay

Attorney Jerome, in Serious Predicament by Disregarding Court Order to Appear on Gambling Charge, Is Considered Fugitive From Justice —Thaw May Enjoy Freedom for Time by Bail

COATICOOK, P. Q., Sept. 6—Four main developments today in the international struggle over Harry Kendall Thaw were these:

1—Declaration of Thaw's counsel that they will fight the case right up to the Privy Council of England. The case in this event will take several years to settle.

2—Equally emphatic statement, authorized by C. J. Doherty, Acting Minister of the Interior, that Thaw will be deported and that "sooner than expected. The new Montreal trial will not interfere with our plans."

3—The action of William Travers Jerome in crossing the line from Norton Mills, Vt., again into Canada on his way to Montreal, late this afternoon, despite the report that he was considered a fugitive from justice and faced second arrest as such. He went over the Canadian Pacific route, not passing through the district of St. Francis, in which Coaticook is located. He will be at the Montreal hearing on Thaw September 13, whatever the outcome.

4—The possibility that Thaw may obtain bail, pending his appearance at Montreal on September 15, on the third and latest writ of habeas corpus.

M'KEOWN UTTERS DEFIANCE.

The first of these four developments, the defiance uttered by W. H. McKeown of the Thaw legal camp, was given in Montreal. Justice McKeown said:

"We intend to take this case to the highest court in England, if such a thing is necessary, in order for us to get justice."

The Privy Council of England sits at London. Before Thaw's case could come before that august body it would have to be submitted to Ottawa for consideration. But if the Thaw lawyers succeed in carrying their fight that far, it will mean months of delay and so much more time gained for their client.

But the Department of the Interior and Immigration, clearly opposed to Thaw remaining in Canada a second longer than can be helped, treats the latest move of the Thaw lawyers almost with scorn.

This move against the writ of habeas corpus demanding Thaw's presence in Montreal on September 15—is an order from the Superior Court, and is supposed to carry with it the full weight of that tribunal's authority and discretion.

Minds Made Up.

But the Honorable C. J. Doherty, Acting Minister of the Interior and of Immigration, authorized at Ottawa today the following statement:

We have made up our minds that Thaw is going to be deported from Canada on the grounds set out by our representative at Sherbrooke and, while the legal device of his lawyers yesterday in securing a writ for his production in Montreal, must necessarily cause us some delay, IT IS NOT GOING TO INTERFERE WITH OUR PLANS.

The country will be rid of Thaw sooner than it now expects.

This statement was framed after a conference of department officials, who gathered to discuss the latest block to their plans. Acting Minister Doherty gave his official sanction to the statement.

While Thaw's lawyers have acted their client, at the last moment, by the Montreal writ, they realize that official sentiment against Thaw is increasing, just as popular sentiment is against stranger for him.

The opinion was expressed here this afternoon that the arrest of Jerome will also militate against Thaw, irrespective of the merits of the action against Jerome. Fear is expressed among the Thaw opponents that Thaw, by deported directly over to New York, instead of to Vermont, which would be only too convenient for the Jerome contingent.

MAY BE BUT BRIEF JOY FOR PRISONER

There is much speculation whether Thaw can obtain bail, pending his appearance in Montreal on the fifteenth. It was reported here today that his lawyers in Montreal would apply for bail. They are protected from the Immigration Department, attempting to seize Thaw, by the court's restraining order, which directed the Board of Inquiry to take no further action in Thaw's case.

Thaw's lawyers are jubilant and are prepared to go any legal distance. Governor Stone of Pennsylvania says that he is authorized to go ahead, regardless of expense, and plan a campaign for years to come, if necessary, rather than let Thaw be delivered to Jerome and Matteawan.

Jerome in Bad Odor.

Patrons of the "great American game" may realize Jerome's position better when they learn that he faces imprisonment if he sets foot again in the Dominion.

He cannot appear before the King's bench in Montreal on September 15, when the third writ of habeas corpus is argued, without danger of immediate arrest as matters stand now.

He is charged flatly with openly breaking a gambling law. His failure to appear at the hearing today offended Justice of the Peace James McKay, who record Jerome bitterly.

At request of Hector Verrett, K. C., counsel for the State of New York, Jerome's case was continued to September 10 and his $500 bail forfeited.

Jerome, meanwhile, was smugly repeating at Norton Mills, Vt., whither he had gone in anticipation of Thaw being deported thither.

A report came to Jerome at Norton Mills that he would be re-arrested as a fugitive from the Dominion. That caused a new bitter and sarcastic smile to appear on Jerome's face than the expression he showed when first arrested.

The transfer of the Coatlook witness to ward Jerome was shown at the hearing today. A. C. Hanson, joint prosecutor, said he was ready to proceed with the case. Justice of the Peace McKee ordered the witnesses sworn. Milton Aldrich, a mill hand, swore that he saw Jerome playing poker with several reporters near the Grand Trunk Railroad Station.

Then Mr. Verrett said that his effort could not possibly appear. Justice McKee suggested that the $500 bail be forfeited. But Crown Prosecutor Hanson objected, saying:

"That would only hit two or our citizens, who went on it."

In connection with this statement concerning the two citizens who furnished bail, a report was circulated that Jerome, for some reason, had gone bail for Jerome. This was denied by the associates of the former New York district attorney.

Justice Scores Jerome.

Then Justice McKee "allowed" he would let the bail stand, but he banged his table with a judicial fist and cried:

But I want to say that we intend to prosecute Mr. Jerome to the full extent of the law. He can't come here and play card gangs before our children.

This may be a suburb town, but we intend to enforce our laws. Our relations with the American bar are cordial, but justice must be meted out in this case.

Spectators applauded the justice's words with lusty stamping and the court room floor. Mr. Verrett asked for a week's delay. The Court said:

"I am willing to grant a week's delay. But I want it understood that this appeared nothing with the Court does not please me. This is a serious matter. It is charged that the law has been broken and we will make no distinction of persons.

THE GUILTY MAN WILL BE PUNISHED, NO MATTER WHO HE IS."

Thaw, in his cell, was kept posted on events. Everything pleased him vastly. He bought the papers Coatlookers had and dispensed them lavishly. Coatlook found Harry a bonanza, just as Sherbrooke did.

Harry couldn't say enough for Canadian law. But he was sarcastic about Jerome.

learned counsel for the Chicken Trust," said the prisoner.

Captain John Lanyon, Jerome's companion and specially deputized as a Matteawan attendant to seize Thaw whenever possible, called the poker case a "frame up."

JEROME AGAIN IN CANADA TO FIGHT THAW IN MONTREAL

NORTON MILLS, Vt., Sept. 6.—Until 4 o'clock this afternoon Jerome remained here at the Hotel Carpenter, a line house. The bar of the hotel is in Canada and the tobacco stand in Vermont.

He had been advised that the temper of the people of Coatlook was such that his life would be in danger if he returned there.

"I would like nothing better than to Coatlook immediately and face every one of those who think I am their enemy," said Jerome. "I have no enemy in a private citizen I would do so, but I am a representative of the Empire State, and so I shall not return until Thursday, when I hope that the better sense of the intelligent people will prevail."

At 4 o'clock Hector Verrett, Jerome's counsel, motored down from Coatlook and told him word that a search of the Canadian statutes had revealed that the gambling offence charged is a crime and that therefore the warrant against him would be quashed. Jerome then motored to Island Pond, Vt., with Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney-general of New York, and Captain John Lanyon, his personal bodyguard. There he took a train for Montreal over the Canadian Pacific, not passing through the judicial district of St. Francis, in which Coatlook is located.

In Montreal Jerome will engage lawyers and continue the fight for Thaw's early deportation. He still believes that he will have Thaw over on border within a fortnight, and will devise ways and means to commit the latest move of the Thaw lawyers in securing a writ of habeas corpus, returnable September 15. What may happen to Jerome in Montreal is a matter of conjecture. He may be arrested. Jerome thinks that the Minister of Justice or Premier Borden has power to order the immediate execution of the Immigration Board's order of deportation to Vermont.

SOME LIKELY TO BE BADLY FOOLED ABOUT THAW YET, SAYS STONE

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 6.—That former Governor William A. Stone is in close touch with Harry Thaw's lawyers in Canada was shown when Mr. Stone was informed by a reporter that Superior Justice Gervais had issued a writ of habeas corpus for the production of Thaw in Montreal.

"Did I not say a few days ago that Thaw would not leave Canada as soon as the New York authorities were saying he would " asked Mr. Stone. "It seems to me that Mr. Jerome and his assistants have been most premature in their claims.

"We have not played out our hand by a long way. Some people are very likely to be badly fooled before Thaw crosses the border, and he may not cross before the snow flies, if then.

Dwells in Impersonal Manner on Self Examination at Secret Hearing.

COATICOOK, Que., Sept. 6.—Harry K. Thaw's own story of his secret examination before the board of inquiry here which considered his deportation and his status in Canada was written for the Boston AMERICAN by Thaw himself. It appears just as he wrote it, and follows:

"Thaw was closely questioned as to his movements from the moment he bought a ticket and entered the Maine Central train at Rochester, N. H., going in the direction of his home in Pittsburgh via Detroit up to the present moment. No doubt of any sort was in anyone's mind that he was on his way home, that for private reasons that do not concern Canada and which were not in evidence he wished to go around New York, and that he was going the quickest way by land close to Detroit, Toledo and Pittsburgh, and therefore he had a right to travel on under Section 2, Article 4, of the immigration law.

"At Rochester, N. H., Thaw supposed, and this was not questioned by the board, that the quickest way was by Whitefield, so bought a ticket here. On the train while going through Crawford Notch above Conway, N. H., he talked with persons on train who told him that to go to Whitefield he must change trains at Polyans and that he would get further on his way by keeping on in the train he was on, consequently he bought ticket for Colebrook and later for Beecher Falls, as two persons, one the under sheriff, Mr. Keiey of Coos County, N. H., whom he told his name and his wish to reach Detroit the quickest way, and his way home, informed him that the train stopped at Beecher Falls and he could go no further on the train. But he could drive over to Coaticook and get a train for Detroit.

Supper at Beecher Falls.

"Therefore, he took supper at Beecher Falls, asking an acquaintance to hire a rig, and after supper started for Coaticook.

"Here Thaw's testimony joined with first witness for New York State so we may follow that witness, Johnson, the driver.

"Confessions in Johnson's direct testimony were corrected by Johnson himself in cross-examination, so we will give his final story.

"Johnson testified that some man employed him to take a drive, etc., which did not prove Thaw. He testified that three men entered the wagon shortly it had been shown that Mr. Thompson was with Thaw, the other was on the train. To Thaw's surprise, however, this was neither here nor there and was immaterial. Johnson testified that after going a short distance Thaw had changed places with one of the others and sat beside him. That Thaw once asked if Coaticook was nearer Derby station in Canada and how to get there. That Johnson explained that Barford was as far as Thaw could go that night, that he and the others would find a hotel there and could get to Coaticook the next morning.

"Thaw asked Johnson how much it would cost for him to drive the others and Johnson said he had not been told he was to go to Barford and could not because his horses had had a long drive to the headwaters of the Connecticut river during the day. Thaw then agreed that it would be wrong to drive the miles of hilly road to Barford and then back to Beecher Falls, but asked Johnson if he could drive there and put the horses up for the night.

Calls Johnson Honest.

"Johnson replied that there was no one to take care of his stable and he had to go back.

"Johnson, although testifying for New York State, honestly told all this, which corroborated word for word what Thaw had previously testified. It is enlightening days after occurrence, too.

"Thaw told Johnson that of the only one part of Johnson's testimony which, though unimportant, stood out as the truth in his entire statement until Johnson left withdrew it. He had testified at first omitting the facts that he had told Thaw he will That the horses had been driven many miles during the day and that his stable needed his attention and at first had said though not positively that he thought it strange, now since later gave the reasons should we not expect his one false statement.

"Is it not evident that some crooked person in quizzing Johnson for the un-democratic attorney-general of New York State had learned that Thaw's visit to Johnson could not drive Thaw all the way to Barford, and then this crooked agent may have said, Didn't you think it strange? to which Johnson may have assented in a mild way; then is it not probable that said crooked agent worried poor Johnson into saying that that was the reason he did not drive to Barford.

"Before the commission, Johnson took back the falsehood and told the truth, also telling how, as his horses were too tired, he sent a friend of his to drive Thaw towards Coaticook.

"Then came an important part of Johnson's testimony and one only amusing or curious part.

Told to Drive Slowly.

"Johnson in closing testified that Thaw and he conversed about Canadian customs, and as Johnson had told Thaw how they would pass a custom house on the Canadian line. Thaw had asked whether they should not stop, and John son said no, that a certain man, his wife out baggage did not stop.

"So Thaw said: 'All right, but drive pass slowly so they can stop us if they wish' ate we were smuggling nothing.

"So they drove past in full sight. Johnson said it was 8 o'clock, but it was 8 o'clock further on, and before 8 passing the customs house August 18, with sufficient daylight to see all around, though it had been a question of seeing the carriage two miles, it was not bright enough. , However, they drove past within a few feet of it.

"Here the funny part come in. This ending was not a combined United States and Canadian custom house, but two buildings together, one on each side of the line. Johnson had always supposed it was a custom house, and had told Thaw so. Mr. S., of Thaw's counsel, at first suggested that Johnson had deceived Thaw, but this is unfair to counsel all around, including Mr. S., for Johnson was honestly mistaken and told Thaw in good faith, and Thaw had told the carriage driven past the supposed custom house in perfect good faith.

"Johnson testified that they had taken the main public highways every foot of the way and that anyone could have got over the border unnoticed by going over any way except along main public highways, as Thaw did.

"Johnson told how he drove to the house of Mr. Nadeau, who agreed to get a rig and take Thaw and the other two on to Coaticook, though got up by the other side, on every word corroborated by Thaw.

Was Not Contradicted.

"Mr. Nadeau testified how he had been engaged to take Thaw on to Barford and how Thaw asked about how to get to railroad at Coaticook, corroborating Thaw word for word.

"Johnson, although testifying for New York State, honestly told all this, which corroborated word for word what Thaw had previously testified. It is enlightening days after occurrence, too.

"Thaw told Johnson that of the only one part of Johnson's testimony which, though unimportant, stood out as the truth in his entire statement until Johnson left withdrew it. He had testified at first omitting the facts that he had told Thaw he will That the horses had been driven many miles during the day and that his stable needed his attention and at first had said though not positively that he thought it strange, now since later gave the reasons should we not expect his one false statement.

"Is it not evident that some crooked person in quizzing Johnson for the un-democratic attorney-general of New York State had learned that Thaw's visit to Johnson could not drive Thaw all the way to Barford, and then this crooked agent may have said, Didn't you think it strange? to which Johnson may have assented in a mild way; then is it not probable that said crooked agent worried poor Johnson into saying that that was the reason he did not drive to Barford.

"Before the commission, Johnson took back the falsehood and told the truth, also telling how, as his horses were too tired, he sent a friend of his to drive Thaw towards Coaticook.

"Then came an important part of Johnson's testimony and one only amusing or curious part.

Told to Drive Slowly.

"Johnson in closing testified that Thaw and he conversed about Canadian customs, and as Johnson had told Thaw how they would pass a custom house on the Canadian line. Thaw had asked whether they should not stop, and John son said no, that a certain man, his wife out baggage did not stop.

"So Thaw said: 'All right, but drive pass slowly so they can stop us if they wish' ate we were smuggling nothing.

"So they drove past in full sight. Johnson said it was 8 o'clock, but it was 8 o'clock further on, and before 8 passing the customs house August 18, with sufficient daylight to see all around, though it had been a question of seeing the carriage two miles, it was not bright enough. , However, they drove past within a few feet of it.

"Here the funny part come in. This ending was not a combined United States and Canadian custom house, but two buildings together, one on each side of the line. Johnson had always supposed it was a custom house, and had told Thaw so. Mr. S., of Thaw's counsel, at first suggested that Johnson had deceived Thaw, but this is unfair to counsel all around, including Mr. S., for Johnson was honestly mistaken and told Thaw in good faith, and Thaw had told the carriage driven past the supposed custom house in perfect good faith.

"The line Johnson had always supposed it was a custom house, and had told Thaw so. Mr. S., of Thaw's counsel, at first suggested that Johnson had deceived Thaw, but this is unfair to counsel all around, including Mr. S., for Johnson was honestly mistaken and told Thaw in good faith, and Thaw had told the carriage driven past the supposed custom house in perfect good faith.

"Johnson testified that they had taken the main public highways every foot of the way and that anyone could have got over the border unnoticed by going over any way except along main public highways, as Thaw did.

"Johnson told how he drove to the house of Mr. Nadeau, who agreed to get a rig and take Thaw and the other two on to Coaticook, though got up by the other side, on every word corroborated by Thaw.

Was Not Contradicted.

"Mr. Nadeau testified how he had been engaged to take Thaw on to Barford and how Thaw asked about how to get to railroad at Coaticook, corroborating Thaw word for word.

"Mr. Nadeau testified how Thaw had reached his hotel at Barford late at night and gone to bed. How in the morning he had come down and seen Thaw with Policeman Boudreau and heard Thaw say he would go in Policeman Boudreau's motor and was glad to, as he was going in the right direction as Coaticook, exactly in accord with Thaw's intention and exactly corroborating Thaw's testimony. Thaw's counsel and many witnesses, but witnesses of opposition having given no contradiction to a word Thaw said and such to full extent of his knowledge, having corroborated Thaw, the fact that Thaw was a traveller safeguarded by Section 2, Article 4, of Canadian immigration law, was proved without any question except orders from above or influence of Deputy Minister Nicoll, Kennedy, Jerome or Carmody.

CANADIAN OFFICIALS FEAR PEOPLE WILL RESCUE THAW

By F. J. McISAAC.

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Sept. 6.—"Hail to the Chief, who in triumph advances," played the Coaticook band last night under the jail window of Harry Thaw.

"Where is Jerome?"

"Jumped his bail."

"Where is Thaw?"

"Safe in the hearts of Canadians."

"Now, what do you know about this?" demanded Harry K. Thaw of the reporters, as he drew on the cigar pending Coaticookers. "Ain't these people all right? I consider what they would do to Jerome, if they could get their hands on him."

Coaticook is mad over Thaw. The news that a writ of habeas corpus had saved him from deportation drove them frantic and they gathered Friday night with the town brass band to bid him farewell, thinking he would depart immediately for Montreal. But the immigration officials were prudent.

They couldn't take him out in the face of the crowd and they didn't move Thaw because a mob collected at every train hour and the mob was ugly, gerous.

The immigration officers are only half a dozen strong. They are afraid of a rescue. They know that if Thaw gets out of their hands every man and woman in the eastern townships will help protect him.

"If it is true that Thaw has gunmen here and is willing to take his chances of escaping, this is a wonderful opportunity for him," said one of the immigration men today. "If he ever gets into the crowd we shall not be responsible.

"We must watch our chance to get him away from here, and we can't say what train or day we shall select for our departure."

Coaticook is a fairly large town. It contains 3,000 people, several hotels and numerous business buildings. It is very pretty, and resembles any New England town.

But no New England town would ever take such puritan slides as Coaticook has done. Both the French and English population are a unit for Thaw and they openly declare that if they could get him they would see that the authorities did not get him back.

Authorities Fear Thaw.

The town authorities are also pro-Thaw. Old Judge McKee was very stern this morning when he called for Wilfrid Travers Jerome and that person did not respond.

"This is an extremely serious offence!" exclaimed the judge, and his sternness ironed the grins off the faces of the New Yorkers present, who regarded the Jerome arrest as a joke. "If, as is charged, this man played cards for money in an auto in full view of school children, young girls and others, it is an offence meriting severe punishment. You will see that Mr. Jerome turns up on September 11 for this hearing."

Now all the things the judge mentioned Jerome did. He admits his guilt, and this is what he is up against, either he must be barred from Canada as a bail jumper, or he will come back for trial and get convicted.

The local authorities mean business, and if a Coaticook jury ever gets him, or a Sherbrooke jury either, he will get the limit of the law.

Some people of Coaticook are disappointed that Jerome got out of jail. The wife of a prominent man came to the quaint little prison with a bouquet for the prisoner. The bouquet consisted of carrots and onions. She was much disappointed to find that he had been released.

If the Thaw lawyers hadn't put up the money for Jerome's bail he would be there yet. Nobody in Coaticook could have moved a finger to release him. That's Coaticook.

Thaw Admires Town.

Harry Thaw naturally admires the town.

"Tell the people of this city that I appreciate the stand they have taken for public morals. Gambling is a serious matter. It is subversive of character. Jerome's arrest will have a good effect upon the good people and especially the children to see this man who ought to be setting a good example as he once professed to have others punished for gambling offences, breaking the law. And then this good men has jumped his bail, as I am told. Can you blame me for endeavoring to escape from Matteawan when such a man was responsible for my incarceration?"

Whenever he wants diversion he looks out of the window upon the station platform, where there are sure to be pretty girls waving handkerchiefs at him and throwing kisses at him.

Yesterday a reporter received a telegram from his paper, asking if Thaw had not been spirited away from Coaticook. A message was sent up that he look out. He immediately compiled, and his appearance started a demonstration that lasted several minutes.

There at evening time came the town band, whose players had been released from their various labors. Some were in uniform and some were not, as they had volunteered their services. The music rendered would not have pleased a symphony audience, but it made a hit with with Harry Thaw, who appeared at his window and smiled joyfully.

Attorney Shurtleff, for Thaw, stated that no writ of habeas corpus can be made until September 15, as Harry does not mind being locked up for a few days more.

"But," he continued, "we expect to have him out and he will live comfortably in a Montreal hotel during the proceedings before the King's bench there."

78, ELOPES FOR LOVE OF WIDOW

Superintendent Riley of Wayfarers' Lodge Takes Third Bride in Somerville.

That a seventy-eight-year-old man may elope with a fifty-five-year-old widow and do it all for love, without the knowledge or consent of his family, is borne out by the marriage of Edward Riley, three times a benedict, to Mrs. Elizabeth McGrath, a comely widow of No. 10 Cross street place, Somerville, which became known last night.

Mr. Riley lives at No. 247 Bunker Hill avenue, Charlestown, and is superintendent of the Wayfarers' Lodge on Hawkins street. This marriage came as a great surprise to his children, as they thought that "Pa" Riley had been enough married at his time of life. Last night a member of Mr. Riley's household said:

"We were thunderstruck at the news of Mr. Riley's third marriage. It was a sure enough elopement, all right.

"About a year ago Mr. Riley took out a license to marry Mrs. McGrath and, after getting ready for the wedding on a Sunday night, he set out to be married.

"Along in the evening he came back—but minus the bride! 'Where's the bride?' we all asked him. He smiled sheepishly and put us off by saying, 'Oh, it was only a joke.'

"Mr. Riley is going to live at his new wife's home, in Somerville. They are both pretty well off, and I cannot see any reason for their marrying each other unless they loved each other.

Society Revelers Climb in Windows

Only Way Ardent "Trotters" Could Get Into Club.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 6.—The liveliest whirl that the smart contingent has indulged in for years took place following a subscription ball at the Malvern—when the turkey-trotters still wanted to trot.

When the time came for turning out the lights in the Malvern ball room—and Proprietor Brob insisted the rule must be obeyed—Edgar Scott invited the whole bunch over to his "trotterz," the Swimming Club.

The revelers had to climb in the windows, but they got in, the ladies being judiciously aided by the men in negotiating the high places.

Too Much 'Trot' for Bar Harbor Dames

Several Withdraw from Swimming Club Because of It.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 6.—Several of the more conservative members of the Swimming Club—such as Mrs. John S. Kennedy, Mrs. John L. Kane, Mrs. S. W. Bridgham and others—have withdrawn rather than have so much turkey trot music and turkey trotting at the morning gatherings.

Their subscriptions being lost, the club treasury showed a gap that is being filled by emergency subscription.

Mrs. Dreyfus Promises to Make People Gasp

No more foreign husbands for mine. If I should ever get a divorce and marry again, the next one would either be an American or an Irishman—Mrs. Dreyfus.

Couldn't Talk French, Thought Her Glum

Shattered Romance of Hotel Owner's Son to Be Aired in Court.

Boston's "Affaire Dreyfus" gives prospect of lively court disclosures.

Mrs. Louise D. Dreyfus, who eloped with Edmund, son of the House of Dreyfus nine years ago, and who has just filed suit for separate maintenance, said yesterday that when she gets in court she will "make people gasp."

"The public may expect some startling disclosures—I have some in my body to show the cruelty I have endured—I wasn't used to being treated the way that Frenchmen treat their wives—no more foreign husbands for mine."

The Boston case involves domestic issues only, but it threatens the reputation that men of the French nation have borne for utmost gallantry, according to Mrs. Dreyfus.

"My husband made a regular slave of me," she says. "I was housekeeper, chambermaid, linen-woman, dish-washer and cashier, all in one, at the hotel."

Complains of "Pride."

The Dreyfus "family pride" is another thing of which Mrs. Dreyfus complains. She accuses her husband's people of being so proud because they are "pure French," that they "hate an American in the family."

Every detail in the Dreyfus case will be eagerly followed by Bostonians. They are interested, in the first place, on account of the prominence of the House of Dreyfus in this city, with its hotel, The Dreyfus, on Beach street, and another hotel in Providence. The House of Dreyfus for years has catered to society people, men about town, actors, circus favorites and the Bohemian contingent generally.

A second interest in this case is the news of the wreck of a romance which led to elopement and marriage nine years ago. At that time Edmund Dreyfus was only nineteen years old.

Among his friends was Miss Louise D. Weld of Jamaica Plain, who had been married, then divorced, with the right to resume her maiden name. She was twenty-eight years old.

Eloped with Miss Weld.

Edmund Dreyfus and Miss Weld eloped to Providence in July, 1904, were married there, continued to New York, were forgiven by Dreyfus Pere and returned to Boston.

The first of this year Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Dreyfus left here to take charge of the Dreyfus establishment in Providence. It was only March 22, so Mrs. Dreyfus says in her petition, that she was forcibly ejected from the Providence place.

Now Mrs. Dreyfus has filed her action for separate support. She is dividing her time between the homes of her brother, Albert Weld of the Back Bay and of her sister in Winthrop.

Her two matrimonial experiences have made Mrs. Dreyfus bitter against Dan Cupid. She said yesterday:

"No, I wouldn't marry the best man living after my experience with two husbands that I have lived with, not if his clothes were lined with diamonds and money. I have been through torment during the last eight years and I never want any woman to see the kind of a life that I have led as a member of the Dreyfus family.

"I have scars on my body to show the cruelty that I have endured as that man's wife. Look at this one on my thumb; note is where he threw a fork at me and it stuck there. I remember now how it bled. But that's nothing.

Says He Threw Things

They would talk and talk in French and of course I couldn't understand a word of it. I would sit still and say nothing while I ate; until finally my husband would throw things at me because I seemed glum and morose.

When we went to take charge of the Providence House he made a regular slave of me. I was housekeeper, chambermaid, linen woman, dish washer and cashier—all in one. He made me work from sixteen to eighteen hours a day and I soon became a nervous wreck. As a result of his treatment of me I contracted a weak heart, and it is really a wonder that I am alive.

Wait until I take the stand in court. The things that I can tell will make people gasp.

"He still wants me to come back and live with him after the way he has treated me! I don't believe that I ever shall, though I have had enough of married life for a while.

"If it were not for his family with their aristocratic notions we might have gotten along very well. The Dreyfuses are very proud of the fact that they are 'pure French' and they hate an American in the family. Therefore it was very hard for me to get along with them, and they did not make it any easier for me than they could possibly help."

If I am not granted separate maintenance, as I desire, I may feel compelled to sue for a divorce. Upon this latter course, however, I am not yet decided.

No more foreign husbands for mine, however. Two are more than enough. If I should ever get a divorce and marry again the next one would either be an American or an Irishman.

Cyanide Charm for Quick Death in Wreck

Mrs. Clair McMillan Carries Deadly Poison in Bracelet.

A simple, harmless looking yet sinister little gold bracelet, that circled her wrist is declared by Mrs. Clair McMillan, formerly wife of Governor Oddie of Nevada and a cousin of ex-Speaker Joseph Cannon, to have wrought the potent spell that enabled her to escape without a scratch in the terrible New Haven train wreck at Wallingford, Ct.

"The bracelet is charmed," declared Mrs. McMillan. "It contains a secret. I call it my "cyanide" safety, for inside is a tiny capsule of cyanide of potassium. I have made up my mind that if I am ever injured seriously in an accident I shall take a dose of cyanide and end the pain. Anyway I shall never go on a journey without it."

Next Season's Prospects Already Being Considered.

NEWPORT, Sept. 6.—Those who look ahead to society for next year and the year after are calling attention to a bevy of delightful young girls, all with prospects of wealth, who will be launched next year. Just now they are modestly unobtrusive, but they are extremely pretty girls and give promise of great beauty as well as riches.

Only Way Left, Though Pretty Girls Now Carry in Some.

KENNEBUNK, Me., Sept. 6.—Aeroplanes will be used next by Maine saloon keepers to get a supply of liquor into the State now that the automobiles and power boats have not proven wholly satisfactory. In the belief of the Rev. William F. Berry of Waterville, superintendent of the Maine Civic League, who has been through the eastern part of the State studying conditions.

Since the Welch law went into effect it had been quite a problem for the rum sellers to get their $1.10 brand of whiskey into the old Pine Tree State, where the prohibitory law has been in force more than half a century. In fact the dealers acknowledge that they are at their wits' end to get enough liquor to supply the demand since the automobiles have been pounded up and the power boats went on the rocks off Portland.

Lately pretty young girls have been enlisted to go to New Hampshire after the liquor by the pocket venders. The lads, they are "certainly good looking, start out with a couple of dress suit cases. They go to Dover, Kelton Falls or Portsmouth, get a supply of whiskey of the $1 a gallon brand, and return to Fairview villa. "Bo Bo" is

CAPTURE REVEALS JEKYLL-HYDE LIFE

Burglar Who Cashed Loot in Boston Taken in Missouri, Admits Dual Career.

The strange story of a dual career—a Jekyll and Hyde tale in real life—was revealed last night by the arrest of Joseph C. Cowen at St. Josephs, Mo., his confession to robbing scores of Greater Boston homes and the subsequent raiding of his cache, containing $5,000 worth of looted loot, under a historic barn in Brighton.

By day Cowen was a hard-working, steady going young man, a loving husband and a proud father of a six-months-old baby girl. By night, according to his confession, the other side of his character was revealed. He became a masked burglar, looting homes and carrying away thousands of dollars' worth of stolen treasures. The next morning he was again the trustworthy employe of a Boston paper filling some gap.

The burglar's young wife, with her tiny baby in her arms, heard the report of her husband's confession at the home of her parents, No. 344 Market street, Brighton—the house in front of the barn where the cache was found. At first she would not believe it. Then she realized that often her husband went out at night before he went West. She broke down and cried.

The loot was contained in five valises, buried five feet in the barn cellar early Monday it will be on exhibition for identification. Already the following have been identified:

$600 worth of silver and gold pieces, belonging to Charles Clements of Brighton, whose home was robbed December 22.

A valuable silver card case, stolen among other things, from the home of Mrs. Arthur P. Bonney of Crowninshield road, Brookline.

Several hundred dollars' worth of silverware, belonging to Mrs. Herbert Babbitt of No. 15 Harvard avenue, Brighton, whose home was robbed December 28.

Mother Didn't Know Baby in Health

Overjoyed When Assured Floating Hospital Child Was Her Own.

A tired little mother, who had left her sick baby with the ship's surgeon that it might be cured while she sought work was shown her little one.

"That's not my baby, you have made some mistake," said the mother looking down at the infant held in the arms of Dr. Robert Hunt. "Why, my little girl is thin and ill."

The good physician tried to assure her but the mother was still skeptical.

"She has a birthmark on her shoulder," said the mother.

Writs Out to Stop Tenderloin Dramas

Harrises and Shubert Must Answer to Protests Against Plays.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—In an effort to prevent further performances of the Tenderloin drama "The Lure" and "The Fight," the Police Department today succeeded in having summonses issued for William and Irene Harris, proprietors of the Hudson Theatre, where "The Fight" is playing, and for Lee Shubert, manager of the Maxine Elliott Theatre, where "The Lure" is being played.

This action was taken following a report submitted to Police Commissioner Waldo by two officers he sent to review the plays which have evoked a storm of protest from people in the city and which have been generally condemned as having bad influence on the audience. The proprietors of both plays indignantly deny that their dramas are immoral.

Protest Mormon Exhibit at Fair

Denounce Lending of Government's Favor to Sect.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Vigorous and emphatic protests have been received by the Massachusetts members of Congress against the proposal to have the Mormon Church represented at the Panama Pacific Exposition by an exhibit under government auspices. The activity of the Mormon elders in Massachusetts and the campaign of proselyting which has been in progress for months, has been the subject of many protests from clergymen of other denominations. Senator Lodge, senior member of Utah, who is one of the most powerful members of the upper branch, is understood to be alert to safeguard and protect the interests of the disciples of Brigham Young, and it is understood that he will strenuously oppose any plans to thwart the Mormons from an official exhibit.

Miss Evelyn Burden Waxes Eloquent at Bailey's Beach.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 6.—"Kick my dog!" I guess not. You may think you can run Newport, Mr. Taylor, but I can't and allow you to manage my pet dog."

That is what Miss Evelyn Burden is reported to have said to the multimillionaire, Henry A. C. Taylor, when he is said to have attempted to get the pet dog out of the way on the steps at Bailey's Beach the other noon.

Mr. Taylor declares that all dogs are a nuisance and ought to be either muzzled or impounded.

Uriel Davis Names Misses Capperton, Sands and Cassatt.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 6.—Uriel Davis, inventor and teacher to the elect of Newport, Washington, London and New York of the "Horse Trot," "Toe Walk," "Dream Tango" and other fascinating dances, declares that Miss Elsie Sands, Miss Marguerite Capperton and Miss Iris Cassatt are the three best exponents of the modern steps in the Newport Colony.

The last word in the way of "dance" Mr. Davis calls "The Grape Juice Waltz." "It is free from vulgarity," says Mr. Davis, and he points out that President Wilson's daughters were among the first to take it up.

HOT SPRINGS WILL REBUILD AT ONCE

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 6.—Out of the ashes of residences, factories and power plants worth close to $12,000,000—which were swept away in the conflagration that for six hours scourged the city—will rise within a week the first timbers of new structures to replace the old.

Governor George W. Hays has already taken charge of the work of providing for the 2,000 homeless. Mayor McCleskin has closed all saloons, sworn in 250 special officers and called a mass meeting of citizens.

General Manager Dillon of the Public Utilities Commission has announced that a temporary light and power service will be established within thirty days. Within three months, he said, the plants will be running to capacity again.

ENGINEER DID WORK OF TWO FOR WEEK BEFORE THE WRECK

fore the meeting of the full board of directors at their meeting September 19, and that he did not anticipate any difficulty in filling the office of head agent. He felt certain that the report was untrue that Morgan & Co. had already drafted a new tentative contract and would submit it to the directors.

He said the Northern Pacific and all roads that he knew of had the seniority rule, coupled with the rule of common sense, but he declined absolutely to be entertained concerning the operation of the seniority rule on the New Haven road or upon any other topics not covered his statement.

He did, however, pick up from his desk a newspaper clipping, which he read, to the effect that English roads had served notice on the British government that because of the increase in wages they were losing money carrying the mails, and would demand more money.

President Elliott and Vice-President G. W. Buckland explained that in this country the railroads have to standing in court and must accept what payment the government wishes to make, though the New Haven road loses $250,000 a year carrying the mails. Congress does not compel the roads to transport the mails, but the roads as a matter of policy must do so and then the government specifies that the mails must be carried in special steel cars and various other provisions that cost money.

Mr. Elliott then gave out his statement as follows:

Mr. Elliott's Statement.

I wish that I had been here long enough to be able to make a comprehensive statement that would be of more value and of greater public interest than anything I can say today.

As is well known, I took up my duties as president of the company on Tuesday morning, the day of the shocking disaster near Wallingford.

I received the first news of it at 7:30, while at breakfast. Since then my time and attention have been occupied almost entirely with the other officers of the company in studying that situation and in considering every phase of it.

I have therefore had no time to look over any part of the railroad or to consider many questions that are of vital interest and importance to the employes, to the public and to the company.

One thing, however, has already been arranged for, and that is closer supervision of the operations of that part of the railroad known as the Shore Line division, which now extends from New York to New London and from New Haven to Springfield and from New Haven to Shelburne Falls and Turners Falls, including several branches.

Operative In Fortnight.

This territory will be divided into two operating divisions—the new arrangement to become effective as soon as certain details of the organization can be worked out which it is hoped will be in the next fortnight.

We believe that by this arrangement the divisional officers will be able to get closer to the men, explain the rules more clearly, encourage the men, and watch all of the conditions and in that way make all operations safer.

As rapidly as a close study of the situation will permit, arrangements for closer supervision on other parts of the road will be arranged for if it seems necessary.

In doing this it will be the policy of the company to use men now in the service wherever possible and to help and encourage them and the employes in every way to do the good work that I believe they are capable of doing.

Rush Orders Promised.

Mr. Runnells, the president, and Mr. Dean, the vice-president of the Pullman company, are personal, as well as official friends of mine.

I have explained to them the importance of the situation, and Mr. Dean, speaking for himself and for Mr. Runnells, states that prior to January 1, the Pullman company expects to furnish enough all-steel sleeping cars or sleeping cars with steel underframes, in order that all sleeping cars running over New Haven rails will be of this type.

Mr. Dean assures me that the Pullman company is just as anxious as is the New Haven management to hurry this work in every reasonable way.

Steps have already been taken to hurry the car builders who now have contracts for furnishing steel cars for the company.

Steps are also being taken to prepare specifications for other cars.

Steel equipment already contracted for will cost approximately $3,730,000, and there is also a contract which was made November 15, 1912, for 100 steel passenger train cars a year for five years, and for 400 cars not included in previous statements; that means also $6,500,000 more.

Order No More Wooden Cars.

Since October 17, 1912, no cars for use in passenger trains have been ordered other than of steel, except some cars for carrying milk, which have heavy steel underframes, and are as strong as any of the all-steel cars.

On hearing about the wreck, I at once asked about the signals on that part of the line, and found that new signals were being installed.

It appeared, however, that formal authority had not been given to the officers to do this, and I at once gave this with instructions to hurry the work.

My action was approved by the executive committee of the company on Friday, September 5, when they voted $265,000 for the improved signal system between New Haven and Springfield and confirmed the resolution of October 17, 1912.

Just as soon as proper reports and investigations can be made of signals upon other parts of the road steps will be taken to make them right if they are not now right.

Here again, however, the work must of necessity be slow, because it takes time to make proper plans for signals and to obtain material from the manufacturers.

These large expenditures for steel equipment and for signals, to say nothing of the many other improvements like stronger bridges for carrying the heavier engines that are needed to haul the cars now and of the innumerable additions and betterments that are needed all the time upon the various parts of the road, mean the furnishing of great sums of money.

Money Needed Immediately.

The company is now asking permission from the public authorities to issue certain debenture bonds for the purpose of financing itself, and it hopes to obtain that permission, and in that way receive $67,552,000 which will be used to pay off notes and bonds falling due within the next few months of $46,025,750 leaving the balance of $21,526,250 for the class of expenditures mentioned.

If it cannot get the money it cannot do the work, so that it would appear to be to the interest of the public as much as the interest of the railroad to have the proposed plan go through promptly, even if some should disagree on the question of what is the best way to raise the money.

That is a question of judgment, and the directors in making up their plan, and what they think will be safest and wisest at the time in trying to protect the present and future of the property.

As you know, Morris McDonald is president of the Boston & Maine and Maine Central roads. He and his organization will devote their entire time and attention to managing, operating and developing those properties.

When the by-laws of the New Haven road are changed, Mr. Hustis will become president of that property and make it what it should be—the best and safest railroad in the United States.

New Head for the Ontario.

I have recommended to the board of directors of the New York, Ontario & Western that they select a man for president of that road so that he and his staff may devote their entire time and attention to that property.

As chairman, I shall do all I can to help by suggestion, consultation, personal inspection and co-operation with the officers and men.

The important part, however, is that each organization will have only its own affairs to look after; will be responsible to the public, will spend considerable time on the road, and will be able to decide promptly all questions promptly and, in consequence, give closer supervision to all details, get closer to the men, and thus gradually give better and safer service to the public and help to build up the business of the country and consequently of the railroad.

Later on, when the subject can be reached, the question of handling other properties in which the New Haven road may be interested, will be taken up, but the most important matter now is the New Haven, and to that Mr. Hustis will devote all of his time, and I will give the my attention of mine for the present.

BLAME MORGAN RULE FOR RAILWAY WRECKS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Commissioner Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who conducted the recent investigation in the finances and operations of the road, commenting today on the withdrawal of J. P. Morgan & Co. as fiscal agents of the road, said:

"This, to my mind, is a good thing for the New Haven. Some day, perhaps, we shall have a law which will prevent banking houses mixing up with the affairs of a railroad company as Morgan & Co. mixed up with the New Haven. Nobody ever will know how much the bankers have milked out of the road in the past ten years. Having milked it they now retire. I do not know what the object is.

"This does not necessarily mean a receivership. The New Haven is a great property, and its securities at the bottom are valuable. I would as soon think that somebody wants to depress the price of New Haven securities, in order to buy a lot of them at a low figure, as anything."

Members of Congress today accused J. P. Morgan & Co. of being responsible for the New Haven disasters and of contemplating the financial ruin of the road through withdrawing their financial aid at a critical time. Senator Norris of Nebraska, an able student of big business and high finance in the upper house, intimated that the banking firm was playing for the complete control of the New Haven system by depressing its securities and its final purchase. He said:

"The possibility suggests itself that the Morgan and the Rockefeller interests see a good opportunity to wreck the road. It may be that with the Morgan support withdrawn the New Haven may be forced into a receivership and sold, perhaps, at a bargain price to the Morgans."

Senator Thomas of Colorado laid blame for the frequent disasters of the New Haven directly on the shoulders of J. P. Morgan & Co.

"It has long been a notorious and disgraceful fact that Morgan & Co. are directly responsible for the horrible condition of the New Haven Railroad Company's affairs," he said.

"As directors of its management, this firm has increased the company's obligations from about $60,000,000 to $300,000,000. As bankers this firm has under written these increases—that is to say, it has bought them from the company at its own price and sold them to the public at its own price, pocketing millions in the transactions.

"All the resources of the company have gone to meet fixed charges of the company, enormously increased, leaving nothing for the purchase of proper equipment and efficiency of management.

"Now that the orange has been picked dry, this firm retires from further identification with its management with the impression, perhaps, that the ordinary of the colliding trains may be indicted as the persons solely responsible for it.

"Hyenas flee from their feast of the corpses under similar circumstances, but unfortunately for themselves they have no genius for collecting scapegoats."

PROTECTIVE BOARD OF STOCKHOLDERS OF NEW HAVEN TO MEET

The protective committee of New Haven Railroad stockholders, of which George von L. Meyer is chairman, will meet in Boston tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock to discuss two important considerations.

One is the ninety-day notice given by J. P. Morgan & Co. to cease their contract as fiscal agents of the New Haven. The other matter is that representatives of the stockholders' committee to send to the hearing before the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission on the big New Haven deficiency issue.

Mr. Meyer said over the telephone from Hamilton last night that he could not, without more time for thought, venture an opinion on the Morgan contract matter. Nor would he say whether he thinks the road can fare just as well without Morgan or any other fiscal agent, by marketing its stock and bonds direct.

"After the committee meeting Monday," said Mr. Meyer, "a statement will be given out. But I am not prepared now to discuss the purpose of the meeting."

Mr. Meyer would not say directly that the committee will be at the Public Utilities hearing.

FEDERAL INQUIRY ON RAILROAD SAFETY AS SEQUEL TO WRECK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The House today adopted an amendment to the deficiency bill appropriating $25,000 for an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission of block signal and automatic safety devices on railroads. The amendment was offered by Representative Mann of Illinois, and was inspired by the recent wreck on the New Haven & Hartford road at North Haven, Ct.

ENGINEER TELLS OF OVERWORK AT WRECK INQUIRY

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 6.—Engineer August H. Miller did the work of two men for a week, previous to the morning of Tuesday last, when, with Death, he rode at the throttle of the White Mountain express at North Haven.

Such was his testimony today at the closing session of the joint inquiry of the last New Haven horror—the tragedy of the fall that spelled almost instant death for twenty-one sleeping tourists and terrible injuries for more than fifty others.

Miller was "doubling" for a sick man. He had taken the northbound train to Springfield Monday night. He thought his work was over, but fate had ordered otherwise.

Holiday pleasure seekers and returning vacationists had taxed the railroad to capacity. The regular men for whom Miller had been "doubling" could not get back, and Miller was ordered out again with only a few hours' sleep to guide No. 95 back to Stamford.

"And here we are today," said Miller, as he concluded his testimony before the representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Connecticut Public Utilities Board.

General Manager Bardo of the New Haven was the other principal witness. He was on the stand for hours and among other things admitted that the trainmen had complained some time ago against the boing signals on the Springfield division.

To Commissioner McCleod, Mr. Bardo admitted that steel cars on the Bar Harbor train would have lessened the horror, perhaps have eliminated the terrible death and injury list, as was the case in the Pennsylvania wreck at Calro—similar in almost every detail—except fatalities—to the crash at North Haven.

To McCleod, Mr. Bardo also admitted less danger in great spacing between trains, where several were running in close proximity on the same rail, although he first interposed the objection from managerial experience, he said, that with trains following under 15-minute instead of 8-minute headway, trainmen were prone to run by signals.

Pink Shirt Too Much for the Pier

Tennis Shoes Also Barred at Casino Hops.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Sept. 6.—Men who sacrifice comfort and put on formal evening clothes for the Casino hops are in rebellion. They say the fault of impudent informality was attributed when three men appeared at the same hop, clad respectively thus:

1—Evening clothes and rubber-soled tennis shoes.

2—Dinner coat and pink shirts.

3—White flannels.

The regular dressers say, "Pull evening clothes, or keep out."

TO REPORT ON TRAINS.

Reports relative to petitions of the Harvard Improvement Association of Dorchester for better train service from the Harvard street station will be submitted at the regular monthly meeting of the association on Wednesday evening. The matter is now before the Public Service Commission.

Suffragists Hope to Win Winthrop

Hikers Enjoy Swim Between the Meetings.

If there are any folk in Winthrop who have not accepted the doctrine of equal suffrage, it is not the fault of four energetic suffragists, who, with a hurdy-gurdy drawn by Angelo, a double mule, hiked all the way from New York.

The cause of "Votes for Women" was expounded during two meetings, both held yesterday afternoon on the lawn of the New Winthrop Hotel on Atlantic street, called under the auspices of the Winthrop Equal Suffrage League.

Between meetings the quartet of hikers—the Misses Ida Craft, Elizabeth Freeman, Vera Wentworth and May Mc Keazie—went in bathing.

Autumn Opening

Authoritative Corset Styles

Tomorrow——September Eighth

The Last Word in Dress Fashion

has been heard from Paris and London. Poiret, Redfern, Paquin, and other world-famous designers have perfected their gowns for Fall and Winter. Women have seen and liked. Dress Fashions are settled for the season. You can now buy your corset.

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets—

The Authoritative Styles

can be seen tomorrow in all the stores

Every dress tendency it was possible for the discerning eye to detect, as shown privately at the ateliers of fashion, at the races and the watering resorts, has been studied by the Warner designing counsel and associated fashion experts.

Each season you must be furnished with the proper corset fashion almost before you begin to select your Fall clothes. Therefore, the designers of Warner's Corsets quickly perfected the Warner's Styles in order that every merchant in your city might have

Warner Style First

There is a new Warner Corset for you—authoritative in style, laced back or front as you prefer. But a Warner Corset means more than correct fashion.

It means Fashion, plus Comfort, plus Quality,

Buy Your Corset Early, wear it a few days before you select your dress and model your form into true fashion lines.

WARNER'S BRASSIERES—designed by the designers of Warner's Corsets, as dainty or elaborate as you like, they fit with the same perfection that characterizes Warner's Corsets. A Warner Brassiere for any low bust corset, or to take the place of a corset cover.

John P. Deering of Melrose Dead

John P. Deering of No. 496 Lebanon street, Melrose, president of the Deering Lumber Company and a trustee, director and treasurer in the Melrose Savings, National and Co-operative banks, respectively, died. He was also a trustee of the Melrose Hospital, and was interested in a number of other philanthropic institutions. He leaves a widow and one son, Stephen.

Fish and Game Men to Meet in Boston

Next week will be fish and game week in Boston. Two national organizations will hold conventions—the National Association of Fish and Game Commissioners, Thursday to Sunday, and the American Fisheries Society, Monday to Tuesday. Friday at the same place, Dr. T. S. Palmer, acting chief of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, will give a public hearing on the destruction of migratory birds.

SEWALL, HOTEL MAN, IS FOUND

York, Me., Hotel Proprietor, who Vanished Aug. 21, Located in Boston.

YORK BEACH, Me., Sept. 6.—Arthur E. Sewall, proprietor of the Hastings-Lyman Hotel, who has been missing since August 21, leaving the accounts of the hotel in a badly tangled state, is now at the home of his father at Sewall's Bridge, about five miles from here. Ralph Hawkes, who was appointed to straighten out the affairs of the hotel, found Sewall in Boston, and persuaded him to return to York.

Sewall refuses to talk on what he has been doing since he mysteriously disappeared two weeks ago, and Hawkes will not talk on the matter. Before disappearing, Sewall, who is a Dartmouth College and Harvard Law School graduate, wrote a note to his wife, saying that he was leaving for parts unknown, and friends thought he might have gone to Europe.

Mrs. Sewall, who was Miss Edna Stevens, daughter of Edward F. Stevens, the well known Boston architect, prior to her marriage three years ago, is now at the home of her father in Wellesley Hills, Mass., and has been notified of the return of her husband.

Friends are making every effort to bring the couple together.

Founder of "Follies" at End of His Career

H. C. Pellissier Has Broken Down Completely; Condition Hopeless.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—His numerous friends in America will regret to learn that H. C. Pellissier, the famous founder of the "Follies" entertainment, will delight them no more.

He has completely broken down, and is suffering from the same sort of creeping paralysis which killed Dan Leno, the popular comedian. The doctors say that it is a question of six months or a year; they regard his condition as hopeless.

The "Follies" are to appear at the Coliseum in October, and Mr. Pellissier's brother, who is not unlike him in appearance, will take the chief part.

Free Beebe Driver of Death Charge

Grand Jury Returns "No Bill" on Auto Killing.

The Suffolk Grand Jury, by returning a "no bill" on the charges against Frank H. Smith, chauffeur of J. Arthur Beebe, cleared him of blame for the death of a little boy the chauffeur ran over when he was speeding to Boston with Beebe after Esther Beebe had committed suicide in the Hotel Touraine.

Henry Sobowsky, a boy of ten, ran in front of the speeding machine in Broadway, Chelsea, and was killed.

NORWOOD POLICE GRAFT CHARGED

Town Aroused by Sworn Accusation of Residents of Famous "Flats" Section.

Norwood is stirred as never before by charges of alleged grafting in office by an official of the police department. He is accused, in affidavits, of using his position for pecuniary gain contrary to the statutes and otherwise violating his oath of office.

These affidavits now in possession of counsel for certain citizens, headed by one of the most influential men in the community, will, it is planned, be presented to the district attorney of Norfolk County at the next meeting of the Grand Jury.

Paul Babel of No. 13 Tremont street and Antone Fratesio of No. 25 Dean street are the accusers in the affidavits.

They allege that the police official now under fire dropped two cases for them on payments of $10 and $5 respectively.

Babel, who talks English with but the slightest accent, declares he filed the affidavit on his own initiative. "I grieved me," he said, "to see how my fellow countrymen, who are almost terrified by the sight of policemen, have been bled in the past. My case was as follows:

Arrest for Assault.

"Last Spring my cousin went into a nearby house on Exeter Monday. A man there fell to the street from the second floor later in the night. He was hurt. My cousin was arrested for assault.

"I went to this police official after he telephoned me, and he asked me to go bail for him. He placed it at $1,000. When I said that was too much, he made it $700.

"When I said I guessed I'd consult a lawyer, he said: 'What for; I can do better than that.' At the same time he stretched out his hand.

"'Thank you,' I said, at the same time putting a $10 bill into the hand.

"'Thank you,' he replied, putting the $10 bill into his pocket. I never saw the bill again.

"The following Thursday my brother was discharged, without trouble, and all this after $1,000 bail had been demanded for him.

Hint at Other Charges.

Men who, because of being so situated, must keep their names in the background—for the present—declare they will later willingly come forward and give other proof that they have been persecuted by graft, as they bluntly term it, by the police department.

One charge is that of alleged graft at weddings.

It is said that these Saturday weddings which last over until well into Sunday night, have cost them as much as $40 for police "protection." They declare they do not regret the payment of this money—in a certain sense—if it went to the public treasury. But they declare it is taken by an official who, by statute, is prevented from receiving such money. This official, they allege, collects the money and keeps part of it himself, turning the rest over to the patrolman or patrolmen on duty.

And these self same Sunday weddings have been bitterly scorned in town meetings by different prominent citizens. At the April meeting, George F. Willett, one of the wealthiest and most progressive, as well as popular citizens in Norwood, denounced the laxity of the department in regard to keeping order in "the Flats"—where the foreign element is—on Sundays.

Sunday Selling Condemned.

"You know," said Mr. Willett at the meeting, pointing his finger at a police officer, "that they sell liquor there openly on Sundays. And yet no effort is made to stop it."

No reply from the police was forthcoming, although one of the selectmen did attempt to explain conditions as he saw them.

Members of the police force say they know of the charges, but assert that they will be met when formally presented. It was declared by one official of the department that he had been aware of these charges for some time, but had never taken the trouble to look them up, so sure is he, he said, that they are groundless, and that his conduct will stand full and complete investigation.

Third Wakefield Break in 3 Days

WAKEFIELD, Sept. 6.—The third burglary here within three days was discovered today, when Adelbert L. Murrell returned to his home after an absence of twenty-four hours. The house had been ransacked by burglars. As the Murrells had taken with them their jewelry and other small articles of value, they lost nothing but a few trinkets.

PEABODY TO GIVE PAGEANT.

PEABODY, Sept. 6.—The Peabody Historical Society has completed plans for a historical pageant to be given on the 200th anniversary of the ordination of the first minister of the Old South Church, September 22. Mrs. Arthur F. Poole is a leader in the plans.

OUT 10 YEARS, GETS OLD JOB

After having been out of the Boston Five Department for 10 years Thomas J. Fitzgerald was appointed by the department as lieutenant by the Civil Service Commission, with a salary of $2,000 a year. Edward J. Harrigan has been appointed lieutenant.

The Ever Fascinating Question of Millinery

These Hats are destined to become just as much the rage in Boston as ever before. Many of them are copied from French model Hats, and are thought by those who have seen them to be fully as pretty and elegant as their illustrious originals, which sell at a price which would be prohibitive for many. We are ready to stand back of our claim, and again sell Hats that are worth from $7.00 to $10.00 in all popular effects included, at

And added to a fascinating quantity this season, perhaps more so than in seasons gone by, because there is no set tendency to model, but to gratify those in such a wide diversity of styles as to almost bring bewilderment to a matter of choice for individuals. Hats are to be made of one material, of one solid shade, with the trimmings to a color that absolutely harmonizes, or in the contrasting shades, and so are pleased to submit four striking specimens of our to be worn Hats which sell at

DIGGS-CAMINETTI CASE SHOWS SACRIFICE OF WOMEN MUST END, SAYS AKED

DECLARES GREAT NEW PRINCIPLE OF LAW HAS HAD ITS BAPTISM OF FIRE; "GIRL VICTIMS SUFFERING JUST"

Noted Divine in Remarkable Consideration of San Francisco Trials Asserts Law Is Now Armed Against Men Who Think to Tread Primrose Path of Dalliance at Cost of Woman's Shame

By REV. CHARLES F. AKED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—It is impossible to over-estimate the significance of the Diggs-Caminetti trials.

For all practical purposes these two cases may now be studied as one.

The social position of the two men first called attention to the charges brought against them. But this would only have given notoriety, not importance. The ill-judged action of their friends in trying to stave off an appearance before judge and jury added to the notoriety.

The intervention of the Attorney-General, the fierce daring of Mr. McNab, the United States District Attorney, taking his official life in his hands, and challenging the government of the United States to deal out even-handed justice, even to the son of one of its trusted officers; the painful blunder of the President of the United States; his verbal rebuke to McNab, and his actual compliance with McNab's demand; the debates in Congress that followed—all this gave to what at first looked like a Sacramento elopement, a publicity not limited by the boundaries of this country.

ESSENCE OF CASE IS DEEPER.

Yet, these things are not of the essence of the matter. The importance of the case lies deeper. Perhaps the men or women who made no secret of the absorbing interest which this case possessed could not have explained it so many words the nature of that interest. But all the same, each person was conscious of something vaster than the fate of two vicious young men. It was not they who were on trial. A new great principle of law, a new great principle of order, of life and government had to stand its trial before a jury composed of all the thoughtful, finest persons amongst a population of ninety millions of free men.

The Mann Act, miserably misnamed, "The White Slave Traffic Act," has had its baptism of fire. And the public has learned with amazement that its scope goes far our beyond their dreams of what law and the administration of law can do.

Designed to afford the Federal government power to deal with criminals who fatten upon the flesh and blood of women it—and again by deliberate purpose—was unable to include within its ambit, in which no suggestion of monetary gain or of "white slavery" entered, but which might tend eventually to swell the ranks of women devoted to a shameful life.

The world—our world, the world of the United States—has for some time been prepared to take action against the brutalized creature who panders to vice and by force and fraud holds women to prostitution, making his market out of them.

Startling News.

But the Diggs-Caminetti case told all this great world that law had now armed itself against conduct which, for long ages, both men and women have condoned and stood ready to brand as a party to their iniquity, men who only thought to tread, as man had done before them, the primrose path of dalliance—at the cost of a woman's shame.

The news was really new. It was new news. It was startling news. And our world has watched and waited and carefully read and as carefully thought, and is still making up its mind as to whether the law justified by Congress and the Supreme Court of the United States, shall be justified at the bar of public opinion.

Judge Van Fleet, in his charge, so full, so strong, so clear, has repeated, emphasized his own conviction:

"In my judgment, the law is a good one, and in the interests of public morals and decency."

And again:

"The Mann act is as much for the protection of virtuous women as it is to break up the vile traffic in women."

And that is what the public has learned with such surprise. The public believed that the act was to break up the vile traffic in women.

Prostitution Not Necessary.

Friends of Diggs and Caminetti may protest as they will; the judgment has been previously affirmed by the Supreme Court. And the court yet more supreme, the court of public opinion, the court of national conscience, will confirm the judgment of the lower tribunals.

Prostitution is not a necessity. It is not, as generations have almost fatally called it, a "necessary evil." The sacrifice of women to the passions of men, all but hallowed by the beliefs and practices of thousands of years, has to end.

A new era has dawned, and in this new age conduct which once was thought of as personal and individual, if upon cause to be a crime against society. And society, for its own protection, will treat it as a crime.

It is this conviction, defined or unexpressed, which is demonstrated in a verdict of "guilty" against both Diggs and Caminetti. The feeling in the souls of the earnest men and women throughout the United States who have followed the trials with such eager interest is not one of resentment on behalf of Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

The wrong, it has been seen, or at least felt, is not the sin against those girls lost an undoing on the whole framework of the social order.

These two girls are entitled to very little sympathy except, as one sympathizes on general grounds with every man or woman who goes wrong, as one is sorry for the two men in the case. They are bad girls; "feeble-minded, wicked." And if a law could be passed which women could administer, these girls would suffer severely at their hands. They will suffer. They are suffering. And they ought to suffer.

Blame Partly on Parents

Their parents suffer, and one wonders whether their sufferings will be a warning to other parents in this country. What sort of parental oversight has there been? How does it come about that these girls can easily deceive their fathers and mothers?

What kind of love is it which does not love well enough to be stern, which accords license to wander about at all hours with all sorts of men and go to all sorts of places?

There are mothers and fathers in this city, and in every city in the land, who ought to learn the lesson. And if they will not learn it from the Diggs-Caminetti trials, they may yet have to learn it in bitter, heart-breaking trials of their own.

Why He Asked Mercy.

I have done. During the progress of the trial I carefully refrained from saying one word which might prejudice the defendant. At the end of the Diggs trial I penned an appeal to the judge to temper justice with mercy. I have been rejoiced, on the one hand, because, it was alleged, Diggs was a debauchee, scoundrel, who deserved no mercy, and, on the other, because the case being on the subject, it was contempt of court to seek to influence the judge.

Such critics do not know the meaning of the words they employ. And they know nothing of law and the administration of law. This is not "contempt of court."

Now that the matter is out of the hands of the jury, it is a perfectly proper plea. It is one which would be admitted as proper in every country in the civilized world.

For the reasons which I have given before and for reasons which appeal to some of the best men and women I know of, I made my appeal to Judge Van Fleet.

I submit, with great respect for him, personally, and with great respect for the office which he so worthily fills, that the law be vindicated, and the ends of justice served as effectively by a light sentence as a heavy one—and perhaps better.

Leading figures in California "white slave" trials, which were important because they were the first to be sought under a new, sweeping interpretation of the Mann act. Left to right are Lola Norris, one of the "bungalow girls"; F. Drew Caminetti and Maury I. Diggs, both found guilty, and Marsha Warrington, whose testimony was chiefly instrumental in Caminetti's conviction as well as Diggs'.

Yes. It was agreed that a house would be hired and that we'd all live together.

Q.—Now, the following day, you went from the hotel to the cottage that they had rented? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many bedrooms were there in the cottage? A.—Two.

Q.—How were they occupied? A.—Mr Diggs and I occupied the front bedroom and Mr. Caminetti and Miss Norris the back one.

Q.—Miss Warrington, I am going to ask you were you an expectant mother just before you left on this trip to Reno? A.—Yes.

Q.—And who was responsible for your condition? A.—Mr. Diggs.

Q.—Had you been intimate with other men beside Mr. Diggs? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Why did you deceive your folks and conceal the identity of Mr. Caminetti when he called at your home and you introduced him as Mr. Whitman? A.—I did so at his suggestion; he told me to do so.

Q.—Why did not Mr. Diggs call at your home? A.—I suppose he was afraid of my father.

Q.—Now, Miss Warrington, did the knowledge that Mr. Diggs and Mr. Caminetti were married men make any difference with you? I mean did it prevent you and Miss Norris from going with them?

(The witness here hesitated a long time, and the court admonished her that she would have to answer the question. She finally replied in the negative.)

Q.—Now, as a matter of fact, did you not go to Reno because you wanted to leave Sacramento because of the circumstances then confronting you all? A.—I didn't want to leave Sacramento, but I decided to go after Mr. Diggs and Mr. Caminetti had told us all those things and that we would have to go to avoid arrest.

Q.—You were perfectly conscious of what you were doing then? A.—Of course I was.

Slave Trial Principals Victims of Lack of "Love Life" Lore, Says Mary Austin

By MARY AUSTIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—Those things have been brought out very clearly in the recently concluded trial before the United States District Court under the Mann act.

The first of them is the growing tendency of society to estimate the bearings of the case in terms of its social reactions.

The second is the astonishing numbers of people competently prepared for life at every point except the one which has to do with the conduct of their love life.

And the third, the most pressing, is the need of establishing suitable restraints and penalties to meet similar offences in the future.

It is not alone in expressed public opinion that the new attitude toward such irregularities is demonstrated. In the sort of men chosen for the jury, in the court's interpretation of the law, and especially in the charge to the jury, there is a notable absence of the disposition of men mutually to condone offences peculiar to themselves as men.

Here in the West it is certain that a sufficient number of citizens have grown up and out of this ancient conspiracy of sex to stamp our public ratings of this affair with the impress of social consideration.

Any eologist trailing signs in a community in which such things can happen has been under the compulsion of the spirit in which it has been given. But the other items are still to meet. One of them involves a measure of prevention, the other concerns the question of the cure.

Where Society Erred.

Upon the second, I touched yesterday; it is the extraordinary insufficiency of the knowledge of the principles of human conduct shown by the parties to the case. They knew, of course, that what they did was called wrong, "wicked," but they had not known it to the degree which prevented them doing it, as they could have been prevented by knowledge from exposing themselves to smallpox or the plague. And yet the social consequences of such acts are as certain and as widely known as the consequences of infection.

The knowledge which these young people had did not penetrate to or affect their love life. Here society met a hold itself somewhat to blame.

There is knowledge enough in the world as to the nature of the responsibilities that are tied up with living, and of the effects of the wrong love relation, to safeguard all the young people of the world, if we could only get it to them. And it is our duty to get it to them. They have as truly a right to instruction in the proper conduct of their love life as to a knowledge of physics and geometry.

I want to emphasize the difference I make in the use of the terms "sex" and "love life." Sex is not big enough, as it is generally understood to embrace all the social and personal relations and obligations that grow out of living.

One of the first things a writer of fiction learns is the extraordinary ignorance of the majority of people of human exigencies outside of their own experience.

Old Way Unsatisfactory.

For this reason alone, the old way of living instruction in the important issues of life by the parents has not proved satisfactory. In many cases the parents do not know how to help their children meet crises they have not themselves met. They lack knowledge of social conditions and of the teaching art.

For telling young people that life is thus and so is not always teaching them. Things like this are never really taught until they are taken into the working consciousness of the individual.

Here in America we spend a great deal of time and money on the young generation. It behooves us as a business people to spend a little more time and consideration to prevent their making a fiasco of their lives as in the present instance. For that is the outcome of the whole affair.

These young men, because of a certain failure of efficiency in only one department of their lives, have not only damaged the women to whom they were allied and the children they begot, they have wasted themselves. No one yet knows what is to be the practical outcome of this case, but one thing is certain: for several years at least, Maury I. Diggs and Drew Caminetti are not going to be of much use to us.

DROPPING OF 3 COUNTS PARTLY VINDICATED ME, SAYS CAMINETTI

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—F. Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner General of Immigration, convicted of violating the white slave law, and awaiting sentence Wednesday, probably will not appeal his case. The young man said that the fact that he was convicted on only one of the four counts was, in a way, a vindication.

Caminetti, free under a $10,000 bond pending sentence by Federal Judge Van Fleet, was cheerful today. The verdict of the jury made possible a sentence of five years and a fine of $5,000. Maury I. Diggs, convicted on the same charge, may be sentenced to twenty years and a $20,000 fine.

Caminetti said today:

I am relieved now that the long strain is over. I am glad the jury did not disagree and that the case is not to be gone over again. I am found guilty of violating the white slave law in taking Lola Norris to Reno, but I am not guilty of persuading or enticing her away. I hope they will drop the charges of conspiracy against me.

It was the testimony of Marsha Warrington that convicted Caminetti, testimony was in part as follows:

Q.—What did yourself and Miss Norris say, if anything, on the occasion of being urged to go to Reno in the presence of Mr. Caminetti? A.—We said that it would be absolutely impossible for us to go.

Q.—You had three other meetings prior to your leaving? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where were they held? A.—Well, we met once at the Columbia Hotel and at other times at the office of Mr. Diggs in the Dieppenbrock building.

Q.—What was said at the meeting you refer to in the Columbia Hotel? A.—This meeting was arranged after a telephone conversation with Mr. Caminetti, who told us that Mr. Diggs was hiding in the hotel from the police. After we met at the hotel Mr. Caminetti said he had learned from a detective that the names of all four of us were in possession of the Juvenile Court and that warrants would be sworn out for our arrest. Both Mr. Caminetti and Mr. Diggs said there was nothing else for us to do but to leave town.

Q.—Was anything said at this and the other meetings you refer to about the relations that existed between Mr. Diggs, Mr. Caminetti and their wives? A.—Yes. They said they were unhappy with their wives.

Q.—Was anything said about divorce? A.—Yes, they said they would get divorces and marry us.

Q.—Now, coming down to the Sunday afternoon you referred to before, did you make an appointment to meet Mr. Diggs and Mr. Caminetti? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were you to meet? A.—In the Saddle Rock restaurant.

Q.—After this meeting, where did you go? A.—We went home.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I packed some clothes in a grip and started out to meet them again.

Q.—This was the first time you had made up your mind to leave Sacramento? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Caminetti say about this? A.—He agreed it would be a good place.

Q.—What was done after this? A.—Well, Mr. Caminetti gave Miss Norris $20 to purchase tickets, but Mr. Diggs said there should be some boss to the party, and that he would look after the tickets.

Q.—And what did Caminetti do then? A.—He had agreed to everything, and he said he would leave to get some money or something.

Q.—What was done after arriving at the depot? A.—Mr. Diggs told us to wait while he bought the tickets, and he left for the office to buy them.

Q.—Now, after boarding the train you entered a Pullman car and were eventually shown to a drawing room, were you not? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Tell the jury about this drawing room. A.—There were two berths in it and a lounge.

Q.—Who occupied the lower berth? A.—Mr. Diggs and I.

Q.—And who occupied the upper berth? A.—Mr. Caminetti and Miss Norris.

Q.—Now, before reaching Reno, did you have any conversation about what you would do after arriving there? A.—

Note Skilled living models will display this millinery, showing how the new millinery styles are to be worn. There will be an added interest in the gowns they will wear.

WIDOW BANKRUPT BY WILL FIGHT

Mrs. Flanders Threatens Criminal Action as Sequel to Contest for Million.

TO PAY CREDITORS IN FULL

"Every one of my creditors shall be paid with interest when I have secured my rights in the Woodbridge estate," declared Mrs. Hazel Pratt (Woodbridge) Flanders at the fashionable Flanders residence at No. 49 Longwood avenue, Brookline, yesterday afternoon, preparatory to the explanation of her petition in bankruptcy alleging liabilities of $6,443 and assets of $200.

"I have been made a bankrupt by being deprived of my rights in an estate which amounts to $1,250,000," she continued.

Mrs. Flanders, as the widow of the late William Butler Woodbridge, was told by her first husband's cousin, Philip C. Wadsworth, closely associated with Mr. Woodbridge in the Columbian National Life Insurance Company, the Columbian Agency Company and the American Securities Investment Company, that Mr. Woodbridge's estate amounted to a million and a quarter.

Franklin B. Ganse of Newton, James Westervelt of New York and Colonel Percy Parker of Lowell were left as trustees of the estate when Mr. Woodbridge died.

"At first I received $500 a month, paid me by the trustees, and it was understood that I should continue to receive this amount monthly until the estate was settled. Finally, I demanded a settlement. In a civil bill I have charged that the executors purposely wrecked the Agency Company to serve their own ends and to deprive me of my husband's estate. These three men assert that there is no estate, and several hearings have been held. Another will take place this month, and some interesting things will be brought out then.

"As soon as this hearing is over I intend to bring criminal action against certain persons, and the testimony then, I am sanguine you, will cause some tremendous surprises in insurance circles."

Mrs. Flanders declares that the executors of the Woodbridge estate have refused to permit a registered accountant to examine the books of the estate.

Fire, Fire, Who's Hid Away the Fire?

Chief Mullen Gives Some "Instructions" on Hunting One.

For five minutes last night Chief Mullen and the down town firemen meandered around "fatal box 22" looking for a fire. Suddenly Joseph J. Downey, of No. 87 Cross street, Medford, found the fire on the top floor of the building at No. 99-101 Bedford street. Quickly ladders were raised, water turned on and the fire drowned. Then Chief Mullen addressed Downey:

"You stopped rivalry among my firemen. For once this company or that company 'did not get there first.' But, for the 'love of Mike,' young man, stick to the box when you sound an alarm and direct the firemen to the scene of the blaze."

The fire was in a room occupied by the Radcliffe Manufacturing Company. The damage was slight.

Minister Suicide in Fear of Poverty

Rev. Samuel Noon of Cambridge Throws Self Under Train.

The fear of poverty that comes to many ministers when they reach the declining years in life drove Rev. Samuel L. Noon, a retired Methodist clergyman of Cambridge, to death beneath the wheels of a Central Massachusetts Railroad train at Oakdale.

Rev. Mr. Noon threw himself in front of the engine and was killed instantly. There were no marks of identification on the clothing, and for twenty-four hours the body remained unclaimed. Finally, last evening, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Samuel A. Noon, heard of the death at Oakdale and made the identification.

"People that saw me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for Spring and all other ailments.

Lawyer Asks $20,000 for Own and Daughter's Suffering.

The first suit brought as a result of the famous Canton epidemic, which resulted in twenty deaths and more than 350 cases of scarlet fever and tonsilitis, was filed this week by George W. Matthews, the State street lawyer in behalf of his daughter, Mary, nine years old, and himself.

Matthews sues Charles H. French, also of Canton, and alleges that the daughter contracted scarlet fever as a result of germs brought to the Matthew home in milk delivered by the defendent. He asks the sum of $15,000 in behalf of his daughter, and $5,000 as damages to himself.

ILLNESS LAID TO BOARD OF HEALTH

Cassidy Takes Local Body to Task for Dangerous Conditions in Tenements.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Negligence on the part of the City Board of Health is alleged to have been the cause of the death of Elizabeth Stewart, who was stricken with typhoid with several other members of her family in the house No. 1580 Tremont street, Roxbury. The complaint of the neighbors is that the city authorities refused to house a complaint, made in due form, that the cellar of the house was flooded with water from a broken drain which entered an aperture through the sidewalk and flooded the place. The sickness in the Stewart family followed.

The case was called to my attention and I personally investigated the matter. I met James Gordon, my informant, and he gave this story:

The fire lived at No. 1580 Tremont street, Roxbury, for eighteen months, during which time my attention was directed to the terrible condition of the cellar. I found water flowing into the cellar from an opening which led to a broken water drain. The water formed into a stagnant pool, the stench of which was unbearable, and fungus growth and dampness accrued.

With other tenants I called the attention of the owner of the house to the condition prevalent in the cellar. The owner took no action. Complaint was next made to the Board of Health. There was nothing doing from that source. Just why I cannot explain.

While this routine was going on members of my family were stricken with an indescribable sickness. They would invariably explain that their throats were affected. I blamed the foul odor from the cellar as the cause. Other tenants of the house were likewise affected. To save further sickness in the family I moved.

There is no need of blaming milk and other foods for sickness among the occupants of the house at No. 1580 Tremont street. The sickness is due to the inactivity of the Board of Health in endorsing the laws made for the benefit of the people.

Too much attention is given to outside matters. I don't know why such cases as the one I mention are not attended to. I am glad the AMERICAN has the courage to give such complaints as mine the light of publicity."

There is no doubt that the Board of Health should look into such cases as outlined by Mr. Gordon. Such a condition of affairs should not be allowed to exist in Boston. It is the duty of the Board of Health for all the ills and ailments of the human family in this city.

But it is a well-known fact that some of the sinks and bathtubs in tenement houses in various parts of Boston, particularly the North, South and West Ends, are filled with debris of all sorts. Some bathtubs are filled with coal. The Board of Health ought to investigate such cases. These facts can be substantiated by the inspectors in the employ of the Board of Health.

Then, again, there are streets where debris is allowed to collect, which causes the rig to get in its work on men, women and children by way of the open window route.

Wake up, members of the Board of Health, and put a stop to the spreading of disease by cleaning, or ordering others to do so, disease breeding spots in various parts of the cities, particularly the cellars, bathtubs, etc.

Sues His Wife for Alimony

Pioneer for "Men's Rights"

MRS. EDWARD A. BLAKENEY, first woman to be sued by husband for pecuniary balm.

In unusual alimony from his wife, Edward A. Blakeney of No. 20 Highland street, Dorchester, has suddenly become the first case of husband in New England.

Mr. Blakeney is the first man who ever ventured into the courts and asked for matrimonial damages for injured domestic feelings.

Mr. Blakeney says he isn't getting a square deal. He has put up a home for legal battle and has engaged lawyers unabashed, everything is in readiness. Now let them come.

Tears run over the injured husband's sunken cheeks as he unfolds his tale of woe. Mrs. Blakeney refuses to be her self's way for alimony paying husbands to remember some of their pals in trifolets. Mrs. Blakeney now resides at No. 45 Parkman street, Dorchester, has had Mr. Blakeney who is a stair builder with a family of three years, and for some support, and for over two years has been receiving $1 weekly from her husband. Now the husband says it is his turn. He has that he is the pioneer male alimony seeker doesn't worry him at all.

An interesting feature of the novel case is that Mr. and Mrs. Blakeney are exactly the same height and size, both of the same age and they look very much alike. They lived together twenty-four years before a disruption came. Mr. Blakeney was regarded as a well-to-do builder. His wife also owns property in Hamilton and on West Cedar street in Dorchester Lower Mills. Ten to fifteen thousand dollars were estimated to be represented by possessions of husband and wife, which until recently they held jointly. Now all is changed.

Mr. Blakeney in his bill alleges that Mrs. Blakeney once skimmed a saucer through the air towards him and cut his ear. Then again a hot flatiron barely missed his face and struck his shoulder, scorching his clothes.

The bill alleges that she tried to poison him; that she got poisons and put them in his food; potatoes and other articles, besides attacking him with an axe and a broom handle.

Barry Says Rank and File Are His

C. P. Barry of South Boston, formerly of the Governor's Council and now candidate for the nomination for the Democratic governorship, last night delivered an address in Taunton in which he urged all Democratic voters to attend the primaries. Barry also spoke in Stoughton, Fall River and New Bedford. On task and the ire of the Democratic party, said Mr. Barry, "are practically unanimous for my candidacy because it stands first for direct primaries and secondly because a victory for me will sound a death knell to personal arrogance and bossism."

Girl's Death by Auto Prostrates Mother

Alice M. Lewis, Victim in Ashland, N. H., Accident, Was to Be Nurse.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Thomas Lewis, mother of Miss Alice M. Lewis, who was killed at Ashland, N. H., when an automobile in which she was driving crashed through the rail of a bridge, was reported by physicians today as resting under last named converse on the part of relatives and friends.

Miss Lewis was born in Pawtucket twenty-one years ago. She and three friends, Joe Smith, were en route to Stowe, Vt., where they were to visit Mrs. George Burke. Miss Lewis had not recently entered upon a training course as nurse at the Homeopathic Hospital, this city, today and was preparing for Ashland and will bring the daughter home.

VINE MOTORISTS LOSE LICENSES

Of Nineteen Others Suspended, Several May Suffer Similar Heavy Punishment.

The names of nine motorists have been revoked during the past two weeks by the state Highway Commission for reckless driving in Massachusetts. Nineteen licenses were suspended, and of these it is probable that several more will be revoked according to Chairman Souter of the commission.

Among the licenses revoked is that of Louis H. Hazelett, the Lowell expert driver who at length and sixth number, who was sentenced in January to six months in jail for recklessly operating an automobile when he ran down and fatally shot Miss Ruth Kittredge, an infant woman, in Wilmington, in 1911.

Also Killed a Child.

Hazelett and his "death auto," as his car has become known, have figured in the courts for several years. In August, 1912, his automobile struck and killed Rose Bellanca, five-year-old daughter of Joseph Bellanca of North Woburn.

The Public Service Commission, in its announcements of the revocations, says:

JAMES F. HIGGINS, of Lowell, illegally operated August 27, because the commission was unable to find that the license revoked for which an automobile operated was issued, occurred within the year.

THOMAS N. HERBERT, of Whitinsville, because he was convicted of operating an automobile recklessly, and fined $50.

JOSEPH H. LEACH, of Worcester, because he was convicted of operating a motorcycle recklessly, and fined $25.

Ran Away After Accident.

FRANK A. NAGLE, of Boston, because he was convicted of using an automobile without authority.

FRED M. WILLEY, of Chelsea, because he was convicted of going away after causing injury to person and property, and was fined $50.

SALVATORE GILLA, of Norwood, because he was convicted of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants and fined $25.

EUGENE O'BRIANT, of Gloucester, because he was convicted of operating an automobile recklessly and by order of the court fined $50.

JOHN E. SMITH of Newton, because he was convicted of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants and fined $50.

HOWARD B. ASHLEY, of Bourne, because of his intoxication. After a hearing, it was made to find that a fatal accident in which a motorcycle operated by him was involved, occurred without serious fault on his part.

SPECIAL DUKES ELECTION.

Dukes County holds a special election this year for the first time in forty years. Sebastian H. Thayer, county treasurer, died in office and candidates are expected for his place.

LILLIAN BELL'S ROMANCE ENDED; SEEKS DIVORCE

Author Called Men Under 35 Stupid and Then Married One Not 25!

WROTE MUCH OF LOVE

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—If you happen to have any of Lillian Bell's books about the house, take them up and look through them today—bearing in mind that the author is now suing for divorce.

The divorce news puts new light on some of Lillian Bell's epigrams. For instance:

"How long must a woman be married to a man before she understands him as thoroughly as she ought to have understood him before she dared to stand up at an altar and promise to love him and to live with him until death did them part?"

On another page of the same book the author says:

Whether Miss Bell—or Mrs. Bogue, to use her married name—had come to serious differences with Bogue at the time she wrote that is not known, but the present divorce suit would indicate a turn that way.

Men Under 35 Stupid.

Lillian Bell has written much on love, men and marriage as Cora Harris or other dissectors of the tender emotion.

Once she said:

"Men under thirty-five are stupid, egotistical and unfit for marriage."

This slap roused the wrath of all the Mrs. Newlyweds in one mind, who said that Lillian Bell didn't know what she was talking about.

After all her brilliant articles on men, Lillian Bell, at the age of thirty-three, fell head over heels in love with Arthur Hoyt Bogue of Chicago, who was only twenty-five. They were married.

That was thirteen years ago. Now Bogue is thirty-eight. Mrs. Bogue seeks to divorce him, alleging drunkenness and non-support. They have been separated some time. There is one child, Lillian Bogue, aged twelve.

Some Excerpts.

"Ideal love is a beautiful thing to think about or to live in for a few weeks, or months, according to your temperament.

"You cannot argue with the untrained man under thirty-five. His eyes are always turned in. Hence comes divorce."

"A broken marriage ought to be considered a blessed thing and a preventive of further and worse ills."

"I'm not denying that women are foolish. God Almighty made them to match the men."

"Love means twice—yes, twenty, forty times—as much to a girl as to a man."

"I think that a man is more in love with himself than he ever was with any woman."

Winchester Is Proud of Co-operative Baby

Life Saved by Five Young Foster Mothers

MRS. BARTHOLOMEW CONNOLLY AND DAUGHTER

Miss Catherine Connolly, Baby Who Owes Her Life to Five Foster Mothers. She Looks Bright and Healthy Now, But a Short Time Ago Nurses Despaired of Saving Her.

Co-Operative Baby Comes to Join the Long List of That Is "Conducted" by and for a Large Number, and Is the Only Novelty in this Line in America Today.

Weighed Only One Pound and Six Ounces at Birth; Now a Five-Pounder.

The co-operative baby has arrived!

The co-operative store, the co-operative pavement house, the co-operative factory and workshop have had their day and one by one ceased to be novel.

But the co-operative baby is such an up-to-date and real freak in the co-operative line that almost every mother will be interested in Catherine Cecelia Connolly, four months and one week old today and born weighing exactly a pound and six ounces—one of the tiniest babies in the world.

Catherine sleeps, eats lustily when meal time schedules, which is every two hours, runs over a minute, and otherwise is on the way to becoming a fine-looking, lusty specimen of infanthood. Catherine has in reality, of course, just a single mother, like all other babies, BUT five young mothers of Winchester take a deep and almost proprietory interest in this diminutive baby, because they were the co-operators who enabled Dr. Arthur L. Brown to save Catherine's life and hand her over once more to her mother well and sound. Then, besides, half a dozen nurses at the Winchester Hospital gave hours of their time and service to help save the life of this co-operative baby.

Saved by Foster Mothers.

The history of the first co-operative baby is full of near tragedy. If no many kind Winchester foster mothers had not entered and volunteered to furnish mother's milk to help save the infant doctors and nurses agree that Miss Connolly would not now be alive.

Catherine was born April 25 and tipped the scales at exactly one pound and six ounces, a weight figure that instantly attracted widespread attention in the medical fraternity by its smallness. Dr. Brown held the infant in the palm of his hand for a minute and it, the little girl, seemed lost there.

Immediately Catherine, who hadn't been named then, was placed in a premature jacket—size being what is known as an eight-month's baby—and no one was permitted to touch her for a whole month. That is, she was fed, of course, but not handled.

Winchester mothers were appealed to in different ways. The nurses helped to find out mothers who could furnish the milk. The doctors helped. Everybody helped and the baby, almost given up, began to catch up and after a few days of wavering between life and death, to mend. Then the mothers who furnished the milk began to grow interested, too.

The co-operative baby weighs nearly five pounds again. It is hearty and lusty. You can't find a baby that beats it, declares Mr. Connolly, who is a marble cutter, and Mrs. Connolly, who is a busy housewife.

SEEK WOMAN AS GIRL'S ASSAILANT

Believe Jealousy Caused Binding and Gagging of Lillian Happeny in Somerville.

Following a rigid examination of neighbors and further questioning of Lillian Happeney, the nineteen-year-old girl who was found, bound and gagged, under a bed in the house of George Homer, No. 30 Joy street, Somerville, the police now believe the case was one of feminine jealousy. An elderly, tall, well-formed woman, dressed in black, is now the object of search.

Although up to noon today Miss Happeney still adhered to the story she told last night to the police and repeatedly denied that she knew her assailant, Lieutenant Carter and Inspectors Damery and Kennedy have been quizzing the people of the neighborhood. It has been learned that just such an appearing woman as named Miss Happeney about a week ago to leave the house or "something she wouldn't like would happen to her," has been seen frequently near the Homer home.

When questioned again relative to this last visit of the strange woman, Miss Happeney could only say that she was dressed in black. Neighbors agree with the police theory that it was a case of jealousy and go further to assign the reason to the fact that Miss Happeney got the position as housekeeper for Homer.

Moreover, they assert, the nature of the treatment given Miss Happeney could only have been due to one who knew the neighborhood and the Homer residence well. The girl's wrists were bound with corset strings, her ankles with a cord. Her lips were fastened with court plaster, while her eyes were covered with a man's handkerchief.

Norwood Manicurist Died By Own Hand

Mrs. Le Maire Took Morphine, Says Inquest Report.

The contents of the inquest report on the mysterious death of Mrs. Marie Le Maire, the Norwood manicurist, became known last evening.

The report shows that Mrs. Le Maire was undoubtedly a suicide, and that her death was caused by morphine pills. Scattered about the room where Mrs. Le Maire was found were many of these pills.

Yodlers, Jugglers, Billed with Bryan

Remarkable Card of Attractions at This Chautauqua.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The Chautauqua Association of Pennsylvania has just issued an official entertainment announcement which is wonderful—almost weird —from the way it links up the name of Secretary of State Bryan, its stellar attraction, with lesser drawing cards, such as magicians, jugglers, Alpine yodlers and other "performers."

Secretary Bryan will lecture on the Pennsylvania Chautauqua circuit from September 12 to 20, inclusive.

One phrase of the enthusiastic press agent reads:

There are 102 stations on the circuit. The press agent gravely promises Alpine yodlers as some of the associates who will perform with the American Secretary of State on this tour.

Between magicians, yodlers and jugglers, Mr. Bryan will not lack strong supporting bills to enhance his own addresses.

The salary of the star act of the Chautauqua circuit will be half the gate receipts, or "fifty-fifty," as ticket men say.

Tax and Trade Boards to Unite

The Cambridge Tax Payers' Association is to be amalgamated with the Cambridge Board of Trade. This action follows the extension of its work by the board of trade so as to include the work the Tax Payers' Association was organized to perform. Members of both organizations think that better work can be done if the two combine their efforts.

3,000 Engineers Here Tomorrow

At least 3,000 delegates are expected to be present at the international convention of the Association of Steam Engineers in Boston Monday and Tuesday. The preliminary session and reception will take place at the City Hall and the convention proper in the Court Square Theatre.

SEEK GIRL'S ASSAILANT.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Sept. 6.—Vigorous search has been instituted by the police for a fashionably dressed man, about fifty years old, who ransacked the home of former Major Augustus Pigeon, after knocking his daughter, Bertha Pigeon, sixteen, senseless with the butt of his revolver.

MRS. HARVEY S. BENSON, formerly Vera M. Legg of Dorchester, married last night.

$5,000 Father's Gift to Miss Legg, Bride

Dorchester Girl Wed to Harvey S. Benson.

A check for $5,000 was the gift of her father to Miss Vera Mildred Legg, who last night became the bride of Harvey Smith Benson, a graduate of Technology, 1912, at the bride's home, No. 55 Welles avenue, Dorchester. W. E. A. Legg, a poultry dealer in Faneuil Hall Market, made the gift immediately after the ceremony.

Miss Legg, one of the most popular members of the class of 1911 at Wellesley, was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Ethel Rhodes and Miss Ella Hawkridge, while the best man was Ernest Shell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Woodside of the First Baptist Church of Dorchester. Mr. and Mrs. Benson will live in Manchester, N. H.

BRYAN EULOGIZES WILSON IN MAINE

"Vote for Pattangall and Indorse Administration," He Urges the Voters.

WATERVILLE, Me., Sept. 6.—William J. Bryan told the voters of the Third Maine district this afternoon that the Mexican trouble was a heritage from President Taft's administration, and eulogized President Wilson's conduct, in appealing for an endorsement of the administration in the election of William R. Pattangall, on Monday, to the seat in the House left vacant by Forrest Goodwin's death. Mr. Bryan said:

"I'm not here to ask for your votes because we need any more Democrats in the House. We've got a-plenty. But I do ask an endorsement of the administration and its work thus far.

"I never met a man more able to decide great questions of state than is President Wilson. He can decide without help, too. He is gifted with tremendous singleness of purpose, and with high ideals.

The Pre-dent is the expression of Democracy—the Democracy that believes society is built from the bottom—not the top.

The greatest problem of Wilson's administration, perhaps, has been the Mexican situation—a heritage from the previous administration. It all developed under Taft. President Wilson, after carefully studying the situation, has come out as the friend of the poor little Central American republic.

TOWN BOASTS CHINESE BABY

MIDDLEBORO, Sept. 6.—The birth returns in the office of Town Clerk Thomas have brought to light a new record for the town. The return of the first Chinese baby ever born here is shown. It is a baby girl, the father being Wong You, aged 34, and a native of San Francisco, and the mother, Jois Gaun, aged 24, and born in China.

Discover Loot in Watertown Barn

Oil cans, fire extinguishers, carpenters' tools and dry cell batteries, all supposed by the Watertown police to be stolen goods, were recovered today in the barn of Charles Foley, Waterhouse street. Several complaints have been received at the police station of late regarding the loss of mechanics' tools from buildings on which they were working. The police believe they are in a fair way to capture the thieves.

REWARD, IF YOU FIND PATTIE

"Has anybody here seen PATTIE?"

Pattie is a Boston terrier, dark brindle, white chest, large size, who was ordered away when Miss Mary B. Feries of the W. Murray Forbeses of Milton took a walk recently. A reward is offered to the lucky finder of Pattie, who was Miss Forbes' favorite canine pet. Pattie has been gone since last Sunday. He is a society terrier.

Roaches Should Be Suppressed

How many times you hear people say, "This place is just full of cockroaches," and that seems to end it; they seldom do anything more than complain. They don't seem to realize that these bugs are dangerous to health as well as being a disgusting pest.

No one wants to eat in a restaurant or hotel where they are in evidence, but people take it as a matter of course that you can find them there, and as long as they can't see them they are willing to take a chance with the food they serve them.

But if they knew that cockroaches and water bugs were known to start an epidemic of typhoid fever, they wouldn't care to take any chance.

Some few years ago an outbreak of typhoid occurred on one of the vessels in the navy, the cause of which was a mystery to the medical officers. Thought by suggestion they made a search of the ship, and found that cockroaches had gotten into the ice pitchers and were the means of the disease directly to them.

It is plain to be seen that a bug that makes its habitation in the most filthy places it can find, and lives on filth and crumbs with its dainty proboscis and of course into and onto all kinds of food and places where it is stored, must certainly contaminate more or less the things it comes in contact with.

The best way to avoid any risks is to use "Martin's Roach Powders," and get rid of them. These powders can be placed in the places they frequent and will effectively dispose of them without any trouble.

Sold by drug and department stores everywhere for 50c and $1. 5c and 10c extra by mail. Eleven different sizes for other pests; some kind when ordering.

Express Fences in Providence Fined

Two Arrested on the Confesion of F. M. Sullivan.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 6.—Two men were fined here today, as the result of an alleged confession from Florence M. Sullivan, accused of stealing $1,000 worth of jewelry from the Adams Express Company. Amorose Morrison, fined $100, appealed and was held in $1,000. Morris Mushnick, fined $200 and costs, also appealed. Both men were charged with receiving stolen jewelry. According to the alleged confession of Sullivan, he took bundles containing jewelry from the express company and shipped them to a hotel in Boston, addressed to some fictitious person. Morrison went there, got the bundles and brought them back to Providence. Sullivan was held in $200.

Hearing Tomorrow on Potosi Charges

Charges that large secret profits have been made by the board of directors, in violation of their fiduciary relations with the stockholders of the Potosi Mines Company, will be investigated at a hearing ordered before Judge Crosby tomorrow. The investigation is made at the instance of George B. Wilbur and other holders of stock. The Potosi Company has heavy holdings in mines and zinc lands.

FEW MOMENTS! NO INDIGESTION OR SICK STOMACH—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Digests all food, absorbs gases and stops fermentation at once.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; your head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take Pape's Diapepsin, and in five minutes you will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebelling; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so quickly and easily that it is astonishing. Please don't go on mind on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

U. S. Navy Never So Good, Says Dewey

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 6.—When asked today if he regarded the United States prepared for any unexpected trouble with a foreign nation Admiral George Dewey said:

"So far as the army is concerned I am not prepared to give an opinion, but I do not hesitate to say that the navy has never been so well prepared for war as at the present time."

$100,000 Shooting Suit Tomorrow

Militiaman Seeks Damages for Sandwich Wound.

The case of Officer John Murphy, the Sandwich police officer, who shot and seriously wounded John A. Harrington, a private of the Ninth Regiment, July 28, will come up for trial in the Suffolk Superior Court tomorrow. Harrington brought suit against Murphy for $100,000.

The shooting took place within a mile of the spot where the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., was encamped for its annual four of duty. It followed the breaking of a lamp globe by a stone by a militiaman.

Murphy says he drew his revolver and fired into the air to scare them and that the bullet must have been deflected so as to hit Harrington.

SMOKELESS FIRE ENGINES COMING

Aim of Inspector Gerrish to Rid City of Nuisance of Old Apparatus.

Smokeless fire engines the next step in making Boston the real "smokeless city" of the country are now the aim of Chief Smoke Inspector William H. Gerrish.

The fire-fighting apparatus is at this time the only type of smoke-producing engine that really smokes. The smoke nuisance from locomotives, it is the intention of railroads to remedy. Look how this was done in the coal future and see what the fire engines are now made to overcome. He says, as we see no reason why they should be exempt.

Since the passage of the smoke abatement law in 1910 the smoke nuisance in the city of Boston has been reduced 75 per cent, and is now at the lowest possible point," said Mr. Gerrish in an interview.

"The only remaining maker of smoke that is not now complying with the law is the fire engine. I have visited several times to make an observation of the fire engine with the intention of following it up with a warning, but as yet I have not yet come anything with it, as my duties have kept my hands full.

"In the very near future, however, I am going to study the matter out and find out what the status is of the fire engine.

It Is Our Pleasure to Reverse the Usual Order of Birthday Parties—We Shall Bestow the Gifts

The New Store's First Anniversary Sale Tomorrow—September 8

FOR WEEKS and months plans have been making for this great day—this day of open house and open eyes and open hands—when every department of the store will contribute its share of

ONE-THIRD to ONE-HALF

THIS newspaper page might have been filled with prices, but the smallest type could not have told the whole story. So don't bother about details. Just come in and browse around. Every nook and corner invites you.

Whatever may be your Fall apparel needs—whether you be woman, man or child—you will find our plans for this anniversary sale have had YOU in mind.

Why such sacrifice of profits on so great a quantity of new merchandise on the very threshold of a season? Three whys:

(1) Last September, first month of the new store year, more than a million women, men and children visited us. What store hereaways ever had such baptism? Well, we propose to bring as many as possible of those friends-of-a-year-ago to us this September and as many others as may be possible. Tomorrow's birthday party is one of the ways.

(2) Both in numbers and efficiency this organization always is keyed up to record-day capacity. And it is essential, as a matter of keeping in form, that occasionally we be put through our paces. Thus weak spots are discovered, strong parts are made stronger. Tomorrow's aim is to be a record-breaker of record days.

(3) Our first comprehensive word of new Fall styles now shall be spoken. By bringing in many times the number of critical friends usual to a day we quickly shall determine how wisely we have anticipated our public's wishes.

Tomorrow the day.
We the hosts.
You the guests.
Come!

A Hint! This will be a good day for EARLY Shopping. Many lots may not be complete by morning hours.

STARTLING WASTE IN FEW LOCAL CHARITIES

In Some Cases More Money Spent in Investigation Than on Help; Others Spend Practically All Receipts on the Poor

State Board and Chamber of Commerce Tell How Much of the Money Contributed Goes for Salaries; How Much for Poor

What to Do When Charity Donations Are Asked of You

Ask the solicitor:

"Is your organization incorporated?"

"Let us see your last annual report?"

If the organization is not incorporated or you are not satisfied with the answers made, call Lloyd Hayes, Boston Chamber of Commerce, Fort Hill 2100, and tell him the facts.

A WELL-DRESSED woman walks into your store and says:

"I represent the Helping Society. Our aim is to help families in need. We would like you to donate. Won't you help us?"

Business has been good. You feel charitable. You give, say one dollar, and the woman solicitor thanks you and goes out.

Then you wonder just how much of that dollar will go to help a poor family, and how much will go to pay salaries, office rent, clerk hire and "incidental expenses." You wonder how much of your dollar really goes to charity and how much to organization.

The State Board of Charity has just published its annual report. It answers your questions. Every business man should have a copy of this report. The State Board of Charity at the State House will gladly give you a copy free.

The figures presented in this report are amazing. They show that, like everything else, there are good charities. Indifferent charities and positively bad charities. The board makes no comment. Read the report. You must judge for yourself on the figures turned in by the charities themselves.

Amazing Results.

The amazing results of the State board's investigations are brought home when it is shown that less than one-half of 256 societies examined received the unqualified approval of the board. If this percentage is continued when the board has examined the entire list of incorporated charities, it means in plain language that one-half of the Organized incorporated charities of Massachusetts are unworthy of the support of the public.

The board says that in a number of cases where it has disapproved of a society its figures have earnestly agreed [illegible] PROVE WITHIN.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce has undertaken a separate work of separating the deserving from the undeserving charities. Lloyd Hayes has been placed in charge of this much needed work, and prompt and accurate investigations are made, and, if needed, warning sent out to the public to beware of solicitors from fake or unworthy charities.

The Chamber of Commerce Bureau investigates all kinds of charities for its members and reports [illegible] not opinion. The State Board of Charity has only the power to investigate incorporated charities, and these also are required by law to send statements of their work, moneys received and disbursed, to the Commissioner of Corporations.

Waste Money.

The figures made public in the new report of the State Board of Charity, covering the entire State, are important in that they show that many reputable charities, most of them run by well-intentioned people, waste the money turned over to them. Most of them do not intentionally throw this money away. Many

C. P. Haskins Wins Oldest Railroad Conductor Contest

Began on Old Colony Line Since September, 1863.

Peter Haskins, who has been [illegible] Kets 60 the 49th [illegible] September, 1863 and who was [illegible] Merits in the winner of the Sunday AMERICAN contest. He first went to work for the Old Colony Railroad January 1, 1857, he was promoted to conductor in '63.

Mr. Haskins is now in the employ of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Old Colony Division. He still runs his train between Taunton and New Bedford and Lowell. He is one of the best known conductors in New England and knows all his regular passengers by name.

His name was suggested by several friends. M. F. Kent of Quincy Station was the first. His letter arrived at the AMERICAN office September 4, at 10 a. m. Mr. Haskins and Mr. Kent will each receive $25 as prizes.

The contest brought to light many other conductors with long terms of continuous service. Next in point of service to Mr. Haskins were F. W. Tanner of the Western division of the New Haven, who entered service in '64 as passenger conductor, and Henry A. Titus of the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine, who has been a conductor since 1864.

Card Booms Stubbs in Place of Colonel

Names Him for President in 1916; Sent to Foss.

GOVERNOR STUBBS
PROGRESSIVE
PRESIDENT FOR 1916

No explanation is given and no name is signed to the card. The "Governor Stubbs" referred to in the card is former Governor W. R. Stubbs of Kansas, who left the Republican party to support Colonel Roosevelt for the Presidency against Mr. Taft. He has since joined the Progressives. Because of the fact that Colonel Roosevelt has indicated that he will be a candidate for the Presidency in 1916, the inscription on the card is all the more puzzling.

Romance Seen in Widow's Smiles

Newport Considers Mrs. Coralie Roelker's Plans for Her.

NEWPORT, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Coralie Roelker, the charming widow of the late "Billy" Roelker, is said by her Newport friends to be smiling so winsomely upon the assiduous attentions paid by Harry Erskine, one of the smart bachelors, that an engagement is expected.

Mrs. Roelker, with her little boy, is occupying a cottage on Bellevue avenue. She has an inimitable taste in gowns and hats that is envied by her society sisters. Her natural beauty is only enhanced by the pretty confections she wears and, if Mr. Erskine is the lead for her hand, he is only one of several aspirants who seek to make the comely widow his widowhood.

They Were Titled Guests, No Less

Baron and Baroness Arrive at Pier "Incog."

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Sept. 6.—An impressive couple, arriving incognito at the Gladstone, are discovered to be the Baron and Baroness Von Katinowski of Wiesbaden, Germany. Result—a tremendous social flurry to become acquainted with the Count and his lady as soon as possible.

The "Incogs" are in state, with a retinue of servants, many trunks and a general air of pomp and circumstance.

They promenade mornings on the beach and are followed by gaping throngs.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 6.—The sudden appointment of Francis Burton Harrison to be Governor-General of the Philippines put neat problem into the pockets of local shopkeepers. Mrs. Harrison had only a week to provide suitable costumes for the journey to the Orient.

With no time to go to New York or Boston, she raided the Bar Harbor shops, to the unalloyed delight of the keepers thereof. Some shops nearly sold out to Mrs. Harrison and the needs of her numerous family.

TRIBE OF WOMEN WARRIORS FOUND BY DR. A. H. RICE

Distant Miss Visit Rarely, and Depart Laden with Precious Gifts.

THRILLING TRIP IN WILDS

[illegible] at Cambridge, [illegible] isolated from men except at certain periods, when males from distant tribes visit them, and then a short way loaded with gold and the usual and precious "green" stones, is the startling discovery made by Dr. A. Hamilton Rice, the wealthy young society man explorer, just back in Boston from a three months' trip through [illegible] discovery proves [illegible] logical interest [illegible] quimaux" did [illegible]

Indians at [illegible] be joined in [illegible] American Amazon [illegible] scientists that Dr. [illegible] upon the strange female race of which explorers and travellers have written and prophesied for many years.

Deep in the Jungle

Dr. Rice, who at thirty-eight is considered one of the world's foremost explorers, and who has penetrated the South American jungles [illegible] since his graduation from Harvard [illegible] 1898, came upon the Amazons deep in the heart of a country that hitherto had never been trodden by the foot of white man.

There were about twenty children and twenty women in this community, all stalwart, muscular and exceedingly warlike; "women," declared Dr. Rice, "who fought as well as men and with whom the males, while they were with them, conferred on all important questions." He said:

I came upon this strange race during the latter part of my long trip through the interior.

The tribe was located on what is known as the Little Yuinha River, and with them were two huge Indians, one from the Guainia River tribes and the other from the Icana River tribes; the former five about three days away, the latter nearly a month's journey off. These males have paths through the jungles which are kept secret and these routes they always follow on their semi-yearly visits to the women.

No Males in Tribe.

I found the stork hovering over many of the women. The twenty children were all strong clean-limbed boys and girls. Rug save for two men of utterly different tribes, there were no males.

When I came across these women I knew at once that their marital relations were different from the polygamous tribes through which I had previously journeyed in reaching this region. The facts that the two men were from remote and unhomogenous tribes interested me at once. Then again, my guide seemed not to understand the women when I began to ply him with questions concerning these Amazons.

Dr. Rice's trip through a region hitherto unexplored is probably without equal among thrilling exploration travels. Forced often to live upon roasted monkey meat and wild hogs, beset by hostile tribes at every step of his long and hazardous journey up to the sources of unknown streams, in constant company with malarial and diseased native guides, and himself for a part of the time a victim of a tropical germ disease which necessitated a dangerous self-performed operation, the story of his adventures runs more like fiction than reality.

New Map Necessary.

Dr. Rice's purpose was to explore the sources of the small rivers that feed the Amazon and the Orinoco, and so successful was he in this that a new map of the vast region of this 90,000 square miles now will be necessary. During his seventeen months in the forests Dr. Rice made fifty astronomical stations, and determined by latitude, longitude and azimuths [illegible] one of the rivers explored. His observings and observations prove that all existing maps showing the Guainia River rising west of the Yuinha River or the Icana River are incorrect.

Once for fifty days Dr. Rice and a small band of native companions journeyed along streams without meeting a human being.

For two weeks during a rainy season, when not only the rivers but the entire forest was inundated with the flood, he was forced to subsist upon little more than hot water and cheyenne pepper tea.

"Monkey meat makes very good eating, do you know," he said. "That is when it is properly cooked; roasted it is the best." At one period in his journey a post of "grass cutting" ants overran the camp. Before a start was made these fierce little marauders had completely eaten up Dr. Rice's mosquito netting and a good section of his Barbony jacket.

BOSTON'S EXPENSES JUMP.

Expense figures for the first seven months of Boston's fiscal year, ending September 7, show an increase of $748,302 over the corresponding months of last year, making the total expenditures for the seven months $13,708,140, the largest in the history of Boston.

"Many Women Live on Less Than $25"

Society Leader Suing for Divorce Says "My Experience Should Aid Others."

Every married woman should insist that her husband keep her informed about his business—particularly if the husband is inclined to irresponsibility in money affairs. It's a shock to suddenly wake up and find that you have got to substitute a $25-a-week allowance for a luxurious home and all the money that comfort and luxury demands.

Mrs. Susan M. (Stuart) Wakefield.

MRS. SUSAN M. WAKEFIELD

wife of Cyrus Wakefield son of the late millionaire rattan furniture dealer who was last week awarded $25 weekly from Mr. Wakefield pending divorce proceedings this Fall, thinks it would [illegible] average well-to-do wife to suddenly discover that $25 was to be her limit of income.

The termination of the romance of Susan Wakefield and her wealthy young husband has caused the bluest sensation in Wakefield that the quiet and aristocratic little town has ever known.

"What will Susie Wakefield do now that she has only $25 a week to live on." That's the question that is going the rounds of the town.

Mrs. Wakefield [illegible] herself Says she:

I shall get along. Women, tens of thousands of them, considered in good circumstances, live upon far less. There's a lesson in such a case that should help other women.

Should See Where Money Goes.

If you're a husband this [illegible] interest [illegible] "gentlemen of leisure" then a woman should make it [illegible] to be informed how the money is made of which [illegible] comes and [illegible] surrounding the family fortune are. It's a splendid thing [illegible] so many girls do have a grounding in the rudiments of business before they marry. They are fitted to look into what their husbands will sometime invest.

It's the business of every woman to analyze how much she owes her husband, and how much, to see that provision is secure for her support should anything take place that leaves her alone. There ought to be iron-clad arrangements to safeguard the wife's rights in matters of money.

Women are not dependent today they can demand equal division and carry an equal part of the responsibilities.

Daughter of Rich Parents.

Mrs. Wakefield is the daughter of wealthy parents and will not worry to see her allotted $25 a week does not cover needed weekly expenses. One glance at her sparkling eyes and handsomely gowned figure is enough to convince the casual visitor that poverty is unlikely to give Mrs. Wakefield a setback. Her court battle, the preliminaries of which were begun last week, involves an attachment of $20,000 upon Mr. Wakefield's real estate. Mrs. Wakefield will [illegible] alleges habits of confirmed and [illegible] intoxication on her husband's part when society throngs to the East Greenwich [illegible] court room where the case of between [illegible] the wealthy club man and his wife will [illegible] be waged.

WALSH DECLARES THE COURSE HE WILL STEER IF ELECTED GOVERNOR

Makes Complete Statement of the Principles and Policies Which Will Govern Him—Announces Plan to Prevent the Democratic Representatives From Again Betraying Their Party Platform

Advocates Revoking Trolley Merger Bill Breaking Up New Haven Railroad Monopoly and the Restoration of Independence of the Boston & Maine For Constitutional Convention.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR DAVID I. WALSH has issued his long [illegible] It is a significant declaration of [illegible] which the voters of the Commonwealth will be interested to read.

Mr. Walsh's statement is unusually important this year, because it most virtually be the Democratic platform. Mr. Walsh is the [illegible] whose name will appear on the ballot at the Democratic primaries and the party must accept him and his policies or be without a candidate, except in the very unlikely event of [illegible] nominated by stickers. Mr. Walsh knows that there was no ground for the suspicion that his deliberation came from lack of courage.

The Lieutenant Governor grapples with the great problems of the hour and states his own views clearly.

One of the most [illegible] Mr. Walsh's statement is that which was suggested by the betrayal of the Democratic party during the last session of the Legislature by those forty-five Democrats who voted to give the New Haven Railroad monopoly the control of the street railways on behalf of the State, directly in the teeth of the whole platform party pledges, the Governor's veto, and against the protest of all the [illegible] agents and quasi-public bodies of the Commonwealth, the [illegible] State and the national government in financial matters.

In view of the conduct of these party traitors, Mr. Walsh advocates that no man be allowed the Democratic nomination for the House or Senate who refuses to file with the Secretary of State in writing a statement that he approves the platform of his party and will be faithful to it. Mr. Walsh says that the violation of a party platform should be regarded as "THE HIGHEST KIND OF POLITICAL TREASON."

The Lieutenant Governor says that the State should disestablish the New Haven Railroad monopoly by revoking the so-called "Trolley Merger bill" and restoring the independence of the Boston & Maine Railroad from New Haven Railroad and New York domination. He advocates a Constitutional Convention, by which the initiative, referendum and recall may be submitted to the people, as also woman suffrage and many other fundamental reforms which a controlled legislature has so long prevented us from enjoying.

Mr. Walsh declares for [illegible] of the duties of the Lieutenant Governor, and says, that he be ex officio Chairman of Board of Efficiency and Economy.

He takes strong position on the following propositions:

1. He favors the right of the [illegible] to adopt or reject the party enrollment.
2. He advocates the increase of the powers of the Tax Commissioner in order that cities and towns may [illegible] to compete for tax dollars by undervaluing their property.
3. He advocates the consolidation of the Gas and Electric Light Commission with the Public Service Commission, adopting the course followed now by most of the States in that respect.
4. He advocates the consolidation of the State institutions under a [illegible] to be called a Board of Administration, to manage all [illegible] penal and correctional institutions of the Commonwealth—the [illegible] workhouses and workhouses.
5. [illegible] purchasing agent for the State for all the State [illegible] that the State may have the advantage of a saving and of the large purchasing orders.
6. [illegible] abolition of the Board of Labor and Industries [illegible] that a Labor Commissioner would do the work of this [illegible] and that the Governor should appoint him and that he [illegible] responsible to the Governor.
7. [illegible] no strike shall occur on public service corporations [illegible] authority is able to make a report on the facts [illegible] to the dispute.
8. [illegible] a more general study [illegible] of agriculture and [illegible] growing method of meeting this need, and suggests [illegible] instructors.

Fail to Find Home for Baby Cambridge Tot to Go to Charity

LITTLE "MABEL" AND NURSE WOODROW

Mabel Waterhouse" the [illegible] months old baby [illegible] Cambridge Common near the Soldiers' Monument had not yet found a home up to late last night.

The child when found was taken to the Cambridge City Home and kept there in the hopes that her relatives—perhaps the mother who abandoned her—would come to reclaim the little tot. Failing this, the baby will go to the State department for minor wards, who will place her either in an institution or in a home.

Miss Minnie O'Brien, the baby's private nurse, has had charge of her and is grieving at the thought of giving up the child to charity.

"7 Hartwell St., Southbridge, Mass.—"Our son commenced with little pimples all over his body. They said it was eczema. The pimples looked like small insect bites and almost covered his body. They came to a head from which water would run. They itched and burned so badly that my son scratched them and made sores. His clothing irritated the eczema and he was cross and fretful. He could not sleep again and would cry and say they burned and itched all the time.

"I tried ——— but it did not relieve him, and some ——— but it seemed to make him worse. I then used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the first night I used them he seemed to be so relieved he slept a little. I first washed the affected parts with Cuticura Soap and then applied Cuticura Ointment twice daily. At the end of the first week he was much better and at the end of the second week he was completely cured. Every mark was gone." (Signed) Mrs. W. B. Potter, Nov. 12, 1912.

WASHES AIR AND PUTS IT BACK

Harvard Man's Novel Plan Cuts Fuel Cost Forty Per Cent.

If you [illegible] in your office is [illegible] a [illegible] air-washed [illegible] and put back again.

No less a scientist than Professor George A. Whipple, a Harvard graduate and the head of the sanitary engineering department of Harvard University, is the author of the latest plan, which, in the future, will be possible to cleanse the air in offices, schoolrooms, factories, workshops and even in private homes, and to individuals wish to go to the expense of a private air washing [illegible]

The air in a crowded office structure [illegible] be taken out, washed and forced back in 40 per cent. less [illegible] it cost than is required under the old [illegible] system of outside air circulation and the washed air will be much cleaner than if it came directly from outdoors, says Professor Whipple.

In the modern building occupied by many workers where sanitary arrangements are installed on a large scale, the air-washing machine, usually kept at the top of in the basement, consisting of a [illegible] machinery in a spacious [illegible] where the washing is done by rotating water through the air, the expense of the apparatus is comparatively [illegible]

The air washing process is based upon the same principle as the purifying of water by running it through sand. Water is run through the air to clean the all outside air that has been washed is the purest. Inside air washed is next to it. Outside air washed is by far the best [illegible]

Professor Whipple, by a series of experiments made in office buildings in Boston and New York, has made the above positive determinations.

WASHINGTON LETTER

SOME thoughtless departmental chief has suggested that the frigate Constitution, now lying at the Charlestown Navy Yard, should be removed to some other port, because the old ship is occupying space which would be more valuable for other purposes—as if the value of the Constitution could be measured in money!

The hundredth anniversary of the launching of the Constitution was observed by the people of Massachusetts with formal ceremony in the Old South Meeting House on October 21, 1897. The meeting house was packed with those who came to testify to their appreciation of the splendid value rendered to the young republic by the Constitution.

Roger Wolcott, the Governor of the State, attended the meeting and in appropriate language told the story of the ship. John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy, to whom the care of the vessel was entrusted, spoke feelingly of the Constitution and rightfully represented the affection which the sailor has for his ship, while Senator Henry Cabot Lodge delivered an historical address in which full credit was given to the Constitution for the part played in emphasizing the independence of the United States, as a result of the second war with England.

It was no inanimate thing of which these men spoke. It was a sentiment which could never be valued in money and to support which human life has ever been freely given.

It is indeed curious how men with so little appreciation of the value of this sentiment can rise to a position where by their accidental power they can shock the feelings of a community.

The Constitution must not leave Boston Harbor. She was built in Boston Harbor, and here she must remain. It was a hundred years ago last December the old frigate beat up the British Java, costing the enemy a fine warship, thirty-eight big guns and a couple of hundred men, killed and wounded. This fight won for the Constitution the pet name "Old Iron sides," and in popular favor she is "Old Ironsides" still.

There are two spots in Boston where "Old Ironsides" could be berthed—at the tip end of South Boston, beneath the hill where Washington located his Continentals and drove Howe from Boston, or in the Charles River Basin. In the centre of Boston's famous marine park stands a noble monument of Farragut, America's greatest Admiral. There at the feet of Farragut, in Pleasure Bay, let the city or the State dredge an anchorage basin where "Old Ironsides" will forever rest in dignified and undiminished glory. There it can be visited by hundreds of thousands annually who can read an epitome of American history in a single glance. Here, then, would be assembled the monuments of the great epochs of American history. Washington's army at Dorchester Heights, the Constitution anchored at Pleasure Bay, and Farragut, whose famous reference to the torpedoes at Mobile Bay will never be forgotten, all will awaken a spirit in the youth of Massachusetts which, when occasion requires, will prove worthy of the men of the heroic past.

Revere Selectmen Ignore Own Vote

The selectmen of Revere will hold a special meeting, tomorrow despite a resolution passed at the meeting of July 21 last, the next meeting be held Sept. 2. The meeting will also take place despite the protestations of Chairman Alex J. Snellington, chairman of the board of selectmen who is investigating the tax collector's and assessor's department.

Monahan to Get Mercy, if Guilty

A decision is expected to be handed down Monday by Judge Cohen in the case of former State Senator George F. Monahan charged with unlawfully using the Edison Illuminating Company's current in his liquor store on Friend street. Counsel for the company say that in case Mr. Monahan is found guilty no sentence will be asked.

If peevish, feverish, tongue coated, give "fruit laxative" at once.

No matter what ails your child a laxative should be the first treatment given.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, flushed, restless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or has fever, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made in "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

TOLMAN, KING OF LOAN SHARKS, LEAVES BOSTON

PLANS OF E. GERRY BROWN

[illegible] of loan sharks," has [illegible] He has dropped [illegible] Boston office at [illegible] Franklin and Devonshire [illegible] leaving the dust of Boston [illegible] from his shoes.

[illegible] business here any more un[illegible] conditions," declared Tol[illegible]

[illegible] of money lenders was [illegible] of the State Supervisor of [illegible] E. Gerry Brown, to dis[illegible] of the further example [illegible] interest rates and the at[illegible] was decided in Tolman. The loan [illegible] had their teeth extracted, [illegible] class of carrying $400 for a [illegible] and getting $300 in cash.

[illegible] are up against competition of a novel kind. A number of [illegible] doing place have gone into the small loan business. They sell a man a suit of clothes for $15, give him $10 cash and take a note for from $30 to $40 for the suit of clothes.

Novel Competition.

Under the new banking law the individual loan brokers are limited to the charge of a weekly rate while the small loan people charge on the strength of the [illegible] which makes it almost impossible. Therefore the installment people have a tremendous advantage over the old and [illegible] methods.

However, E. Gerry Brown is not to [illegible] against the colored brokers will be making [illegible] a rule. In these there will be soon [illegible] doing.

The first drastic effect of the loan shark has been to put the charge for the service of making out a loan, dated by [illegible] to put it several times over.

Scheme of Evasion.

[illegible] to make loans for 3 months [illegible] charging the legal rate per [illegible] month on $2. At the [illegible] month a loan [illegible] second and [illegible] ten per cent in addition [illegible] charge, interest of three per cent [illegible] The second month has to [illegible] third loan is made [illegible] the above charge.

Thus the unfortunate borrower is paying thirteen per cent a month instead of three per cent, the legal rate.

This is a flagrant violation of the rule made by Supervisor Brown that the extreme charge shall not be made more often than once in four months.

"The only way I can deal with this and Mr. Brown is to call up a money lender when I have been informed that monthly rates or charges are being made and require him to pay back the over charges. This they always do.

How Sharks Are Watched.

Mr. Brown then explains the elaborate system by which he watches the [illegible] of the hundreds of loan sharks [illegible] in the State and how he checks [illegible] up.

He [illegible] complete reports from [illegible] on file of every loan made [illegible] exact amount paid, interest and charges. He has records of all [illegible] and statistics of all sorts [illegible] interest charges.

The investigation officers make [illegible] reports [illegible] he was asked.

"Many of them did not at first believe [illegible] the right it was to [illegible] a person's affairs," he replied. "But I have [illegible] success in getting in touch with borrowers and hearing their side of the case. I have confronted and proved [illegible] before, so often for falsehood [illegible] fee of $100 venture to make [illegible] practice [illegible]

Aid to Borrowers.

Mr. Brown's [illegible] banking system is so complete [illegible] can even tell a borrower, who has [illegible] from whom he borrowed the address of the money lender. This has [illegible] did about a month ago.

"The money lenders are very anxious [illegible] to bring up in any possible way [illegible] any complaint against them [illegible] justify themselves and [illegible] back to put question my methods.

"I am trying to see money lenders [illegible] a fair rate of interest, in legitimate [illegible] poor people who have no security, but who [illegible] an urgent need of money. Since [illegible] borrow and the money lender has a right to lend at a fair profit. As to large a proportion of loans made without security turn out badly, the rate of interest must naturally be fairly [illegible] the bad ones would go out of business if there would be nobody from whom [illegible] in need could secure money.

"My aim in trying to do so is to fix a rate [illegible] will prevent extortion such as [illegible] in the past and at the same time [illegible] a reasonable profit. It is a nice, difficult problem."

HEAVILY OILED AND HIGH CROWNED ROADS UNSAFE

Method of Oiling and Crowning State Highways Has a Tendency to Greatly Increase Danger.

By J. C. KERRISON

Time was when the State highways were considered the best and safest in the Commonwealth. They are hardly so today. The method of crowning and tarring the roads has brought about a condition of affairs which does not in any way contribute to the safety of the traveling public. In other words, most of the roads are so heavily crowned, so heavily tarred and oiled in the center that to travel along them with reasonable speed is to take chances of a skid.

The Andover road, for instance, is so heavily crowned tarred and oiled in the center that it is dangerous to [illegible] same and pass other cars at such [illegible] miles an hour. The loose gravel and sand on each side of the road is a constant menace to the driver who desires to give an oncoming car its share of the roadway.

To turn from the centre to the side of the road means to drive at a more or less acute angle with one wheel in the loose gravel and the other on the roadway, the result of which is [illegible] tion with a tendency to skid. The fact that on [illegible] way there runs streaks of oil adds to the elements of danger.

BUYS FLEET OF 50 WHITE TRUCKS

Cleveland Makers Get Record Order from Pittsburgh Department Store.

Hardly a day passes without the White Company of Cleveland selling a big fleet of motor trucks to some prominent concern. Truck sales that are record breakers for certain industries, involving anywhere from five to sixty-eight vehicles, have been made with great regularity and each sale seems to surpass the previous one. The largest week records are those of three weeks during which 50 trucks

The largest sale was made to the Kaufmann Baer Company, a new department store in Pittsburgh, whose order calls for the immediate delivery of fifty-eight White trucks and twenty additional trucks after the first of the year. This is the largest truck sale ever made in the city of Pittsburgh and also the largest single truck purchase ever made by a department store.

When the Kaufmann Baer Company's trucks are delivered there will be over 100 White trucks delivering the purchases of Pittsburgh shoppers. The resulting mechanical effect on the streets of the Smoky City have stirred the experimental wits and salesmanship of the White. A big majority of these trucks are identical in design and capacity, differing only in the types of bodies

GERMAN MAKERS EXPRESS ALARM

Admits the Hurt of Competition from American Auto Factories.

The article, which appears in the leading automobile paper of Germany, the Automobil Zeitung of Berlin, calls attention to the great inroads made into German exports of automobiles by American [illegible] It warns all German manufacturers not to hide their heads in the sand, and states

There is no such thing as an American danger, because the effects of the dangers are already clearly visible to those who want to see. Even so large and well known company as the Daimler Motoren Gesellschaft, makers of Mercedes cars is feeling the American attack. Its exports to tropical and semi-tropical countries have fallen off in an alarming degree, while American exports to those same districts have been doubled and trebled. And, says the article, even a famous car as the Mercedes is being [illegible] in foreign markets. It is foolish on the part of other makers to claim that they have noticed no falling off in their sales abroad.

Seriously, the writer declares, "is absolutely dependent upon the export sales; its automobile factories would have to close up were they restricted to sales within the confines of the empire. And even here at our own country the American low-priced car is selling at a rate which is causing our own manufacturers no little worry."

A STARTING HINT.

Some electric cranks are designed to start slowly until the gears are in mesh and then increase speed and power to do their duty. This variation in motor power is obtained by use of a slide switch which, after a little small amount of current through a resistance wire, and then passes to complete current. These resistance wires are usually made of German silver and are prone to burn out when the initial current is permitted to remain on too long. The starting pedal should be provided with a spring with a positive action so that the current will not remain on the resistance wire longer than is absolutely necessary to mesh the gears. The remedy consists in a new wire, of which it is well to be supplied with extras.

Do Examinations Stop Accidents?

There is not a motorist in the country but has a decided opinion on this question. Efforts have been made by many states to enact legislation that proposes to decrease the number of accidents by requiring every motor car driver to pass an examination.

How well this plan has succeeded is conclusively discussed in the September number of Motor. Here is presented an extremely significant compilation of accident statistics, together with a searching analysis of their real meaning.

Every man who drives a car ought to read this article and get the benefit of the expert opinion that it voices. It is one of a list of more than twenty-seven good things, all practical, up-to-the-minute subjects, planned to solve just the problems that confront the motorist day by day, and all in the September issue.

DRIVERS SHOULD KNOW THEIR CAR

Knowing How Saves Much for the Man Who Operates His Own Auto.

There is a vast difference between the mere driving of a car and intelligent operation. Simply driving a car does not mean economy. A team of horses in its hands of a novice will cover the people for more work of efficiency and speed and be the transportation driver. So with an automobile. The proper shifting of gears and application of power at the proper times determine the efficiency and life of the whole mechanism.

In the hands of an untrained person, a highest grade automobile will depreciate rapidly and be in need of constant repair, while the trained operator will keep the same car in perfect condition for years. The real pleasure in motoring is in knowing how to drive properly, being confident to make repairs in the case of necessity. Most operators make the mistake of running the car until it breaks and then "have the car fixed." Like the human being, the automobile is made up of a number of working parts, each having a part to carry to perform, and these must be kept in tune with each other. Unnecessary expense and annoyance can often be avoided by owning how to make minor adjustments. The motorist who is a frequent applicant of the repair man or dealer is much more economical than the repair shop.

BOOSTING GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

Governor O'Neil of Alabama Says Every State Should Contribute.

The setting aside each year of one or two days for the purpose of appropriating money or labor to the cause of good roads, said A. Sebelling, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, "is a fitting suggestion, which, if carried out will aid materially in promoting the good roads movement."

"Governor O'Neil of Alabama certainly has the nail on the head when he included this in a recent proclamation," says Mr. Sebelling. "If every State would take this step, and its citizens contribute enthusiastically and liberally splendid results would be achieved. A large per cent of cost would be added to the public's present attitude toward this question if they could only realize the beneficial results that would be derived from this concerted action.

"Not only should the farmer be interested in such a move, for the benefit the results would afford him in transporting his products to market, but also the suburbanite who commutes every day by automobile or motorcycle between the city and his home."

A NOVEL TYPE OF MOTOR VEHICLE

Speeding Causes Most Accidents

"A large per cent of the automobile accidents could be avoided if the proper precautions were taken," says L. C. Rockell, manager tire department, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio.

"One of the greatest dangers is when an auto chauffeur driving a rear car tries to make the one in front turn his head on one side of the forward car or direct his front into the other machine. Most accidents occur which, in the driver of the rear car, is not within his control.

"Another time when passing machines in the street is when from the rear, two cars come up, one behind the other, and the second passes the machine in front of the first in the effort to see the other car. The road until nearly upon him. The result is an accident."

Public Is Wise in Motor Affairs

"There are few people today," says George E. Daniels, vice-president of the Oakland Motor Car Company, "who are not intimately acquainted with the motor car in the making as well as the finished product. It can be safely said that there is no other manufacturing enterprise in which the ordinary man holds such a great interest. This is due primarily to the extent to which the motor car has entered the daily life of the people. But the policy of the manufacturers themselves, in opening their doors to the public, has also had its effect.

"At the Oakland plant we entertain in a month people to make a small sized community. Some are Oakland owners acquiring information concerning their cars, others are prospective purchasers, while a great many others apparently have no immediate interest. But none fail to be impressed by the wonders of modern car building.

"And it is surprising the number of women we conduct through the buildings. There are even more curious about the running than the men. They also seem to have a grasp of mechanical details to a far greater extent than they are commonly credited with."

Truck Opens New Field to Merchant

That the man who can acquire the purchase of a light motor truck to [illegible] cause it can be operated at [illegible] than enough horses and wagons to [illegible] the same amount of [illegible] sidering only one advantage [illegible] and a secondary one at that [illegible] tion of G. W. Bennett, [illegible] the Willys-Overland company of [illegible], Ohio. The principal recommendation of the light truck, such as the [illegible] three-quarter ton vehicle [illegible] produces, is that it will [illegible] new business.

He calls attention to the [illegible] the owner of a comparatively [illegible] in the suburbs of a large [illegible] fronting him since the motor [illegible] come into general use. [illegible] fresh and wholesome as if [illegible] is as attractive as cleanliness [illegible] order can make it. His clerks [illegible] prompt and polite as before. [illegible] business falls off.

And then, sooner or later [illegible] if he is widewaked, and the [illegible] powers of observation are [illegible] learns that the bigger man [illegible] the same line of business [illegible] motor trucks in the [illegible] department. And, solely because [illegible] the large firm is getting his [illegible] downtown rival can deliver [illegible] less time than can the smaller [illegible] chant who still depends on [illegible] and wagons, and it is this promptness that the best class of customers demand. So matter how the suburban storekeeper speeds up his horse and wagon delivery system, he cannot hope to compete with the truck. It is a case of mechanical power and endurance against that of the horses, and the mechanical invariably wins.

Treats Kerosene With Peroxide

Auto Manufacturer Declares Smoke, Odor and Carbon Are Eliminated.

Kerosene treated with peroxide of hydrogen has been carried [illegible] tion in a fuel for motor [illegible] by George B. Selden, the Rochester automobile manufacturer. According to Mr. Selden kerosene when treated with peroxide will vaporize and burn freely and completely in the cylinders, developing as much power and using no more fuel as gasoline. He declares that the process can be carried out by [illegible] a drug store from the [illegible] handling it himself.

The test was made using [illegible] per cent of peroxide to [illegible] kerosene, and gives from the [illegible] test as proof. He declares that the process can be carried out for [illegible] a gallon from the [illegible] handling it himself.

To Mr. "D—g Thomas"

A prominent Business Man ... for many years has ... suits and coats made by a Fashionable Tailor at fashionable tailors' prices—$75.00 for a suit $75.00 for a coat.

He was in this store when we held this sale last year. More in a sense of banter than seriousness, he quizzed the head of the department. He didn't believe we could actually deliver a suit at $18.75 that he would be willing to wear.

But that's all the men of the clothing department want a chance to show this proposition to a man who is willing to save money if he doesn't have to sacrifice other things. This Business Man was shown the suitings, which doubtless came from the same mills—or competing mills—as the materials from his Fashionable Tailor.

Further—

It was pointed out that the designer of these clothes was without doubt a far higher salaried designer than the man who designed his Fashionable Tailors' clothes—because he is one of the leading men's tailor designers in this country. He was shown the custom tailor appearance of the finished suits at $18.75. He overheard the expressions of satisfaction of men who ordered their clothes in this corresponding sale last year. And before he left

He ordered 2 suits
He ordered 1 coat.

"I never would have believed it," he afterwards said when he got the clothes.

He was more proud of this purchase than he had been of his Fashionable Tailors' clothes, because these last clothes looked the part of the Custom Tailor. They were satisfactory—and on two suits and the coat at $18.75 each or $56.25 compared to his Fashionable Tailor's total charge of $225.00, he had actually saved $168.75—most of which was for the Fashionable Tailor's Name.

We don't charge you for the name. That's the difference. This custom order sale ends Sept. 13 at 12 o'clock noon.

"Dan Cupida, De Boss of Love"

By Leo Carrillo,
Favorite Vaudeville Comedian

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Re-

DEES time I gonna tole you 'bout dis gran' teeng whatta everybod' ketch in his system, later or so soon. What I gonna spring on you is LOVE—da divine pass!

Everybod' gotta da love some time, an' he break out lak da measles, only some time some people have toughа skin.

Da boss of love is a leetla angel, called Dan Cupida. So smarta littla geek you no know. He's gotta da Broadway wisa guy beeta forta tousan ways, and believa me, he's gotta trouble of his own.

Love is a game much older dan da seven-up or pinochle. Dan Cupida inventa da game, an' causa all da trouble what we got in dees world today.

One time, so long ago you forget, a skirta name Venus—she want da excite, so she get up da big six day race on da foot. Every bod' run in dat race. All droppa out but two tougha guys—Achilla an' William Tella. Dey gettа ready for da he ga dash. Da one who wina da last sprint with da prize a gold appla, heavy lak anythеengs.

Venus, she putty wise, an' she looka out for da double cross—no can trust nobod'. So she seen' for a beeg duda call Paris. Paris, he's a purty guy. Best looka fellow what you never see, but terribla four-flusha. Venus she mak Paris da stakehold and judga of da race.

Paris, he's all puffa up, cause dees job bringa him right to do front where all da girls can see him. He call up da two fast runners an' maid da beeg speech, and tella dem not to make troubia—no cheata.

"Dees race ees to be on da leavla an' may da besta man win da golda ap," he say.

"Shoot it all—say whena," dey shouta to Paris.

Now all dees time, Dan Cupida ees watkin' round an' he's looka ver' wise. He keepa da eye on Paris an da golda ap. He smoka da beeg cigar and he's gotta da twinkla in da eye. Bimby he stroll right up in front of Paris on da starta line.

"Ona da mark!" call Paris. Achill and William Tella set for da big spring, but Paris nevre say da word, "Go!" Just as he's gone say it, Dan Cupida shout:

Poor Paris falla for da bunk. He's turn 'round so queeck da golda ap fall out his hand an' whata you teenk? Dan Cupida reach down an' grabba da gold ap 'n' run lak anteenges. He's mak a bullet look lak da fast mail on da Erie.

How so fas' Danna run I dunno. He keep looka over da shoul'. All da time he see big band of pawnbrokes what leada da chase. Dan is littla fellow an' soon he's getta purty winda. He's tak look again. Da pawnbrokes still leada. Dan say:

"I'm frora Weesconsin you gotta give me da look," say Tella. He's try keepa Dan's goata, but Dan only smile lak dis teeng.

"Where ees Achilles?" ask Dan.

"On da jobba," say Adam, an' Achill elbow da pawnbrokes all over da lot.

"Well, looka here, young fellow," say Dan. "I gonna give you one chance to breaka even, too. As da things stand, I gotta da golda ap. I gonna keep him if I can, but I give you da chance. We draw da straw, and dis one who getta shortest one must go stay under da tree with da golda ap on da head. Da other two will shoota at da ap. Da one who hits da ap first will keep it for himself."

So Willie and Achill say:

"Dan, go so far what you lak, you doan look a laka da crook. We talk your word."

So dey draw da straw. Achill he's getta first look at wattha; I mean. He's puka out da leetle one!

"Sacramento Chimon!" yella Achill, "We gotta bum luck!"

So Willyum Tella an' Dan Cupida dey go da haw an' arrow an' getta ready for da turkey shoot. Dan he's have da big rep for a shoot with da bow an' arrow. Mr. Carlyle Wimpus, the sculper, who is doing a statue of October Noon here, has been called back a week earlier than he expected to his position in the meat department of the Star Department Store.

Myles Jibson, the artist, will be here another week, as he sold one of his pictures. He was painting it beside the road when a tourist automobile skidded into it and ruined it, and Mr. Jibson made the man pay for it. Mr. Jibson always paints beside the highway now, just around a sharp curve. In this manner he hopes to sell another picture. # The Hunters Wind Up the Summer Season

By LEWIS ALLEN.

Copyright, 1913 by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

"We are not going to the Speedwells this week, they are both in the hospital on account of a careless engineer running a whole railroad train into their brand new automobile," announced Mrs. Hunter

"That's too bad," replied Mr. Hunter, looking as though some one had left him a million dollars, "but then, we can manage to be quite comfortable, having a week-end right in our own home. I haven't been home on a Sunday for so long I don't know how it seems, and"——

"But we are going to the Eaton Benton-Johnsons at Natureburg," Mrs. Hunter complacently announced

"That will be nice," sighed Hunter, with the accents of one who has just been informed by his physician that he has about five days to live.

And so, bright and early Saturday morning, they boarded the luxurious cardboard parlor car "Gossamer" on the New Haven line, and went to Natureburg. Hunter was no coward, besides, he had just paid up his insurance policy

Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson, the famous naturalist who splattered daubs of ink on clean white paper, called them bear tracks, wrote about them and got real money for it, met the Hunters himself in his car.

Little Willie Hunter sat on a low seat in front of his mother. Suddenly he reached down by her feet and picked up something that writhed and squirmed.

"Oh, ma! Look what I found!" exclaimed Willie

Mrs. Hunter looked. Then she emitted a staccato howl.

"Throw that dashed snake out!" ordered Hunter

"Dear me, no; don't hurt Aristotle," [illegible]ton-Benton-Johnson "He's very intelligent and he loves to [illegible] And he carefully took the snake from Willie and [illegible]

"How dare you pick up that snake?" [illegible] Hunter of Willie.

"Your boy will become a great naturalist, I hope, he seems to have none of the absurd fear of snakes so many have." And Eaton-Benton-Johnson patted Willie approvingly

"Willie, don't you touch any of Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson's snakes, you might hurt them," commanded his mother, with a sort of I-will-wallop-you-when-I-get-you home young man expression on her pale features.

"Oh, no, I am sure this young man couldn't hurt a snake or a bug, would he?" smiled Mr E-B-J

"Naw, I like 'em!" boasted Willie

And so they sped merrily along through the country road. Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson had his eyes everywhere except upon the road; as a consequence the car wriggled along much like a snake. Suddenly Mr. E-B-J. stopped the car with such promptness that Hunter banged his shins against the forward seat, and Mrs. Hunter fell on Willie. But E.B-J. didn't look around. He merely picked up a small net and exclaimed, as he dashed down the road

"There's an extremely rare orthapterous viridisamus back there"

"Aw, git offen me, Ma; I wan't'er go help him catch that 'thopus ditmus thing," wailed Willie, struggling out [illegible]

Mrs. Hunter leaped over just in time to [illegible]

"Willie Hunter, you come right back in here. Don't you go chasing around after any of those deadly reptiles and things," and she dragged Willie back.

Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson had left his car in the [illegible] road Other cars coming along were forced to turn away out [illegible] and the drivers made remarks that were not pleasant to hear

Meanwhile they waited The hot sun poured down. There was no shade near. It was long past lunch time. Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson was not in sight. Hunter got out and went back to look for him. When he returned he was considerably peeved

"He's about two miles down the valley, in a meadow, running around in circles and acting as dotty as—as you are about week-end parties," explained Hunter.

By the time Mrs. Hunter was ready to faint with hunger, and Willie had been whipped for finding dear, intelligent "Aristotle," who had wriggled out of E-B-J.'s pocket and gone to sleep behind the cushion, Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson returned. He was fairly dancing with glee and had something in his handkerchief.

"I got it!" he shouted. "I got it!" and he climbed into the auto and reached for a wide-mouth bottle of cyanide which he kept under the seat.

Mrs. Hunter shrank back in alarm. Hunter kept a proper distance, and also kept a strong hold on Willie.

No orthopterous viridisamus was going to bite his son if he knew it!

With the greatest of care Mr. Eaton-Benton-Johnson removed the orthopterous, etc., from his handkerchief and deftly dropped it into the big bottle, where the cyanide fumes did the rest.

"I believe," remarked Mr Eaton-Benton-Johnson, with a patronizing smile, "that the common name is 'grasshopper' but this was an unusual specimen, one of the branceptra family. Note the duo strangulata on either patula."

"Indeed," commented Mrs. Hunter, smiling weakly

Hunter's comment was made sotto voice, we are thankful to say.

When they got to the Eaton Benton Johnson home two St. Bernards, one woodchuck, a small black bear, a tame fox and a weird-looking ant-eater all welcomed them at the same time. Mrs. Eaton-Benton-Johnson was with them

"Excuse my left hand," she said, offering [illegible] "but I got a little snake serum in my right hand and it is rather sore where the doctor cauterized it.

Evidently Mrs. E-B-J. was also a naturalist. Mrs. Hunter wouldn't have touched her right hand for a million

"See!" gleefully exclaimed E-B-J., showing the bottle

"Oh, how perfectly lovely an orthopterous viridisamus." and she left the Hunters fighting off dogs and woodchuck and ant-eaters for five minutes while she examined it. Then they went inside.

The Eaton-Benton-Johnsons had a beautiful home. Mounted elephant heads adorned the hall, panels of snake skins decorated the living room. Case after case of horned toads and scorpions and gila monsters and such things lined the walls.

Mrs. E-B-J. was really a charming woman. One of the maids took a light lunch up to the rooms assigned to the Hunters, and during the remainder of the afternoon they sat on the side porch, fairly comfortable, except when now and then some sort of animal would cavort up to them and demand to be petted.

Mrs. Hunter was half way through with it when she just closed her eyes, moaned once and collapsed.

In the evening they had dinner. It was a splendid dinner. Mrs. Hunter was half way through with it when she just closed her eyes, moaned once and collapsed

"Where izzit? Where izzit?" shrieked Mrs. Hunter

Finally it was learned that "Leander," one of the very nicest of pet snakes, had dropped from the table leg into Mrs. Hunter's lap and curled up for a sleep.

"Leander is so affectionate," explained Mrs. Eaton-Benton-Johnson.

Mrs. Hunter just dabbled with the remainder of the dinner and kept looking under the table and under her chair, and when Hunter nudged her with his foot to call her attention to something Willie was doing he should not do she leaped straight into the air, thinking a boa constrictor had got her.

But aside from that the dinner passed without anything unusual.

When Mrs. Hunter got into bed that night she got right out again. She sort of slid in one side and out the other, as water would slide off a duck's back. Her shouts brought Mrs. Eaton-Benton Johnson.

"If—if it's another snake I think I shall die!" wailed Mrs. Hunter

"Now, I'll bet it's Diana, she's so cute," said Mrs. Eaton-Benton-Johnson.

"Is—is Diana a—a humming bird or just a little pet crocodile?" asked Hunter from behind a screen where he had hastened when the hostess came in. It is possible there was a trace of sarcasm in his voice, but Mrs. E-B-J. didn't notice it. She went to the bed, reached under the clothes and pulled out a small, dark animal that seemed something between a weasel and a rat.

"There, I told you so! It is Diana! Now, wasn't that just cute of her?" asked Mrs. E-B-J.

"Who—what is Diana?" asked Mrs. Hunter, eyeing the animal coldly.

"Good land!" exclaimed Mrs. Hunter

"Good night!" echoed Hunter.

"They are commonly known as mongoose. They kill snakes. We have trained Diana so she won't harm one of our snakes, which is very remarkable. Good night."

"I hope so—ah, yes, good night," answered Mrs. Hunter. Then she turned to her husband.

"John Hunter, if you'll sneak out to-morrow and telephone Aunt May in the city to wire me to come at once on account of illness I'll never, never drag you to another week-end party as long as I live!"

CHAPTER I.

N. G. EVERMOORE sat in his luxurious office when a messenger boy arrived with a dime novel.

After searching his pockets he found a message for Mr. Evermoore

Our luckless hero read the message.

First, however, he opened it.

It read:

"Report that your wife eloped is untrue. She has returned to your house. D. Decktive."

Our hapless hero swooned.

"WHERE am I?"

N. G. Evermoore asked this question.

In this chapter he has recovered consciousness, but that is about all. Naturally we made him ask, "Where am I?" Had we not made him say this we would have lost our membership card in Humorists' Union 777.

He looked to see what time it was.

His $200 watch was gone.

Forty-five thousand dollars in cash, his diamond ring and stud and his tobacco were in the same place as his watch.

Gwendoline, his stenographer, was also gone

CHAPTER III.

N. G. Evermoore read these words on his ticker tape:

Wiped out!

He had lost every cent. He also was now in debt some seven million.

CHAPTER IV.

"COURT has allowed petition of your first wife for doubling of alimony," telephoned Lawyer Botchett.

You have one guess—yes, he was talking to N. G. Evermoore, but as he talked a servant rushed into N. G.'s office, wet and blackened

"Three of your cars have burned up, the chauffeur has eloped with the parlor maid and stolen your fourth and best car, the house has just burned down and nothing of value was saved—in fact, everything was burned except your wife," said the servant.

CHAPTER V.

"DEAR me," remarked N. G. Evermoore, a week later, "I seem to be having a spell of hard luck," and he picked up the paper and began to read it in order to take his mind off the new little incidents that had been annoying him.

"Home team loses again," was one headline.

N. G. Evermoore broke down and wept. He could stand ordinary drawbacks, but this was too much.

"Mrs. N. G. Evermoore has become a Militant Suffragette!"

CHAPTER VI.

He knew.

"Good bye all. Fate is too much for me. I know it is cowardly, but it cannot be helped. I am about to commit suicide

Then—note the iron nerve of this poor man—he went forth, bought a ticket to New York over the New York, New Haven & Hartford line, took his seat in a parlor car, and ended it all.

CHAPTER VII.

THEY only found part of him!

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription, othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove those homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any of the Hoke-Jaynes drug stores and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Police Dogs

Marvelous Work Done by the Highly Trained Sleuths.

BY KARL KUMYESS.

KUCHENBRENNER, Aug. 30.—To-day I saw the trials of the famous German police dogs.

A man was shot—a wooden bullet being used so that he wouldn't be hurt too much—and Hans, a Potsdam police pup, was released. He rushed up to the injured man, but the moment the dog's keen nose told him the bullet was of wood, not lead, the intelligent animal refused to participate further. Hans knew there was some fake about the affair.

Fritz followed the man to a barn where his quarry was in hiding. As the dog could not gnaw through the door, he set fire to the barn, and in a moment the flames drove out the burglar. The dog chased him five miles down the road, but could not gain on the fugitive. Accordingly Fritz barked up a taxi and bit the chauffeur savagely until the man started his car after the burglar, who was caught after a brief chase.

Another burglar fired a revolver at Karl, a Koenigsburg cop hound, but the active and cagey animal caught the bullet in its teeth, thus saving himself from injury, and holding the bullet as evidence.

"He Can't Live On His Salary"

Being a Few Bright Spots From "The Merry Martyr," Now Playing at the Colonial Theatre

DON VINCENTO DE BAZAN (played by Maclyn Arbuckle) is Civil Governor of the Province of Vallamadoosa. He is also a bogus patriot who cannot live on his salary. In order to get funds from the central government he incites imaginary revolutions and pockets the money sent to him for their suppression.

In the Province of Vallamadoosa there is a band of peaceful revolutionists who are evidently too tame for the job, for they confine their operations to petitions and prayers.

A young revolutionist has been arrested by Captain Pablo of the Civil Guard and the people call upon the Governor to demand his release. He meets them with protestations of love for the common people. His speech to the citizens, in which he is helped by his private secretary, Antonio (played by Denman Maley) is one of the most amusing scenes in the play.

MONICA: Captain Pablo has left no one on guard. We'll have another try at the Governor. (Knocks on the door of the Governor's palace.)

(Antonio, the Governor's secretary, enters. He is greeted with cries of "The Governor." He placidly signals for silence.)

ANTONIO: One moment. Silence, please, silence.

MONICA: (To students.) Be quiet. This gentleman has something to say to us.

ANTONIO: I am His Excellency's secretary. Owing to my close personal association with him I am able to inform you that he is asleep.

MONICA: Will you take a message from us?

ANTONIO: He is asleep. (Students jeer vigorously.) For that I shall return to His Excellency and tell him he needn't wake up.

MONICA: Don't do that. We apologize.

CROWD: Long live Don Vincento! Hurrah for His Excellency.

(Don Vincento, the Governor, comes from house, struts down centre of stage and poses. His general make-up resembles Secretary of State Bryan. A roll is carried behind his back, the other is thrust into his bosom. (Students all show deference. At this moment Pablo, who is military and evil, rushes excitedly on.)

GOVERNOR: In my slumber I heard the voice of the common people calling to me. I am here at your service. What do they want?

PABLO: (Angrily) What these misguided natives want—

GOVERNOR: (Halting Pablo) Misguided, did you say? (To Antonio, his secretary). Antonio, your methods. Gently, Captain Pablo, if they are misguided we must show them the right path and save them from stumbling. It is our sacred duty to lift up the common people and to hold them up when—(Antonio takes notes of speech.)

MONICA: (Presents Governor with petition.) Your Excellency, a thousand pardons——

GOVERNOR: (Coldly), I am not that kind of a Governor.

PABLO: (Indignantly), A young revolutionist——

GOVERNOR: (With sudden and vivid interest). Where?

PABLO: Here in Vallamadoosa. Can you believe it——

GOVERNOR: Antonio, our note book. Where [illegible]

GOVERNOR: The [illegible] seems [illegible] Estaban.

PABLO: [illegible] the Cafe Sagesta [illegible] but a week [illegible] made [illegible]

GOVERNOR: What [illegible]

PABLO: (Offended) When I went to the cafe to arrest Estaban I did not expect to leave the place alive.

GOVERNOR: I am sorry you were disappointed.

PABLO: As Estaban waved the red flag and rallied upon the patrons of the cafe to declare for a republic I seized him, there was a struggle, several people were slightly injured.

GOVERNOR: In the Cafe Sagasta.

PABLO: Our principal restaurant.

GOVERNOR: A dangerous place. I have been injured there myself internally. Well, Captain Pablo, what do you think I should think of your action?

PABLO: I did my duty.

GOVERNOR: (Dramatically) Duty? To turn a bit of carnival nonsense into a tragedy. Duty? Antonio, get every word of this—to arrest an impulsive lad for a little outburst of high spirits? (Murmur of admiration from the students.) To crush the innocent enthusiasm of a band of light-hearted young people? (Bows to students.) To offend —— (To Antonio.) Am I going too fast? (Antonio shakes head.) To offend the star-eyed spirit of Liberty and cause her to avert her face from the land which holds the newest temple? No, a hundred times no!

ANTONIO: (Writing) Applause. (Students applaud.)

GOVERNOR: No, a thousand times, no!

ANTONIO: (Writing) Applause and cheers. (Students applaud and cheer.)

GOVERNOR: (Hoping for further results) No, ten thousand times, no! (The students do not respond.)

ANTONIO: (Writing) Period.

A STUDENT: Our petition prays for Estaban's release!

GOVERNOR: Granted. Captain Pablo, set the boy free at once. (Students cheer.)

GOVERNOR: (To Antonio, explosively) What luck! The meddling tin soldier. A riot nearly under way and that miserable Pablo interferes and spoils everything. Another week of this confounded quiet and we may as well prepare for our arrest.

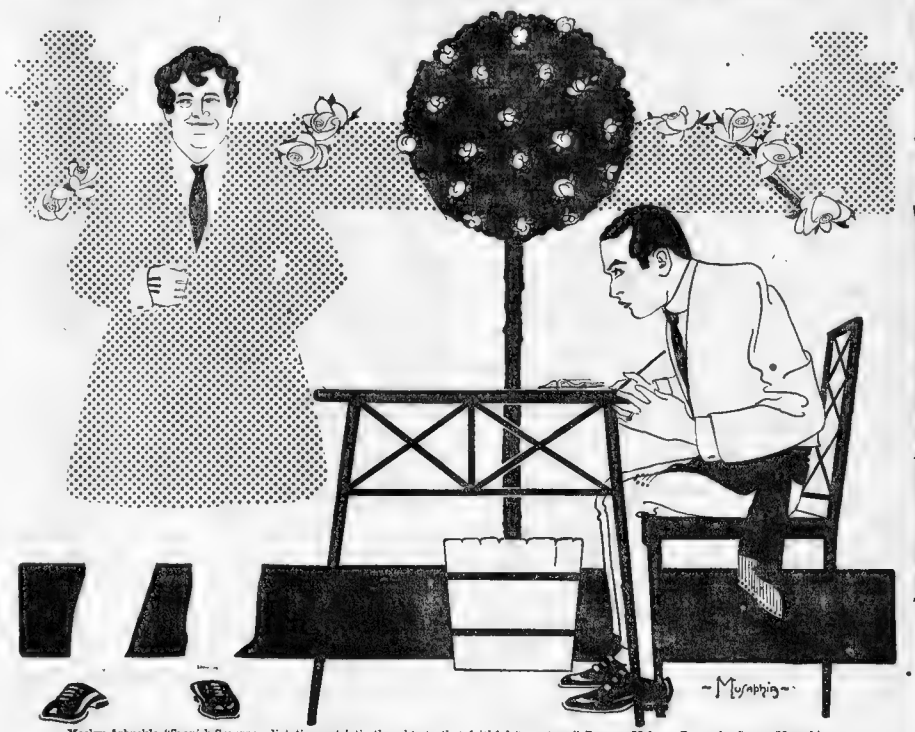
ANTONIO: (With surprise) Our arrest?

GOVERNOR: If the government ever catches us we'll be in the same boat.

ANTONIO: What boat?

GOVERNOR: The first one that leaves Spain. Look. (Reads newspapers in his hand.) This paper again attacks the government and says that great sums of money have been sent here to me to suppress a revolution that doesn't exist.

ANTONIO: That isn't news to us.



Maclyn Arbuckle, "Spanish Governor, dictating patriotic thoughts to that faithful "secretary," Denman Maley. Drawn by George Musaphia.

GOVERNOR: It says that reports have been made to Madrid of uprisings that never uprose and that small fortunes have been sent to me to put them down.

ANTONIO: That's right, I wrote the reports.

GOVERNOR: And I signed them. Antonio, what's to be done?

ANTONIO: We must make a brilliant and audacious step.

GOVERNOR: Our next step may be the lock-step. Think of the riots and explosions for which we've collected damages, think of the money for extra police we never engaged!

ANTONIO: Why remember? With the witness stand so near, don't you think we better practice forgetting.

ANTONIO: Will you have the great idea yourself or trust me for it?

GOVERNOR: I had the last one, it's your turn this time, and believe me, Antonio, nothing short of a miracle will answer!

ANTONIO: A miracle. I shall have to think.

GOVERNOR: Meanwhile, who's that dispatch from?

ANTONIO: (Looking at dispatch) The Minister of State is worried by your last letter and wants to know if he should send you the army?

GOVERNOR: Army! (Alarmed) He must get that idea out of his head at once. Take this reply. (Antonio takes notes.) "Your Excellency. The friends of riots and anarchy will find in me a fearless foe. In every action of my life I obey absolutely nothing but the voice of my conscience. To all other voices, I am stone deaf."

(Donna Estrellita, the Governor's wife, enters, followed by Juanita, who carries a striped green and white Spanish shawl cape, the sort worn by men.)

GOVERNOR: What is it, Estrellita, my heart?

DONNA E: I shall need that chair and table. You make take your work into the garden.

GOVERNOR: (Importantly) I am in the midst of a letter to the Minister of State.

DONNA E.: (Imperiously) You may take your work into the garden.

GOVERNOR: (To Antonio) (Stopping at exit) Let me see—where did you leave me?

ANTONIO: (Glancing at note book) Stone deaf. Proceed I have no fear—

DONNA E.: (Sternly to Governor) Did you hear me?

GOVERNOR: Perfectly. (To Antonio) Antonio, take your work into the garden. (Pause) Did you hear me? (Pause.)

ANTONIO: Perfectly.

(Antonio and Governor go into the garden.)

Washington, D. C.—Individual identification of the many officials of the Post Office Department was wiped out today, and hereafter official titles alone will identify the heads of divisions.

Postmaster-General Burleson has prohibited the addressing of his subordinates as Mr. Brown or Mr. Jones. If Mr. Brown happens to be First Assistant Postmaster-General, Mr. Burleson wants him addressed as "First Assistant." And if Mr. Jones is the Fourth Assistant, he wants Mr. Jones so addressed solely and not as Mr. Jones.

The rule applies even to routine memoranda from the Department.—News Item.

UPON reaching the Post Office Department we looked for Postmaster-Generalissimo Burlesqueson, but the Second Assistant Door-Tender of the East Entrance informed us that "Mr." Burlesqueson was not in.

The Second Assistant Door-Tender of the East Entrance was promptly discharged by the Seventh Sub-Acting Assistant Postmaster, who chanced to overhear him use that fatal word "Mister."

Postmaster-Generalissimo Burlesqueson is at present engaged in a conference with Curator-of-the-Ossified-Wood Department of the Smithsonian Institution," the Seventh Sub-Acting Assistant Postmaster informed us.

Hiding our chagrin, with the accent on the last four letters, we made our way into the Post Office and began our investigation. The Superintendent of Waste Baskets was telephoning the Head-Filler-of-Fountain Pens for the Secretary of the Interior, and not daring to interfere with State matters, we passed on to the second floor, where we saw the Assistant Chief Clerk of the Rubber Stamp Department of Fourth Class Postmasters.

"We learned," we timidly began addressing the A. C. C. of the R. S. D. of F. C. P.'s, "that——"

"What's that?" the A. C. C. of the R. S. D. of F. C. P.'s asked us, snarply. Being somewhat peeved we forgot our usual aplomb and laissez faire, to say nothing our our hauteur and decisage sang froid, and we blurted out:

"Is Mr. Wilson—we mean Mr. President, in the building?"

"If you refer to the President of the United States of America and Alaska and Hawaii and Porto Rico and Guam and the Philippines, I must inform you that I have no knowledge," he replied, "but you might ask the Supervisor of the Department of Cancelled Money Orders."

We thanked him and we hunted up the S. of the D. of C. M. O. He was extremely pleasant. He admitted that he didn't know but that the Transporter of Coal to the Third Fire-Box to the Left in the Post Office Department Basement had a cousin who was Substitute Fifth Assistant Custodian of Printed Forms in the Department of Parcel Post Zone Information Literature, and by this means we might secure an introduction to the Chief Operator of the Forepoon Shift Attached to the Telephone Switchboard, who would then connect us with the Acting Eighteenth Assistant Clerk in the Query Department, and from him we might secure the desired information.

By this time we were in a delirium. But we managed to assemble until no one would have suspected our hapiness. We hunted the T. of C. to the T. F. B. to the L. in the P. O. D. B who kindly got in touch with his cousin, the S. F. A. C. of P. F. in the D. of P. P. Z. I. E. and this gentleman introduced us to the C. O. of the F. S. A. to the T. S. who connected us with the A. F. A. C. in the Q. D., and in this manner we learned that the President of the United States of America and Alaska and Hawaii and Porto Rico and Guam and the Philippines was not in the Post Office Department Building.

As we made our exit past the Temporary Second Assistant Door Tender of the East Entrance, we overheard Postmaster-Generalissimo Burlesqueson greet three men who had just come in from their noonday lunch.

How do-do Stenographer to the Private Secretary of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster, and the Acting Chief Clerk of the Substitute Accountant to the Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Postage Due Statistics and also to the Tenth Assistant to the Temporary Acting Manager of the Department of——"

But we had to hurry away without hearing Postmaster-Generalissimo Burlesqueson finish his pleasant greeting to the three men, for it was getting quite dark, and we had promised to dine with a plain "Mister."

JUST FOR FUN

Copyright 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

A WONDROUS little maid was Sue.
So soft and shy and cozy;
With twinkling eyes of darkest blue.
And velvet cheeks so rosy.

Yet somehow all the other maids
Did not appreciate her;
They never lost a chance, the jades,
To backbite and berate her.

Which was because—so I infer—
The lass so sweet and lissom,
Had all the fellows fond of her
Because she liked to kissom.

BREAKING A BAD HABIT.

"I SEE you have brought your dear old-fashioned father to the Catskills again this season, Miss Sue."

"Oh, yes, Miss Peck, we could hardly get along without papa, even if his manners are horrid."

"In what way?"

"Why, now he invariably uses his fork."

"Yes, yes, you see, we bribe the waiter to put soap on papa's knife."

UNIVERSITY SAUSAGES

AT a meeting in New York of some well-known newspaper men, the talk turned upon humors of everyday advertising. One gave the following as his selection of the most amusing form of an ad. he had encountered. It appeared in several London dailies, and ran thus:

"Having been so fortunate as to obtain the services of a university man for our small goods department, we are now prepared to furnish real Cambridge and Oxford sausages at three pounds for one shilling."

SUPPORT

"SO you got married? And you earning but $13 a month?"

"Certainly; I couldn't live on that."

A TESTIMONIAL.

717 South Soap Suds street, City.

Gentlemen—In the main your work is excellent; but there are a few laundry points in which you do not yet excel. I enumerate:

Your rough-edging and fraying department has deteriorated; my collars and cuffs merely irritate in patches where they once cut complete red circles around my neck and wrists.

Your button smashers entirely neglected one shirt, and only half-removed the fastenings on my underwear last week.

Through some careless error in your mixing room, two of the eight shirts you sent me this week were my size; and one of them I am almost positive is my own. This is inexcusable.

On the other hand, for the person who supervises your Color Scheme Department, I have the most profound admiration. Not once in the last year have my pajamas been the same shade any two consecutive weeks.

The good taste shown in your handkerchief assortments is surprising. Often I have sent you a dozen squares of plain white fabric and gotten back seven—sometimes eight—kerchiefs so well selected that I could mourn, gamble or flag a train, as I chose.

No buttonhole, however humble, ever comes back from you without having doubled in size; your seam rippers and sock fraziers are admirable workmen, and your institution has always returned, carefully any article of apparel which I particularly desired never to see again.

Once more, expressing my appreciation of your unobtrusively superior laundry service, I remain, e.s., respectfully,
GEORGE MARTIN.

MOTHER WOULD BE INTERESTED

A LITTLE Baltimore girl, aged seven, was not long since visiting some cousins in Baltimore County. One afternoon a momentous announcement was made to these Richt cousins.

"Children," said the mother with solemn gravity, "you have a new brother and a new baby brother."

"And now, children," said she, in her turn, "you must run and tell your mamma."

Afraid of Her Shadow.

POLITE SUBSTITUTE

A BEE stung a fellow named Cadye
Who was out for a ride with some ladies.
He arose with a yell
And exclaimed, "Oh——" well
Don't be shocked, he only said "Hades."

NO GARAGES THERE

WHILE the motor-car industry has enriched our language by a variety of terms, certain of which are now household words, it appears that there is at least one man who has never heard the most common of these additions. Moreover, this gentleman serves his country in the capacity of postmaster in a Maryland town.

A motorist from Washington, who, during the course of a Southern tour, desired to stay over in this town, wrote to the postmaster to ascertain whether he might secure accommodations for his car, in a word, whether there were any garages in the town. He received the following reply:

"Dear Sir—In reply to your favor of the 10th inst., I beg to say that no person of the name mentioned in your letter gets any mail at this office. The nearest to it is a family of Gammages who live on the Bladensburg Pike."

YANKEE SONDER BOAT SKIPPERS BEAT GERMAN RIVALS IN BIG CUP RACES

Ellen Takes Fourth Contest, Eliminating Visitors From Further Competition, Leaving Battle for Two Principal Yachting Trophies of Year to American Trio—Races Again Tomorrow.

Heavy Weather and Light Wind Bothers Skippers and Race Becomes Drifting Match—Wittlesbach X Is Forced to Withdraw After Vain Attempt to Get Into the Running in Last Race

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

CHARLES P. CURTIS,
Owner of the racer Ellen

MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 6.—The two principal yachting trophies of the year, President Wilson and Governor Foss cups, will stay right in America.

The German sonders that have been trying to lift these cups for the past week failed, and in the races made a sorry showing against the American trio of Massachusetts boats.

The Germans were eliminated in today's race, the fourth of the series, and the field is now open for the Ellen, Cima, and Sprig to fight it out for the two cups.

| | |
|---|---|
| Ellen | 2 races |
| Cima | 1 race |
| Sprig | 1 race |

The standing of the boats for the Governor Foss Cup:

| | |
|---|---|
| Ellen | 21 points |
| Cima | 20 points |
| Sprig | 19 points |

The Wilson cup cannot be won by Cima. The race Monday between Ellen and Sprig will mean who will have the Foss cup.

How the Series Stands.

If Ellen and Sprig is eliminated Ellen wins the Foss Cup. If Ellen wins Monday she will take the Wilson Cup and the Cima and Sprig will run Tuesday for the Foss Cup. But if Sprig beats Ellen it is a stand off.

The best of sailing weather conditions prevailed the past week. It has developed the most suitable breeze that could be desired for the test of the German sonders. The Germans were feared after the first race. The boats were of a type the American sailors had considered some what out of date. The German sailors themselves had that in order to win and the Yankees would produce no fast boats for the purpose of racing the Germans have not won.

Skippers Want Real Race.

No fear of the Yankee sailors getting bad air. It is the hope now of every yachtsman that Monday will see some real racing weather in place of a repetition of Saturday.

Again, the knowledge of current was a potent factor in the result on the waters of the Marblehead Circle. Each time Sprig was ahead on the second leg she was blown by her rival during the first half hour of the race.

At the start the wind was blowing about three knots. In Sprig and Angelica appeared to be the one best suited to any change.

The Ellen crossed the line second, and when the startling whistle blew she pulled in hard to the committee boat and swung over the line with a good start. She immediately turned to starboard tack, heading for the Spit.

The Sprig and Angelica were next on the windward tack. They ranged about a quarter of a mile. The Sprig and Wittlesbach X were the last to cross.

Cavanaugh Beaten by Spears at Revere

Cavanaugh Spears defeated Irving Fay among the best contests in the card match race at the Revere track last night. Two heats and a final were run.

Fay lagged at the start, but won the two professionals, events.

Pete Lagrave was returned the winner in the motor paced race. Moran was second and Carman third. Lagrave was leading at the end of the twenty-first mile and a tire puncture forced him to quit the track and he had no extra tire. He was unable to continue.

Langford Arrested on Civil Warrant

Sam Langford and had to meet Johnson for the world's long lease-weight championship, was arrested yesterday at his training quarters in North Reading by Deputy Sheriff Joseph Burk of Woburn on a civil warrant sworn out by B. H. Benton, a sporting writer and brought to East Cambridge where the of Langford's friends immediately put up a bond of $3,000. The arrest resulted from a wordy which Benton claims he got against Langford two years ago for $2,800 and which, he charges, has not as yet been settled.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—Despite conditions that were not at all conducive to record breaking performances, the track and field games given by the Emancipation Proclamation commission of Pennsylvania at Point Breeze Park this afternoon were a success. Ten seconds flat was the best time made in the 100-yard dash, but Drew, the Springfield flier, who won the event, was given 9 4-5 seconds.

TRAVERS BEATS ANDERSON FOR U. S. GOLF TITLE

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 6.—For the fourth time Jerome D. Travers is the amateur golf champion of the United States. He defeated John G. Anderson of Boston, 1 up, at the end of the thirty-six holes of play in the national championship event today.

Travers was three under par for the first eighteen holes played this morning, while Anderson was one under par. This gave Travers a lead of two strokes at the end of the morning round.

Back in 1907 Travers won his first championship on the links of the Essex County Club at West Orange, New Jersey. He repeated in 1908 at Garden City. Both times he won from the same field at the Garden City Golf Club links, and on the latter he was again a winner.

Walter J. Travis won the championship three times. Travers is the first to gain four victories.

It was a splendid match that Anderson put up today, and Travers had to put the long strain on all and for a time being he gave opponent by two holes.

A brilliant flash of the form for which Travers is famous was the way he finished on the inward journey. At the seventeenth the champion went into the rough only to drop back to even terms when he explored the depths of a deep trap beside the home green.

It was not square when the first nine was over. Just as bad luck to most fell to the champion at the seventh hole. From that on his golf was perfect, gaining every hole in par and, the end came on the 16th green, when Travers made the next hole, in one under par, every green a long putt with it, which had gone down would have given him the match. Anderson could not help but go down fighting, however, and he made a game effort to get even.

His only mistakes on the greens was respectively the first and the second that Anderson took for the three and two holes he got except by missing short and scoring easy putts.

The match began in the morning under ideal conditions and with an unparalleled small crowd to see the early play. Anderson won the first hole, as Travers was [illegible] the second. ## SPRINGFIELD WINS A DOUBLE-HEADER

Massachusetts Team Beats Hartford in Bargain Day Bill in the Eastern.

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 6.—Springfield wound up its season in the Eastern Association race this afternoon by taking two games from Hartford, the pennant winner, the opener by 5 to 2 and making the second 7 to 3. Bunched hits in the fourth and fifth won the first game for the locals. In the second Gear was pounded hard. Catches by Stankard and Lewis and batting of Stankard, Young, McCarthy and Gear featured.

COPPER STOCKS ADVANCED AND WERE THE FEATURE OF THE WEEK-END MARKET

Buying of Shares Inspired by Firmness of Metal Price—Supply of Electrolytic Low—Boston Trading Was Brisk, but Business Was Dull in New York.

By W .H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Sept. 6—With copper at 16½ cents a pound and metal so scarce that "a runaway market" is discussed as possible, if not probable, copper mining issues have at last begun to reflect the refinery situation. This week copper shares have been in more demand than for some time. At its close Amalgamated was at the highest quotation it has attained during the present upward movement, and but 2¼ below the high point of the year.

Strength of coppers, in fact, was the feature of the last session not only in the Boston, but in the New York market as well. Trading in them was very brisk at the opening here today, and a number of issues made gains that were increased later. While several public service corporations were weak, and some leading industrials declined, there were only a few coppers that did not close higher.

All trade reports sustained the optimism which at last inspired share buying. It is expected that the report of the Copper Producers' Association, due on Monday, will tell of further shrinkage in metal supplies. One prediction is that the decrease will be from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds. Minimum estimates range around 5,000,000.

At the close in Boston a number of mining issues had advanced to a notable degree. They were: Allouez 1¼, Calumet & Arizona 1, Superior 1, United States Smelting 1, and Wolverine 3½. Among issues in which there was especially good business were Granby and Isle Royale. Butte & Superior finished a point higher, the re being no reaction after its 2¾ rise on Friday.

New Haven Rose From New Low.

Aside from mining stocks the Boston list was rather weak. United Fruit declined nearly a point and United Shoe's long was 2. Boston Elevated closed at 87¾, off 2. There was no price change for Boston & Maine on a ten share sale, but New Haven sold at a new low in early transactions. It touched 60, off 1⅜ as the result of the announcement that J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. would no longer serve on New York, New Haven & Hartford road bankers. It made a good recovery later in the morning and finished at 61⅝, only ⅛ below Friday's final figure. It closed at its high for the day.

Trading Dull in New York.

Trading was dull in New York all through the forenoon, and the list was adversely affected for a brief period by the sagging of New Haven, which sold as low in that market as in Boston, and did not recover quite as well. Coppers made the best showing of any group. Amalgamated finishing ⅝ and other advances being Anaconda ⅜, American Smelting common ⅝, Guggenheim Copper 1⅛ and Utah Copper 3. Transactions in these issues aggregated 24,800 shares, or nearly one-fifth of the total, and business in Amalgamated was exceeded only by that in Reading and Steel. There was more trading in Chino and Utah Copper than in Union Pacific. There had been considerable demand for Amalgamated in London during this week, but a holiday caused the closing of that market today.

Support from Banking Interests.

The market was uncertain as to trend for a while but soon obtained support which sustained it to the end and caused prices to range a little higher at the close than they did yesterday. It is said that buying by banking interests was a large factor. Aside from that, trading was of a professional character. There was some covering of short contracts when traders got an inkling of the nature of some of the demand.

Little was done in Canadian Pacific because of the London closing. California Petroleum continued to advance. The upward movement in the long favored by the common dividend was passed and is based upon the argument that the worst has happened. An improvement in People's Gas, which ended a point higher, was attributed by Chicago reports that the new share issue would amount to $5,240,000 and rights would be granted on very favorable terms. Another rumor regarding this issue is that the dividend rate may be raised from 7 to 8 per cent. Such speculative issues as Union Pacific, Steel and Reading finished with fractional gains, the former not being influenced much by talk of a cash distribution being a likely aftermath of the sale of Southern Pacific stock. The latter issue was more active than the other Harriman issues and closed. The list as a regular at the close, but stocks which showed gains outnumbered those which declined at a ratio of about two to one. The range of prices, in fact, was narrow, taking the list as a whole.

Trading Sentiment is Better.

It seems to be general belief that sentiment as to stocks is more hopeful, but conditions which should affect securities have not changed to any extent. There is less concern given to this country's relations with Mexico. The bond market has certainly improved and foreign exchange has declined enough to inspire belief that if necessary the money market in this country could obtain foreign succor.

Reports from Washington indicate the tariff bill is near enactment. As to what will be done with the currency measure there is doubt. In financial circles, while its usually well informed, it is thought, despite President Wilson's power over Congress and insistence upon speedy action, that the bill cannot be passed at this session. Banking influence is making itself felt at Washington, and the bill as it stands is distasteful to a powerful Democratic element in the Senate.

The business men of the latter aptly described as "irregular." Crops are going to be much better than was expected and this will reduce purchasing power even if corn, wheat and cotton bring higher prices. A loss of millions of bushels in cereals means a diminution of the country's resources, even if a large amount of foreign profit by it.

General trade is said to be of gratifying volume, but merchants and manufacturers are doing business on close margins. In other branches operations have narrowed. The effects of a new tariff have yet to be experienced.

CORN REPORTS ALL TELL OF DAMAGE

Little Change in the Grain Situation—Traders Disposed to Take Profits.

By J. F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—It may be stated there is little chance in the entire grain situation. Reports continued to pour in from all sections telling of damage to corn, of the remote possibility of a great amount of fall sowing for Winter wheat and small grains on account of the drought, that in some sections the farmers could not plow, even on account of the heat. There were also reports from Iowa which stated that cattle and hogs were being sold. These reports extended to make the situation more tense in the speculative markets, but at the same time there was a small deal of weekend profit taking, in spite of the bullish sentiment which prevails, and this resulted in an all-around lower range of prices.

During the last few days it has been the feeling of the speculative interests in the grain trade that the great damage to corn had been largely discounted and that a reaction from the top levels would produce a healthier market. Trading today in all lines was confined to take their points rather than run the chance of unexpected development over Sunday.

Wheat Removed from Rut.

Wheat received its first inspiration for an advance during the week from the foreign markets which showed a good degree of firmness. Cables stated today that the world's shipments of wheat will be liberal, but not as large as before and this steadied the Liverpool market which, at first, showed an easier tendency. In the last day or two there has been a good shipping inquiry with sales running considerably above the 300,000 bushel market. Practically all of the influences which have made for better prices during the last week are still in effect, so that the decline noted at the close were not in any sense the result of depressed sentiment.

The market was, however, affected more by the weakness of corn than any change in the views of the trade regarding the future of prices.

Corn Strong. Then Weak.

A decline of over a cent was scored in corn. The market started strong, but on heavy profit-taking showed the loss mentioned from the high point of the day and only regained a small portion of it.

Ohio shared the tendency of corn with a decline in values of about half a cent all around, both for the futures in the market and cash property in outside markets.

Trade in provisions was of fair volume and prices showed irregular tendencies. Packing interests were credited with most of the selling of September and October pits. The buying was of general character, with the grain houses conspicuous. The only explanation of the advance in hogs was a sustaining factor, and in a measure offset the influence of the lower grain markets.

BIG SHOE SELLERS.

Neeps Rosenthal & Co. are big shoe sellers. It is estimated that one-tenth of their annual business is in this line of goods and that they dispose of forty-two to the dozen out of 8,000,000 a year. More than half of the shoes they handle are made in their own factories.

COTTON DECLINES AFTER BUSY WEEK

High Prices and Strong Demand Yield to Sales for Margins and Other Bad Factors.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Dealings in the cotton market, in addition to being more active the last week than in any similar period this year, were featured with new high prices for movement, due to a wild rush on the part of shorts following publication of the government report as to the condition of cotton, which was below general expectations and the ten year average.

High Prices for Movement.

High prices for the movement recorded were: October, 13.28; December, 13.20; January, 13.25; March, 13.35, and May, 13.37 representing an advance of about $11 a bale in a little more than two weeks.

The advance had been so rapid that the technical position of the market had become decidedly weak, with the result that prices eased off sharply when many shorts, failing to answer calls for margin, were forced to sell and when it became known that Southern bankers were refusing to carry cotton at the high prices which they would ordinarily be glad to have sold. A very decident demand for cotton from Europe also helped inspire selling.

Tax Amendment Affected Sales.

Prices were down about $2 a bale from the high when the Democratic caucus agreed on the tax amendment of 1-10 of one cent a pound, which, instead of cotton. While it is believed in some quarters that this amendment will not be accepted by the Conference Committee it is certain that the action of the caucus is decidedly unfavorable to the staple.

No material change in weather conditions was reported during the week, dry weather and high temperatures prevailing over the drought afflicted districts.

COTTON PRICES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. At the opening the cotton market was 5 to 21 points higher and after a short selling movement, which appeared to take a more active form, owing to rumors on the idea that the Clark amendment to the tariff bill would ultimately be changed as to permit future trading in some form or other to continue, Senate Democratic leaders were apparently protecting themselves in the Democratic caucus by voting for the amendment, hoping to liberate a few votes from the Democratic ranks. The new month from this to due to closely weather in Southern Texas and Oklahoma, where the crop is reported deteriorating. The bulge was for some and freerish.

UNION PACIFIC "MELON."

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—It is said that several Union Pacific directors favor a cash distribution to stockholders of part of the $73,103,050 the road will receive from the sale of its Southern Pacific stock which had to be disposed of under the United States Supreme Court dissolution decree. This may be taken up when the board of directors meet on September 11. Chairman E. H. Harriman is expected back from Europe on Thursday next.

UNITED STATES FINANCES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The Treasury Department states that the public debt of the United States decreased $9,233,310 during August. The debt less cash in the treasury, was $440,987,828, recapitulated as follows: Interest bearing debt, $965,226,240, upon which interest has ceased, $1,652,120; debt bearing no interest, $375,309,354.

NIPISSING DIVIDEND.

A prominent Nipissing official is quoted as saying that when directors meet with in a fortnight the regular quarterly disbursement of 5 per cent. would be declared, and that an extra dividend of 2½ per cent. was probable. This is contrary to a Montreal dispatch says the 5 per cent. is an extra disbursement is without foundation.

A NEW VALUATION.

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 6.—Directors of the city Manufacturing Co. have been in session since this morning and it is understood that they have decided that the stock of the land, valued machinery, supplies, etc., at inventoried, were too high. The total amount charged off in making this new valuation was $2,000,000. Today's was the profit and loss account of the corporation for 1912.

MR. WINSLOW A DIRECTOR.

Sydney W. Winslow, president of the United Shoe Machinery Company, and a member of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., prominent New England banks and in financial corporations, has been elected a director of the Boston & Maine R. R. Harry H. Rogers's party took place of the late Lucius Tuttle, deceased. A short time ago Mr. Winslow was elected to the Boston & Maine Railroad board.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Bank clearings this week at all leading cities of the United States make quite a satisfactory comparison, the total amounts for the week ended today showing a 17.0 per cent over the same week last year and of 17.0 per cent compared with the corresponding week in 1911.

NEW B. & M. CARS.

The Boston & Maine road has ordered 1000 new freight cars, and half of them are to be of the hot variety. The other 500 will be gondolas. The Keith Car & Manufacturing Company will make the 500 cars and the Pressed Steel Car Company the others. The contracts were awarded upon competitive bidding.

MONEY MARKET.

If there has been any material change in the money market it is a somewhat easier feeling, which is looked for in the Fall months, when rates will stay high for some time. Prime commercial paper is quoted at 5 per cent. Money is said to be generally available for the use of the banks in every district of the country. The Bank of England has increased its rate of discount to 4 per cent., and the Bank of France has increased its rate three months from 3 per cent. to 3½ per cent. Call money is quoted at 4 per cent. in either in the vicinity of a half after exchange. The rate has been from 2½ per cent. to 4 per cent. in New York and this is the quotation in Boston and New York are as follows:

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. The New York banks' statement for the week ended Sept. 6 showed the following changes:

Reserve increase $2,904,150
Loans decrease 9,244,100
Specie increase 1,000,000
Legal tenders increase 1,000,000
Deposits decrease 6,244,100
Circulation decrease 1,000,000

The weekly statement of averages of the banks and trust companies for the week ended Saturday, September 6, 1913, follows:

| | Changes from last week. |
|---|---|
| Loans | Decrease $9,244,100 |
| Specie | Increase 1,000,000 |
| Legal tenders | Increase 1,000,000 |
| Deposits | Decrease 6,244,100 |
| Circulation | Decrease 1,000,000 |

The reserve required is $1,561,025 less than had been anticipated. This is due to the fact that the reserve required on net demand deposits is 13 per cent. instead of 15 per cent. as was the case in the previous week. The actual reserve required is $1,342,975

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

[illegible] years [illegible] September [illegible] 1813 [illegible] a sturdy [illegible] where he [illegible] manhood, [illegible] Irish [illegible] as a powerful [illegible] of the bar, [illegible] orator of [illegible] and noble [illegible] as a [illegible] and practical [illegible] settled [illegible] and [illegible] was [illegible] Butt [illegible] Irish Home [illegible] ministerial, [illegible] now [illegible] the [illegible] society, was [illegible] started [illegible] by Isaac Butt. He has been [illegible] with [illegible] justly [illegible] the father of Home Rule. It was under his [illegible] in the early '70s the Home Rule federation was organized [illegible] that [illegible] now [illegible] grim work the [illegible] finishing [illegible] of the greater Parnell [illegible] who, springing into being a decade later, [illegible] and [illegible] Isaac Butt was not [illegible] but Protestant as he was [illegible] in his [illegible] with his Catholic countrymen and like Davis and Smith O'Brien [illegible] Mitchell and Martin and Parnell [illegible] last and [illegible] greatest of them [illegible] fought fearlessly and well for his country both in Parliament and outside [illegible]

Fought for Catholic Rights.

The battle of Catholic Ireland for [illegible] justice in the matter of land, education never had a more able and earnest worker than [illegible] one of his [illegible] fights [illegible] was on the [illegible] justice of the Catholic claims. [illegible] in 1870 [illegible]

1913 BREAKS ALL BUILDING RECORDS TO SEPTEMBER 1

First Eight Months Show Greater Activity Than Ever Before During Same Period in History of Building Department

First Few Months of 1913 Very Active, Then Fall Off in June, July and August Because of Tightness of Money Market

[illegible] added thirteen will be the 22nd year in the history of the Building Department, if the present rate of construction of new building [illegible] and third class—is maintained through the remaining four months of the year.

Up to August 31 of the present year [illegible] for a similar period have been issued.

Even 1912, which is a record-breaker in [illegible] the side. Both in number and in value the first eight months of 1913 exceeded by the same period of that year, in the amount of construction.

According to figures furnished by Charles S. Darrell, clerk of the Building Department, the total number of structures erected during this period of the year is 1,147, as compared with 1,067 for the same period in 1912. The total valuation for this period in 1913 is $12,230,000 as compared with $11,917,111 for 1912.

Record-Breaking Growth.

These figures indicate that Boston is maintaining the record-breaking growth of last year, in the face of adverse conditions, the most troublesome of which has been the tight money market.

The greatest volume of building operations was conducted during the first few months of the year. February and March showed the greatest activity. During February sixty-one brick structures with a valuation of $1,454,170, and 121 wooden with a valuation of $775,850 were completed. During May sixty-six brick and second class buildings, valued at $2,200,650, and seventy-six wooden, valued at $1,220,250, were completed.

June, July and August, however, showed a marked falling off in activity, but the fine record during the early months was sufficient to maintain the record-breaking pace.

The drop during these last three months is attributed to the tightness of the money market which hampered builders to a marked extent.

During the month of August the greatest slump in building activity was experienced. The building department report shows that only 67 buildings with a valuation of $417,575 were completed, as compared with 121 buildings valued at $1,340,041 for the same month a year ago. Here is a detailed comparison of the building operations for August during the last two years:

AUGUST, 1912

| | No. | Value |
|---|---|---|
| Brick and Wooden | 158 | $1,140,730 815,311 |
| Total | 327 | $1,956,041 |

AUGUST 1913

| | No. | Value |
|---|---|---|
| Brick | 29 | $ 259,450 |
| Wooden | 38 | 158,125 |
| Total | 67 | $417,575 |

Real estate experts however are confident that the falling off in August in building operations is only temporary and that the pace set by builders earlier in the year will be maintained.

Money Now Plentiful.

This belief is founded on the fact that the money market has gradually eased off, and with money less scarce a renewal in building operations should be manifest. Even if the building operations for 1913 fail to not come entirely up to expectations, the amount of construction already done will mark 1913 as an unusually active year.

The following figures furnished by Mr. Darrell of the Building Department show a detailed comparison of the building operations for the first eight months of 1913 and 1912:

Says Home Impairs His Health; He's 106

Paris Centenarian Seeks to Collect $1,000 Damages from His Landlord.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Pierre Schoemelroy, who has celebrated his 106th birthday, has gone to the State Attorney asking for a lawsuit against his landlord on the ground that the apartment which he rents for 275 francs ($55) a year, is so damp that his health has suffered. He asks 5,000 francs ($1,000) damages.

M. Schoemelroy was born in 1807. He is the son of a grenadier in the Imperial Guards. He was Napoleon at St. Cloud and later accompanied his father to St. Helena, to which place the former bore sealed messages from the Empress to Napoleon. He remembers playing with Napoleon's son, and still has a doll which belonged to Napoleon.

THIS RAT AND MOUSE CATCHER

(Issues a building of Rats and Mice in the shape of these rat traps is recommended for it always ready for use, made of galvanized iron, can't get out of order and lasts a lifetime. Larger numbers can be caught daily. Go to Catcher more than anywhere else. No inside which only takes a few seconds. Just put the bait in the trap and replace device and it is ready for another catch. A small piece of cheese is best. Quite away with Poisons. Merchants, Poultrymen, Private Houses and Business Places will find the Holland an ideal trap. Will be shipped to any place in the United States, charges paid, upon receipt of $2. The Catcher is new and simple, do not sell these yet.

My Word! "Freddy" Prince Is Wearing a Monocle Since His Trip to Europe

NO ONE at the Myopia Hunt Club the other evening received a warmer welcome than Mr. and Mrs. "Freddy" Prince, who came up from their house they rented at Newport to "Prince-more" at Pride's Crossing in time for the polo this past week at Myopia. Mr. Prince surely has grown very English since his long stay in Europe, when he and his family toured from Paris to Rome, and from Rome to Paris in the exclusive hunting set.

Indeed, I was surprised enough to see him, of all men, wearing a monocle, and it leads me to believe his sight must have improved as he has always been so near-sighted that formerly I never saw him without glasses.

Mrs. Prince looked remarkably well, and pink (the color of the gown she wore) is especially becoming to her brunette coloring. It scarcely seemed possible to realize she is the mother of Norman and young Fred Prince. I hear the dinner the Guy Normans are giving Friday night is really for the Princes as "Abby" (as Guy Norman calls his sister, Mrs. Prince) is a great favorite of his and very popular in general on the North Shore.

"Jo" Rantoul's Runabout Easily Built for Six

I SAW a [illegible] attractive Josephine Rantoul [illegible] other day [illegible] Point [illegible] ground in her runabout, which she [illegible] at 40. I didn't realize it was she until I heard someone [illegible] out "Oh, Jo!" and there she sat looking immaculate at the wheel [illegible] white linen with white hat and shoes to match, her only bit of color being a pale blue scarf. Although the machine was a [illegible] affair by right there were no less than five young women in it—and on it—as Miss Rantoul went at a break-neck speed.

MRS. JOHN DUNLOP of Beacon street is another charming hostess and is already laying plans for the hospitalities which she is to give the coming Winter. Mrs. Dunlop is among the most strikingly handsome of the younger matrons and always has her head full of ideas for entertainments which are out of the ordinary. That is one reason why she is acclaimed one of the most popular hostesses of her set.

MISS PHYLLIS SEARS, RICHEST OF THEM ALL, TO BE LAVISHED WITH ATTENTION.

[illegible] sailed for abroad earlier in the season with her [illegible] bed of [illegible] and spent her whole time while abroad [illegible] to make her first year one grand success [illegible] other [illegible] planned in her behalf will be [illegible] and as brilliant as was the debut of her sister Helen [illegible] every way. The thousands upon thousands of dollars [illegible] for the ball and the suppers and dinners and breakfasts [illegible] until the chairwoman began [illegible] seven hundred and fifty dollar mark.

Miss Sears, when [illegible] double, has the basis of the largest individual wealth of [illegible]. The good clothes with which to show them off to [illegible] nature, she has that vivacity and charm of manner which [illegible] a favorite with every one she meets.

After Tuxedo [illegible] is to be the next in line of importance for her [illegible] and elaborate as in that of Miss Sears. Miss [illegible] to Miss Sears', all bear the mark of Paris, and [illegible] silks and numerous as an unusual allowance [illegible].

Mr. Sears, when [illegible] Elizabeth, was introduced, gather a wonderful ball at the Somerset, with music imported from New York, parts of the ballroom converted into beautiful Italian gardens, and the ballroom itself a Roman [illegible].

And for [illegible] to still more so when Miss Sears is introduced the whole world of fashion will no doubt be clamoring [illegible] to the most lavish debutante ball ever given in Boston.

DISTINGUISHED AND LONG LIST MAKES THIS BOSTON'S GREATEST SEASON.

The list of the buds this year is distinguished as well as long. Among the [illegible] to be given at the Copley Plaza will be those [illegible] Miss Sears and Miss Marie Agassiz.

Dr. and Mrs. August Thorndike are to introduce their second daughter, Miss Alice Thorndike, at an at home and large ball in November, and this will practically open the season for these gay young creatures [illegible] so importantly.

The Thorndikes are at present at their Bar Harbor villa, the Eyrie.

Tuesday, December 9, is the date set for the ball which Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schofield of Commonwealth avenue are to give for the Misses [illegible] daughter, Miss Ruth Cheney. Miss Cheney is the granddaughter [illegible] Mary of Marlboro street.

Miss Eleanor Cole, one of the foremost debutantes, has already had one affair given in her honor, a tea at the all-the-year-round home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cole, in Wenham.

Among her sister debutantes who assisted at the affair were Miss Corinna Searle, Miss Adele Thayer, Miss Eleanor Rantoul, Miss Rosamond [illegible] and Miss Margaret [illegible].

Miss Edith Forbes [illegible] will be a popular debutante of the early season. Her father, Robert Forbes, of Owl's Nest, Framingham, which [illegible] this [illegible] is the year round home, is arranging to be in town this season for the festivities in which his daughter will [illegible] prominently.

As [illegible] Miss Perkins [illegible] will also [illegible] an opportunity to do something in her honor, are Mrs. George T. Rice and Mrs. William Hooper. Mrs. John Mellvain (Mary Perkins) of Ranchester, Wyoming, is another aunt. Mrs. Charles E. Perkins (nee Forbes) is the grandmother, and Charles E. Perkins is an uncle. The younger sister, Miss Nancy Perkins, will be a debutante of a couple of Winters hence.

Other prominent buds to make their initial bow in November are the Misses Alice Thorndike, Helen Draper and Susan Parsons. Mrs. Bennett will introduce her daughter at a ball at the Somerset.

Miss Louise Converse, the oldest daughter of Mrs. Frederick S. Converse of the Crossways, Westwood, and the Misses Jane and Amy Peters, daughters of Mrs. Wilfred W. Peters of Clay Slate road, are two other notable debutantes. The Peters family spent last Winter abroad, when the daughters were at school in Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Converse will occupy their new house, No. 34 Lime street, in the early autumn. At present they are in New London, N. H. Mrs. Converse's first hospitality for her daughter will be a tea during December, which she will give at her home.

Golf Is Ruling Passion Down at North Scituate

Golf certainly is "it" at North Scituate, and both the fair members of the colony and the business men meet on the same ground with the same amount of skill and enthusiasm when it comes to any sort of a match in this fascinating game It is not necessary to rack your brains for something original if a round is wanted at the Hatherly Club Just merely mention that there's going to be some good golf and the whole town will be there. That is the way it was for the matches all Summer, especially the mixed foursommes, the women making splendid records

Regular devotees seen on the grounds were Mr and Mrs. Frank E Wingate, Mr and Mrs Frederick P Cole, Mr and Mrs. E M Taft, Mr and Mrs E W Hawley, Miss Wingate, Miss Pamela Gray, Mrs Dana B Jefferson, Mr and Mrs J A Hathaway, Mrs J R. The clubhouse was the rendezvous for the Summer cottagers and their guests, many of whom had large parties for a few days. Miss Mattie Ordway was one of the young hostesses, her charming ways making her a general favorite here She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H Ordway, whose residence is one of the show places of the town. Miss Ordway has presided over several functions this season, to which the Brookline coterie have been bidden, and which have been among the most enjoyable affairs of the Summer

Dr and Mrs Moses Simpsons will follow their custom of making a long season at their cottage in Cheshopee Bay They are among the best to leave the resort and arrived among the first of the season guests

Mr and Mrs. James Thomas are to leave for their Boston home with the opening of the academic year. Mr Thomas again taking up his duties as the headmaster of the Dorchester High School one of the largest of the city Mrs Thomas will be a frequent visitor this Fall, numbering many friends among the cottagers who join their golfing merries

Mr and Mrs. F. M. Spaulding [illegible] entertaining at the beach cottage for the late season and will soon [illegible] their home here and return to Brookline.

THE gowns they wore at the Newport Horse Show? Oh, yes, just a few.

Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, in white lace, escorted by James Watson Gerard, the newly appointed Ambassador to Germany.

The Baroness von Ketteler was with Miss Jean Morris.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs brought Mrs. Carolyn Bellaby of England along with them.

Mrs. Elisha Dyer was in cream lace. Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, white mull with black taffeta. Miss Mildred Rives, old rose polo coat and black hat.

Mrs. Margaret F. Andrews, black satin, hat to match. Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings, black satin, velvet hat.

Mrs. R. L. Beekman, buff chiffon, brown hat. Mrs. Charles Potter Kling, olive green flowered chiffon, black French hat. Mrs. George B. deForest, black gown and hat, charmeuse wrap.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, white moire satin suit. Madame Bakhmeteff, white satin, black hat. Mrs. Edward B. McLean, blue charmeuse gown, velvet hat.

Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, who appeared Tuesday for the first time, was arrayed in white embroidered voile with a pink sash. Miss Edith Wetmore, with her fine figure, looked fine in black and white striped silk.

The decidedly low-necked frock and the moderately slit skirt are evidently approved by Mrs. John Astor and Mrs. Ellis. # Elijah's Miracles Explained by Petroleum?

Berlin Savant's Ingenious and Scholarly Argument that the Fire with Which the Prophet Confounded the Priests of Baal Was Produced by a Natural Agency

The Oil Region of Southern Palestine.

The Prophet Elijah Slaying the Priests of Baal. Famous Painting by Julius Schnorr

"The Altars of Baal."

The Fires Which Elijah Kindled on the Altar Were Fed, German Scientists Say, by Petroleum.

ARE the miracles of the Bible to be explained as natural occurrences directed to serve certain ends by the will of God?

This is the argument of many modern Biblical scholars. A professor of Biblical exegesis in the University of Berlin has now furnished a most interesting naturalistic explanation of the remarkable miracles performed by the Prophet Elijah in the Bible.

According to this professor the prophet discovered petroleum, which exists abundantly in the Holy Land, was familiar with many of its uses and confounded the priests of Baal by means of it.

The professor has found much evidence in the Bible and scriptural works to support his theory. In the Book of the Maccabees, a part of the Apocrypha highly valued by religious writers, he found a reference to a substance called "naphtha." The book states that when the Jews were taken into Persia the priest Neemias found a liquid on the altar, and when the sun shone it took fire. The book adds: "And Neemias called this thing naphtha, which is to say a cleansing, but many men called it nephi." (II. Maccabees, chapter i., verse 19, etc.)

In another place, explaining where this liquid came from, the book says:

"For when our fathers were led into Persia the priests that were then devout took the fire of the altar privily and hid it in an hollow place of a pit without water. Now after many years, when it pleased God, Neemias being sent from the King of Persia, did send of the posterity of those priests that had hid it to the fire; but they found no fire, but thick water."

The oldest manuscript of the Book of the Maccabees is in Greek, the earlier texts having been lost. This is important, because it indicates that the word "naphtha" used here has the same meaning as in other Greek writings. It is no accidental resemblance between a Greek and a Hebrew word. This word is known from other Greek sources to have meant petroleum. Classic authorities explain that it was a combustible mineral oil obtained from Persia. When the method of preparing naptha from petroleum was discovered in modern times the old Greek word was revived for it.

The frequent references to the inflammable qualities of this substance support the theory that it was a form of petroleum. It ignited under the rays of the sun. Petroleum burns spontaneously at a temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Terrifically high temperatures occur in the Holy Land and the East. In the desert of Gobi a temperature of 167 degrees Fahrenheit has been recorded. It is possible, however, that the ancient Hebrews used some refined form of petroleum such as our naphtha or gasoline, which would be much more inflammable. The explanation that the word means "cleansing" is also interesting, since benzine, a product of petroleum, is the most cleansing substance known. Petroleum is plentiful in southern Palestine.

The Book of the Maccabees was written about the second century before Christ. If the Hebrew priests of that time were familiar with petroleum it is possible that Elijah, who lived between 896 and 874 B. C., was a pioneer in its use.

Now, there are a great many passages in the Book of Kings dealing with Elijah's life that suggest the use of petroleum. It was during the reign of King Ahab, when his Queen Jezebel had introduced the wicked worship of Baal into Palestine, that Elijah, the great prophet of Jehovah, encountered the priests of Baal and defeated them in a trial of power.

Elijah challenged the heathen priests, telling them: "Take a bullock and lay it on wood and put no fire under, and I will dress the other bullock and put no fire under. * * * Call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord: and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God." (I. Kings, xviii., 23, etc.)

The priests of Baal called on Baal till noon, but [illegible] came.

Another Conception of Elijah's Sacrifice Catching Fire Under the Sun's Rays.

"The Sacrifice of Elijah."

Then Elijah put up his altar and "cut up the bullock in pieces and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood." When Elijah prayed it was after noon, when the sun was hottest. "And the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench."

The Berlin professor argues that if we substitute for the word "water" in this passage the expression "thick water," used in the Book of the Maccabees, which has been shown to have been petroleum, we have a natural explanation of the miracle. The woodwork of the altar soaked with petroleum might easily have burst into flame beneath the tremendously hot rays of the sun that often prevail in this part of Palestine.

The Berlin professor even suggests that the final event of Elijah's life, his translation to Heaven in a chariot of fire, was connected with his experiments with petroleum. This miracle occurred, as described in II. Kings, chapter ii., while Elijah was conversing with his disciple Elisha. The disciple had asked the master, "Let a double portion of thy Spirit rest upon me. * * *

"And it came to pass, as they still went on and talked, that behold, there appeared a chariot of fire and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder, and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. * * * And the mantle of Elijah fell upon Elisha."

"Elijah and the Fiery Chariot."

The Berlin professor's explanation is that some large vessels containing petroleum, or perhaps a volatile refined form of it, stood near them. The hot sun set fire to the fumes and caused a tremendous explosion, in which Elijah seemed to ascend in a mass of fire, which appeared like a fiery chariot to the awe-stricken beholder.

Elijah was at this time doubtless worn out by his long struggles against crime and sin in the kings and the people. This final tragedy may therefore be regarded as a noble and majestic ending to his heroic career.

LOVE WOUNDS Make ALL WOMEN HYSTERICAL

How HYSTERIA Affects SAVAGES Just as It Does CIVILIZED RACES

IT is widely believed that hysteria, that grave, nervous affliction, is especially a disease of civilized women. The more refined the class of women the more subject [illegible] hysteria is the central belief which [illegible] women are [illegible]

[illegible] form is the result [illegible] injury to the affections is [illegible] distinguished [illegible] though it is not commonly known [illegible] ecstasy, as a result of Admiral Peary's [illegible] among the Eskimos, that savage women [illegible] hysteria, civilized women. Although [illegible] strong emphasis is given to the fact [illegible] that the disease is an unrequitted love or a injury to the affections. This interpretation of Admiral Peary's observations is accepted by Professor A. A. Brill of Columbia University, one of the best-known American students of nervous diseases.

In his great book, "The Northward Course of Empire," Peary writes that women of the west coast of Greenland, from New York to Utah, frequently [illegible] a form of hysteria which they call "pibloktо." Children never [illegible] disease, men rarely, but some women have an [illegible] every day or two.

"The patient," says Peary, "usually a woman, begins to scream and to tear off and destroy her clothing. If on the ship, she will walk up and down the deck, screaming and gesticulating, and generally in a state of nudity, though the temperature may be in the minus forties. As the intensity of the attack increases she will sometimes leap over the rail upon the ice, running perhaps half a mile. The attack may last a few minutes an hour or even more, and some sufferers become so self-lost that they would continue running about on the ice perfectly naked until they froze to death if they were not forcibly brought back. He goes on to say that when the attack takes place indoors nobody pays much attention unless the sufferer should reach for a knife or attempt to inflict some one. The attack is followed by a fit of weeping, and then the patient quiets down the eyes are bloodshot, the pulse high and the whole body trembles for an hour or so afterward.

I asked Professor MacMillan to tell me something about pibloktо and he described this attack as follows: "A woman will be heard softly singing and accompanying herself by striking the floor with the palm of the second making three sounds, one long followed by two short ones. The rhythm and motion continue to increase for some time during which she usually tears off her clothing and ends in a fit of crying or screaming. In some cases the woman may imitate the cry of some familiar animal or bird. No two women act alike, the time of singing and yelling. Others wander away from the house into the hills, beating their hands as if there is a certain individuality to each attack. Some drop on their hands and knees and crawl around [illegible] dog. One was used to lie on her back [illegible] and place one foot on her breast [illegible] jump into the water and swim among the ice and all demented.

Types of Esquimaux Women Who Furnish Evidence That Hysteria Is Not a Disease Peculiar to Civilization.

As further illustrations of the individuality of the [illegible] after Professor MacMillan cited the following cases: (1) Ahuna, a woman of forty-five years was very violent during her attacks. She did not know what she was doing, she appeared crazy and demented and would bite when an attempt was made to restrain her. Her greatest delights was to imitate the call of birds and to try to walk on the ceiling. She also put it on her chest. (2) Woman Ekinahsha, nicknamed Ekinahsha, had an attack she would walk around the deck of the Roosevelt and scream horribly, lying loose and throw it up in the air. She also climbed up the [illegible] and stuck her head under the sail. (3) Inahwahs feared her attack by walking on [illegible] singing and wringing her hands together. (4) Ahuna, nicknamed [illegible] twenty-five years old, was the only woman [illegible] who jumped into the water during one attack.

The attacks last from one to two [illegible] hours, [illegible] end in screaming and [illegible] from which [illegible] in a perfectly normal state. The [illegible] are similar to the practice called "running [illegible] among Malays, which has been attributed to [illegible] poisons.

The Eskimos all showed a loss of consciousness [illegible] were perfectly harmless when left to themselves, [illegible] feared a blind predatory animal, prevented from [illegible] run any of their dogs [illegible].

Admiral Peary says that in twenty years he saw [illegible] no one man who had "pibloktо." Of the twenty women aboard the Roosevelt [illegible] had pibloktо. This concurs with the relative frequency of hysteria among the two sexes in civilized peoples.

I believe that the attacks are caused by abuse. Most of the Eskimo women [illegible] this disease were of a jealous disposition. They either imagined them [illegible] selves ill treated or they actually received abuse at the hands of their husbands, who often beat them with their fists. Many Eskimos are cruel to their wives. [illegible] ing of the attack [illegible] it reminds one of a little child discouraged and unhappy because it has [illegible] but no one loves it or cares for it and therefore [illegible] away.

Professor MacMillan's description corresponds closely to a description of hysteria among civilized women. A further development of this theory he described in the case of Ahuha. She was twenty-five years old and the only unmarried woman in the country. Eskimo girls marry at a very early age, usually at the age of twelve years, but no one wanted Ahuha; not because she had no charms, but because she was a very poor seamstress. She had more attacks than any one else. He also witnessed many attacks of pibloktо in an Eskimo woman immediately following a rebuff by a white man who at first showed her some favor.

Professor Brill thinks that this shows plainly that, just as in civilized women, it is love that plays the great part in the causation of hysteria. It is not necessarily a gross disappointment, but the ungratified desire for affection that is the determining factor.

The Eskimos may be called an immoral people in one sense. The woman is as much a part of the man's property as his dog and sledge. They indulge in trial marriage, and when things do not run smoothly they try again and again. By mutual consent wives are often exchanged between friends. Divorces are very simple. If a man grows tired of his wife, he simply tells her there is not room for her in his igloo.

Under such conditions it is readily comprehensible that the women may never experience those elements of love so essential to feminine nature. Professor MacMillan asserts that the Eskimo woman is just as capable of loving as a civilized woman. He related many incidents, as well as discussions, with Eskimo women which proved this.

In fact, one may say that the alienist finds that the greatest determinant of pibloktо is sex. As among civilized women, it may be the psychical, rather than the physical, factor of sex that brings on the hysterical symptom.

Thank MOTHER for Your BODY---FATHER for BRAINS

By DR. L. K. HIRSHBERG, A. B., M. A., M. D.

THE Mendelian or commonly accepted Laws of heredity declare in a general way that the physical structure, intellect and character of human [illegible] offspring are acquired from both the [illegible] maternal line. Now comes a biologist [illegible] who is familiar unheard of with a mass of evidence to [illegible] exactly what details of your physical [illegible] make-up you got from each parent.

[illegible] enough, this genius was discovered through a [illegible] advertisement inserted in various British journals [illegible] words.

While [illegible] having found the Law of Heredity of vertebrates [illegible] Mendel's laws—he plays for an opportunity to make his important discovery widely known.

George Eshelby is the advertiser's name.

The [illegible] of scientific men and the disdainful [illegible] of physicians, according to Mr. Eshelby, [illegible] do are well illustrated in his experience. Other [illegible] no self not a medical man or biologist even took the trouble to write to him. Yet Mr. Eshelby has [illegible] something that is important, even if it should [illegible] wholly correct.

Mr. Eshelby has discovered so he maintains with modesty, exactly which parts of the living body are inherited from the paternal line and which from the maternal line, and although this fact has been studied and reported upon for starfish and other lower animals, it has never before been applied to man or beast. All [illegible] Mr. Eshelby would be happy to know [illegible] derived from your mother and what from your father. So he proposes to give the question a plain, straightforward answer.

Mr. Eshelby has [illegible] [illegible] anatomical part of the living body, and besides he [illegible] rates from which parental [illegible] originated. He has he says, followed the examples of Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer and used the investigations and data of others from which to draw his conclusions.

The framework of the human body, the skeleton, [illegible] comes accordingly from the mother's side of the house. The nerve fibers likewise come from the female parent. On the other hand, the cells in the cortex of the brain, which are the balloon heads at the ends of the nerve fibers, which are responsible for human reason, judgment, intelligence, discretion and mental power, these [illegible] come from the father or male type. Similarly the [illegible] terns, layer of the skin, the epidermis, comes from the paternal side, as do the nails, the hair and the muscles.

The under structure and foundation for these observations depend upon the reports by many investigators of the parents and offspring of men, birds, [illegible] other animals. Recorded without regard to the [illegible] of Mr. Eshelby's and for other purposes, he has [illegible] upon them to buttress his valuable study of heredity.

A cross between a cock linnet and a hen canary, he says, always yields young that will sing with beauty of a linnet. This is a [illegible] fact known [illegible] all bird fanciers. Therefore it is evident in birds that the voice comes from the male members of the avian tribe. Many similar facts can be adduced for [illegible] animals and man. A volume of over 800 such examples has been written, but not yet published by Mr. Eshelby.

He says that what he has discovered is newer and more valuable than Mendel's Laws of Heredity and also that it makes "the new St. Vitus dance of the [illegible] although you may craft vast [illegible] make thornless roses, spineless cactuses, seedless blackberries, there never will be [illegible] hope, he intimates, when you can get rid of the male line of inherited characters.

Furthermore, you may require hygiene certificates of marriage from both the bride and the groom, yet the inherited trouble will crop out after marriage and [illegible] the clean bill of health from doctors learned [illegible] medical are [illegible]

Oh, What a Plot for a Melodrama!

"My Sister's Life Shall Not Be Wrecked as Mine Was Wrecked"--The Heart-Throbbing Climax of the Real Life Drama in Which Unhappy Madeline Force Astor Saved the Happiness of Her Sister Katherine

FASHIONABLE society, always on the alert to take chances on everything, from the swearing off of taxes to the granting of a divorce, is betting 10 to 1 that in spite of the opposition of Mrs. William Force the marriage of her daughter Katherine will take place as per the schedule arranged by young Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Katherine's sister.

Miss Katherine loves earnestly and wants to marry Mr. Henri Harnickel, a poor, but honest, young clerk earning in a stock broker's office down on the Street just about enough to keep himself. And although the wedding day is set, Mrs. Force still fights against the match. She can honestly see only unhappiness ahead for Katherine if she insists upon wedding her humble lover.

Mrs. Force is very ambitious and keenly resourceful, as the matching of Madeline Force to the late Colonel Astor proved. Miss Katherine could have the pick of half a dozen men extremely desirable in the eyes of almost any ambitious mother—men with money, ancestors, holding the entree to the innermost circles of the circle that throws the glamour over Newport. Why is it, then, that Miss Katherine goes on more or less serenely with her preparations to marry a man her mother will not think of tolerating? Why is it that the maternal influence is not potent with her, as it was in the case of the younger daughter?

The answer is Madeline Force Astor herself. The unhappy young widow, brooding in loneliness over her baby boy in her Fifth avenue mansion, cut off as mercilessly, ignored as mercilessly by fashionable society as though she had never been Colonel Astor's wife, has bused from her location to save her sister from a duplication of her own fate.

There are all the makings of a fine old-fashioned melodrama in this contest between Mrs. Force and her two daughters. But she who would take the part of the mother would have a wealth of characters to study from. Mrs. Force is not alone by any means in her ambitions to have her daughters "marry well." There are scores of women in what is known as society who have been married out of hand without love in just the way Madeline Force was. Is not the marriage de convenience as old as literature and did not Tennyson have the situation in mind when in "Locksley Hall" he wrote of the mother "with her little hoard of maxims preaching down her daughter's heart?" One of the phases of the tragedy is that the mother herself in such cases really believes that she is doing what is best for her daughter's good; is really striving night and main to save that daughter from what she believes will mean only unhappiness. And the mother only repeats the dominant belief of society when she acts as she does. Indeed, the woman who puts her daughter on the auction block is as much to be pitied as is the daughter herself.

No; in the case of the Force girls it is not the mother who is unique. Rather is it the figure of Madeline Force, her soul awakened by the terrible tragedy of the Titanic and given the opportunity to save her sister from a loveless marriage, taking that opportunity that gives the new touch to the drama.

But the stage is set, the characters ready. What of the dialogue and the plot?

The Sister—They tell me that I must follow your example. I must marry for money. They say there is no happiness in life unless one has pearls and diamonds, motor cars and steam yachts. I must marry so that we can go anywhere And I love my Henri, who has nothing.

The Widowed Sister (looking off into distance and sighing)—I know. They told me that. But one marriage for wealth and social position is enough; there is no need to offer up two sacrifices

The Sister (eagerly)—That is what I tell mother. But she says that I do not know what I am talking about; that I do not know what misery it is to want money and not be able to have it. But she will listen to you, I am sure. Won't you plead for me?

The Widowed Sister (bitterly, as she looks about her boudoir filled with the Dead Sea fruits of her own sacrifice) — Yes; she will listen to me. So many will listen to me now that I have become rich. I have indeed become one of great importance. But do not worry. I will bring mother to terms. You shall marry Henri.

The Sister—Oh, sister; love, love, it is everything. Even if he were only a peddler it would not matter.

The Widowed Sister (her hand to her heart)—And I passed love by; I betrayed love. And how I am punished. And I was but a child. Yet, sister, I have learned much. I no longer blame mother. It is not her fault, it is the fault of the society in which we move; a society that enthrones wealth and looks upon true love as a beggar, to be turned away from our doors with empty hands; that places position before worth and thinks that happiness is in externals. There is no mother so cruel as to wish her daughter to be unhappy. That is the tragedy—that they think those things will make us happy. But I promise you that you shall have love.

The scene changes. The mother and her two daughters are together.

The Widowed Sister—Sister shall marry the man she loves. Her life shall not be wrecked as mine was wrecked.

The Mother—Wrecked! Are you mad? Are you not one of the wealthiest girls in America? Are you not the mother of a son

The Widowed Sister (thinking)—Yes, yes; of a son without a father, however. I did not love Think what it would mean to me to-day if I had loved my baby's father and had married him for love not for—what I did

The Sister—But tell me, sister, how could you decide to marry a man whom you did not love?

[illegible] know we did mother. I do [illegible] But you [illegible] We must [illegible] leave it out of [illegible] her sister [illegible] [illegible] (pleads frantically) Love the man who gave me everything! How could I? I did not know what love is, not I only know now that I had [illegible] wanted on me that [illegible] during my hands in [illegible] and I were on strife to take love, love in her life. Let me be [illegible] making the marriage [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Why Crime Does Not Pay—

No. 23 of a Series of Remarkable Revelations by Sophie Lyons, "THE QUEEN OF BURGLARS"

SOPHIE LYONS

How the Crime Which Requires Only a Few Minutes to Commit Is the Result of Weeks and Months of Careful Planning, and How Even the Most Skilful Thieves Often Get Nothing for All Their Pains.

A Shout Went Up from the Threatening Mob as the Jail Door Swung Open and the Sheriff Appeared with His Hand on the Shoulder of a Man in Cowhide Boots, Wearing a Broad Brimmed Straw Hat and Clutching in One Hand a Battered Carpet Bag and in the Other an Old-Fashioned Green Cotton Umbrella. Could This Rather Feeble Old Farmer, Who Stood There Trembling and Bewildered Before Them, Be the Desperate Bank Robber the Lynchers Were Seeking?

"T

It was Chauncey Johnson, the expert bank sneak, of whom I have frequently spoken, who telegraphed me to meet him at Toledo. There was nothing I could do to prevent the impulse, and I knew I could no longer keep him carry

But one must not be misled. Even if the criminal succeeds in escaping arrest he is by no means so well paid as you think for what seems to be only a few minutes of effort. The truth of the matter is that the crime is the result of weeks and months of careful planning, and even the most skilful thieves often get nothing for all their pains.

I learned, as I learned, had for several weeks been training

I followed along on the opposite side of the street prepared to hunt up a lawyer for Chauncey as soon as I saw him led away to the police station.

Despite my sympathy for my friend I felt no little regret at having our plans for making some money ruined in this way after I had gone to the trouble and expense of coming such a long distance.

But right here the cloud of misfortune which had gathered so unexpectedly began to show a silver lining with a suddenness that fairly took my breath away.

Instead of my friend being seized by the collar and dragged off to the police station I was amazed to see the detective and he enter into earnest conversation.

After talking several minutes the detective pulled out a handful of cigars and handed them to Chauncey. Then the two men shook hands like old friends, the detective started back toward the bank and Chauncey set off in the direction of the railroad station.

What did it all mean?

I followed Chauncey to the station and bought a ticket to Chicago, he did. He gave no sign of recognizing me until the train had gone forty or fifty miles. Then he came into the car where I was sitting and down beside me.

"Well," said I, eager to have the mystery explained, "how on earth did you manage to get away from that detective?"

"Oh," said Chauncey, with a chuckle, "that was quite simple. I pretended to be very indignant and demanded to know what he meant by interfering with me when I had an arrangement to pay his chief of police ten per cent of all the money I was able to make in Toledo."

"But do you really know the chief of police?" I inquired innocently.

"Certainly not," said Chauncey, "but that was the first excuse I could think of.

"You could have knocked me over with a feather when I saw the effect it had on him. He actually apologized for interfering with a friend of the chief's and assured me that such an unfortunate mistake would never happen again!"

With a party of Western bank sneaks he had selected the Exchange National Bank in Anderson, Ind., as a propitious place for staging a bold daylight robbery.

There was every reason to believe the job would yield at least $100,000, so the robbers left no stone unturned to make their arrangements perfect to the smallest detail. For six weeks they lived in Anderson, posing as cattle buyers, and Accordingly, about ten days after the time for the opening of banks.

While Moore, Bill Rose, O'Brien and Farrell were outside, a third member of the band, Bennett, was to enter the bank and engage the cashier in conversation.

Mr. Bennett, Bennett indeed, was seen by Billy O'Brien [illegible] would drop to his knees and crawl around into the cashier's cage and fill his pockets with Everything went just as the robbers had planned until O'Brien crawled out of the vault and started to make his exit through a side door.

In his hurry he let a bag of gold slide out of his pocket. It fell to the floor with a resounding crash that burst the sack open and sent the coins scattering in every direction.

The cashier, startled by the unusual noise, peered over the wire cage, just in time to see O'Brien take to his heels, leaving behind him a trail of gold. Rushing to a window, he gave the alarm.

As he stood there shouting for help he was amazed to see the two lookout men running down the street, closely followed by the man with whom he had been doing business a moment before, and also by the well dressed, silk-hatted stranger who had been waiting his turn at the wicket. This last was Moore, who never failed to look the well-to-do business man.

It was market day in Anderson and at the cashier's shouts a hundred sturdy men started in pursuit of the fleeing robbers. By the time the four of them were captured it was not too late to start horsemen on the trail of Billy O'Brien, who, with his pockets stuffed with rolls of bills, bags of specie and packages of securities, was making slow progress in the opposite direction.

The five thieves were promptly locked in jail. Four of them took their arrest very much to heart and laid the blame for it on Moore, for no reason except that he had been the leader of the party.

But Moore, a born philosopher, wasted no time in listening to the recriminations of his companions. Instead, he proceeded to cultivate the acquaintance of the sheriff, who lived with his family in the front part of the jail. It was not long before Moore and the sheriff discovered that their fathers had been born and bred on neighboring farms in a little New England town.

"Come down and have supper with us," said the sheriff, convinced that no New Englander could be as bad as the evidence painted him.

While Moore was enjoying the sheriff's hospitality trouble was brewing down in the village square. Indignation over the attempt to rob the bank ran so high that when some hot-headed man suggested lynching there was a loud chorus of approval.

Ropes were quickly procured and the mob started up the hill to the jail, its thirst for quick vengeance growing with every step.

The sheriff heard the shouting and rushed to the door.

"We want those bank robbers," was the cry that greeted him. "Bring 'em out one at a time—the leader first."

The sheriff had no deputies and he saw that it was useless to attempt to resist such a mob. He reluctantly turned back into the house.

"Come, Moore," he said with a brave attempt at the proper official gruffness, "you'll have to come out or they'll be in here and take you."

"I'll be with you in one minute," said Moore coolly, disappearing into the cell room in the rear, where his four companions, terrified by the threatening shouts outside, were already on their knees begging for mercy.

Quickly Moore exchanged his fashionable suit for the rough garb of an old farmer, who lay in one of the cells sleeping off the effects of a debauch. The sheriff could hardly believe his eyes when his transformed prisoner reappeared.

A loud shout went up from the mob as the jail door swung open again and the sheriff walked out with his hand on the prisoner's shoulder. But the shouting subsided when they saw that the prisoner was dressed like a farmer—cowhide boots and a broad brimmed straw hat, clutching in one hand a battered carpet bag and in the other an old-fashioned green cotton umbrella.

Could this rather feeble old man who stood there trembling and bewildered be the desperate bank robber the lynchers were seeking? The crowd waited in silence for some explanation of the mystery.

"Friends," said Moore, dropping his bag and umbrella, "you're barkin' up the wrong tree. I never stole nothin' in my life, and I've got two good fists here to prove it. Come on, one at a time, and I'll show ye that this old Gettysburg veteran's fightin' blood ain't all dried up yet."

The old man's drawl, his thin piping voice and the business-like way he squared his shoulders and put up his fists were too much for the crowd's over-wrought emotions. Some one in the front ranks raised a loud guffaw, and in a second everybody was laughing.

Moore's clever ruse had come at the psychological moment and the mob's desire for vengeance came to an end even more suddenly than it had begun. Rather shamefacedly the crowd began to scatter for home by twos and threes.

So strong was the sentiment Moore had created that he was released the next morning, while his fainthearted companions were held for trial and narrowly escaped prison sentences.

Moore escaped with his life and liberty—but what had he to show for all his labor and all the risks he ran? Not one penny. His experience is another striking illustration of the fact that crime, no matter how carefully planned, cannot be made to pay.

Is It Foolish to Try to Dodge the Deadly Microbes?

BY PROF. JOHN ADAMS, LL.D., OF LONDON

AMERICA has become intensely hygienic. Time was when Englishmen claimed pre-eminence for the frequency with which they used the bath, and for the low temperature of the water. Now the Americans tell stories among themselves of the scarcity of baths at English hotels, and even go the length of referring to the Englishman's weekly tub.

The American desire for a separate bath-room is only one symptom of a widespread distrust of each other's ailments. Infection and contagion are so much feared that regulations are being made and enforced all over the States for the protection of the healthy from against the unhealthy.

On the railway cars it is now illegal to provide a common drinking cup for the use of all comers. Each passenger in an ordinary car has his own drinking cup, while on the Pullman cars the colored porter supplies each passenger who applies for it with a paper drinking cup. This consists of a flat paper bag which is carefully enclosed in a transparent tissue paper envelope, so that there can be no contamination by the porter's fingers. [illegible] cities the danger of contamination [illegible] is avoided by having the drinking receptacles so arranged that they pout gently upwards. The drinker has only to bend over and suck up the flowing water. It is true that where water is somewhat scarce the town authorities cannot afford to have it flowing all the time. A tap is accordingly provided, and sometimes it is difficult for the inexpert drinker to avoid squirting water up his nostrils and all over his face. But, after all, the application of water to the face is itself hygienic.

Perhaps one of the main causes of the increasing prominence given to hygiene is the conspicuous success that has marked the Americans' efforts to clean up Cuba and other places into which they have been more or less unwillingly lured. Their brilliant success in the foreign field has without doubt encouraged the Americans in their persistent attempts to save themselves from contaminating each other.

The world is full of honest admiration of how the Americans have fought yellow fever and other disagreeable things, but one wonders whether the lesson of this success is to establish a sort of isolation in communion.

Can we escape from each other? Are we taking the best means to escape? It seems a little comical to take all these elaborate precautions about separate drinking cups, and yet to allow the colored porter to handle the ice that is to be put into the tank.

There is, however, another possible line of advance. Instead of dealing with the drink we may deal with the drinker. We may defy the microbe either by eluding him or by fighting him. We may use our separate cups and thus prevent the microbe from entering the system, or we may so fortify the system that it will successfully resist the attacks of its microscopic foes.

It has been found by experiments (performed with the consent of the subjects concerned) on United States soldiers that the human system can be inoculated against typhoid fever and that persons thus inoculated can drink contaminated water without any fear of evil consequences.

Already men about to set out an engineering or other expeditions into lands where the water supply is under suspicion are having themselves inoculated, and are prepared to take the risks of drinking whatever water presents festive for seven years.

The inoculation is said to remain of itself.

A still more striking example of American fear of other people's ailments is to be found in the "nine-foot sheet" law enforced in certain districts. This insists upon every sheet on a hotel bed being big enough to cover completely all the blankets, and thus prevent all possible contact with the "vestigia" of any previous occupant of that bed. All this gives us a very uncomfortable feeling and makes our flesh creep.

But, after all, it is fundamentally right, and must be of interest to us in England, for in these matters we are likely to follow America's lead. We are not yet so afraid of each other as are the Americans, but we are moving in that direction, and it is worth our while to consider how to secure maximum safety with minimum interference with individual liberty.

ARE ALL ARTISTS CRAZY?

A Lunatic's Drawing of a Woman, Exhibited Before the International Medical Congress at London. The Artist Never Handled a Pencil Until He Became Insane and Then Art Dominated His Lunacy. The Face Is a Remarkable Study of Lunacy in Itself.

Remarkable New Medical Theory Advanced Before the World's Greatest Medical Congress That Imaginative Art Is Only a Symptom of Lunacy---and the Pictures by Lunatics That Inspired the Theory

London, Sept. 1.

THAT artistic skill is nothing more than a symptom of insanity is the startling assertion made by medical authorities at the recent International Congress of Physicians and Surgeons held in London.

The proposition is certainly a radical one. At first blush it might appear to tax credulity. Consideration of the clinical evidence presented in its support, however, rather compels the conviction that it may be well-founded. At any rate, the revelation opens up a new line of psychological research, and neurologists the world over are evincing considerable interest in it.

It is obvious, of course, that the average individual possesses little or no artistic ability. To infer from this fact alone, however, that the artist is necessarily abnormal would hardly be justified, and is not the line of argument relied upon by those who advance the new proposition. In addition to this self-evident fact they bring out some remarkable statistics gathered in English insane asylums which seems to establish the fact that while the normal individual possesses little or no artistic ability, as soon as the mind becomes diseased and the imagination disordered, the ability to paint or draw or model almost invariably manifests itself.

It was pointed out, for instance, that no less than 70 per cent of the patients admitted to certain lunatic asylums displayed a more or less well developed ability to draw or paint soon after the onset of their particular malady, although in no instance had the patient previously revealed any artistic talent.

While it does not logically follow that because the insane manifest artistic ability all artists must necessarily be insane, the inference is permissible that the association between art and insanity is perhaps closer than was ever before imagined.

The concrete evidence used in support of the remarkable proposition advanced at the Medical Congress consisted principally of a series of drawings and paintings made by inmates of insane asylums who, in the majority of cases, had never before shown artistic ability. Some of these interesting exhibits are presented on this page.

One of these pictures bears a remarkable resemblance to the work of the cubist school. As a matter of fact, the insane author of the drawing probably got his idea from the workmanship of the cubists, but the fact remains that before his mental disease developed he had never been able to draw at all.

Another one of the sketches shows a giraffe. It presents what appears to be a peculiar mixture of the cubist and post impressionistic schools of art. It was made by an insane woman who had previously shown no artistic ability whatever.

A very remarkable drawing shown at the Congress was made by a young man who is now a hopeless homicidal maniac. He was sent to the asylum after having murdered his father. At most immediately he manifested a desire to draw and paint. Materials were furnished him and he commenced at once on a series of six pictures depicting the six human passions.

The conception was a most unusual one, for it is said that it turned out a most remarkable picture. One of the pictures showing a man naked giant and intended to represent the passion of envy, has been declared by art critics to exhibit unusual artistic talent.

The "Courtyard of an Inn" a picture made by another hopeless lunatic who had never displayed any desire or ability to draw until he became insane, aroused a lot of interest at the Medical Congress. It was regarded as an exceptionally fine piece of work considering that it was executed by a man who had never before handled brush or pencil.

So much for the evidence. The conclusions to be derived from it remain to be considered.

According to Dr. Friedrich Kunz, a well-known Viennese neurologist who attended the Congress and who made a [illegible] the artistic works of the inmates exhibited, this added [illegible]

The Well-Watered Woman.

Fat-Reducing, Symmetry-Producing Exercises of the Famous Gertrude Hoffman, Who Judges Her Sisters by How Much Water They Use and How They Use It.

MISS GERTRUDE HOFFMAN, the famous danseuse who prepared the following article on the water treatment for beauty, is one of the stellar attractions in the three-star combination—Lady Constance Richardson, Polaire and Gertrude Hoffman—that will this month begin a tour of this country under the management of Morris Gest.

"With right and left arm alternately raised I imitate the invigorating movements of skipping the rope. I exercise the imagination as well as the feet."

"Standing beneath the shower which I have turned on at full force I do what athletes know as 'the standing run.' To give the muscles general play I hold a towel at arm's length above my head."

"Casting away the towel I increase the speed of the 'run' flinging out my arms in wild abandon, and running as though there were no confining walls of the bathtub."

"While the shower pours upon me again seize the towel in both hands and raise one arm while I lower the other until it is on a plane with the knees. There is no finer exercise for making the waist supple."

By Gertrude Hoffman.

I JUDGE a woman by the [illegible] how she uses it and by the [illegible] uses it.

A woman is beautiful according to the amount of water she uses and the way she uses it.

The well-watered woman is distinguished by a clear complexion and healthy color, by clear eyes; by the poise of head and carriage of body that mean freedom and confidence; by strong white teeth; by pink nails and red tongue, by a throat that fears neither Dutch neck nor extreme decolletage. When I see a woman who is under fifty and who muffles her throat with laces and bands of black velvet, I know that she is saving water, for the neck of the well-watered woman defies investigation.

Plenty of water inside and out will make a woman beautiful, for it will give her health radiance. Cleanliness is the first [illegible] and water is the first [illegible]. When we say of a girl, "She is [illegible]," we mean she exhibits a perfect cleanliness. Soap, [illegible] "well-watered."

[illegible] exercises that I [illegible] or in [illegible] of these opportunities and [illegible] before I go home. Any woman can [illegible] bathtub if she [illegible] large sea-kelp bathtub of Roman magnificence, like Maxine Elliott's, in her country home, all the better. But if not, the ordinary bathtub will suffice. Be sure to place a rubber bathmat or a large Turkish towel in the bottom of the tub to prevent your slipping, for fatal accidents have occurred by slipping in wet bathtubs.

A—Standing beneath the shower, which I have turned on at full force I do what athletes know as the "standing run." You cannot run far in a tub, but you can make the movements of running, as I have done here. To give the muscles general play I raise my arms and, holding the towel at arm's length above my head, I wave it backward and forward while running. Sometimes I sing during the exercise. It increases my lung expansion.

B—Casting away the towel I increase the speed of the "run," flinging out my arms in wild abandon and running as though there were no confining walls of bathtub to prevent my Pan-like dash of three or four miles.

C—While the shower pours upon me I again seize the towel with both hands, and, bending slightly forward at the waist, raise the right arm while I lower the left until it is on a plane with the knees. Then I reverse this motion. There is no finer exercise for making the waist supple.

D—Casting away the towel again, I fling my arms above my head and leap into the air, again and again springing at least a foot above the bottom of the bathtub. The tonic effect and the access of vigor secured by this [illegible] exercise are marvelous.

E—With right and left arm alternately raised I imitate the movements of skipping the rope. I [illegible] exercise the imagination as well as the feet. Exercise [illegible] shower is as invigorating [illegible] rain or in the surf. Your activity is [illegible] because it requires the output [illegible] extra energy, usually taken as much [illegible] resistance of the water. [illegible] thus you call into play powers of [illegible] never used exercise is also [illegible] value of the less gentle ma[illegible] is the more or regulated by the force of [illegible] of the pressure of the water u[illegible] kin and muscles [illegible]ing and delight ful tonic.

The first stimu[illegible] a well watered woman [illegible] habit of drinking plenty [illegible] Water. "I drink a great deal of [illegible] and when I pursue the subject I learn [illegible] they drink two or three glasses a day. [illegible] they should drink four times as much. [illegible] require ten to twelve glasses of [illegible] lay to keep the body properly [illegible] two or three glasses [illegible] ormal, two or three sipped before [illegible], and one at each meal, the [illegible] tween meals, will sufficiently irrigate [illegible]ody. To make it more palatable [illegible] half a lemon may be used, especially [illegible]ing, for the lemon juice, [illegible]s, is as a broom, to the stomach, [illegible] it free of all accumulation of muc[illegible]d all left over and digested remnants [illegible]eals. The morning sweeping of [illegible]ough is as important as the daily [illegible]ning of the floor.

The outer bath [illegible] a necessity. It is a delight. [illegible] bath as joyously as I begin my daily [illegible]. The shock of the cool water against [illegible] skin, setting a thousand sensitive [illegible] nerves a tingle, is delicious.

This cold water [illegible] every blood-cell is a superb tonic [illegible] body. It will not more than [illegible]ally cleanse the skin. For this reason I take a weekly "boiling out," either at home or at a Turkish or Russian bath. Some of the pores are inclined to be lazy and need extra urging to persuade them to do their work. For these pores the seventh-day scrub or boiling out is necessary. For them the use of soap is also needful. Were it not for these lazy one-tenth of the pores we would never need soap, with its unwelcome and tissue-destroying alkali.

Manners and Customs in Regard to Bowing

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED, Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

ONE of the tests of good-breeding, training and culture is in the manner in which a bow or salutation of recognition is made. A brusque, abrupt manner is rude. A very effusive manner and a low bow are worse. The correct salutation is between the two extremes.

Although according to circumstances a bow may be cordial, friendly, formal, slight, deferential or familiar, it must be made. A person who has been introduced is entitled to recognition. A bow should be prompt as soon as the eyes meet, whether in a room or on the street. Capricious or moody persons, who bow pleasantly one day and coldly the next, or who are too preoccupied or self-centred to remember to bow at all, are very trying to their acquaintances. With these an acquaintance can be charitable, slow to take offence, remembering that they may be ignorant of their peculiarities. Near-sighted people are often offending in this way about not bowing.

It is well to ascertain the length of sight of new acquaintances, who may give an erroneous impression in seeming to be distant or forgetful. Pleasant acquaintances are sometimes lost through a misapprehension.

An important rule about bowing is that a man must wait for a lady to recognize him. Between friends the act of bowing is almost simultaneous, but it is the privilege of a woman to take the initiative by being the first to bow. As has been said, an introduction entitles everyone to a bow. Only for very grave reasons would anyone ever give a direct "cut," when the claim an introduction imposes has been absolutely forfeited.

In a case where there has been inexcusable conduct the better way is to bow coldly, or turn away and look downward when passing. No one wishes to hurt the feelings of another, even for a serious offence. It is wise to throw the mantle of charity over the offender. A formal, distant bow may be given to an unwelcome acquaintance, and this should be sufficient to prevent an aggressive, pushing person from presuming.

When a man returns a lady's bow he should do so by distinctly taking his hat off and replacing it quickly. He should not hold it off at arm's length, but lift it not too far from his head. When he is with a lady who bows to anyone he raises his hat, although the person may be a stranger to him. A man raises his hat when he passes a man whom he knows who is with ladies, or when he is with a man who bows to a lady. It is proper for him to look straight ahead and not at the lady to whom a friend bows if she is unknown to him.

A woman should bow to a man who is either a friend or an acquaintance, even when he is with someone whom she does not know.

When bowing, the head is inclined slightly. It is not correct to accompany a bow with a broad smile, even when recognizing an intimate friend. There may be the beam of good-will in the eye. This lightens the countenance and prevents an impression of indifference. Someone has said, "You should never speak to an acquaintance without a smile in the eyes." Cultivated men and women of the world are sure to show this good-will in the eyes.

It is a civility to return a bow, although the person who is bowing may not be known or remembered. Either the person who bows has been introduced or has made a mistake in one's resemblance to another. No doubt the mistake may be discovered to have occurred from want of prompt recognition on one's own part, but to withhold a bow would be awkward and rude.

Small, but important, points of courtesy distinguish a well-bred man. He raises his hat when offering any civility to a lady who is a stranger. He removes his hat in an elevator when ladies are present. He raises his hat when acknowledging a service from a man to a lady whom he is escorting.

The rules of etiquette are not arbitrary or without meaning, but always reasonable and sensible and represent social obligations due from one person to another. In the smallest details of daily life we should cultivate graciousness toward others. It should be borne in mind that the fine art of living is in putting everyone with whom we are thrown completely at ease.

"Gaily the Troubadour"—HERE'S WHAT HE SANG

How the 600-YEAR-OLD MELODIES of the Middle Ages Are Being REVIVED

EVERY one has heard of the troubadours, and to [illegible] calls up a picture of a youthful [illegible] garb, holding a lute in his [illegible] to his mistress's eyebrow.

It is peculiar that the music of [illegible] its model and method to the Bible itself [illegible] part of the [illegible] all the part [illegible] taking part, one repeating the thought of the other, in the same metre, but different words. And in Provence [illegible] by Persian [illegible] the trade, the part in the performance.

No troubadour worthy of the name would sing any song not composed by himself, and very often they were composed on the spur of the moment in honor of the Queen of Love and Beauty at some royal "Court of Love."

The Right Way to EAT PINEAPPLES

PINEAPPLES used to be considered unwholesome. They were supposed to cause cholera and all kinds of intestinal disorders, but in all probability this reputation was gained because they were not eaten in the proper way or were not ripe enough. When pineapple is thoroughly ripe and is eaten as it should be, it is refreshing and wholesome, either when eaten in slices or when converted into juice.

Most people eat pineapples the wrong way. They are of the coarse, prickly outside skin and throw it away, not knowing that the skin really contains the best part of the fruit. This outside skin contains a large proportion of the alkaloid principle, "bromelin," which is the digestive ferment of the pineapple and which is somewhat similar in its medicinal effect to pepsin.

The correct way to eat a pineapple, to get the most good from it, is first to pare off the rough outside skin. Squeeze these parings in a lemon squeezer and pour their juice, sweetened or not, as preferred, over the pared pineapple when cut in slices. In this way all the powerful "bromelin" is saved, and enchances the flavor of the pineapple itself.

Pineapples should always be eaten after meals and not before because then they assist digestion. All kinds of food, nitrogenous (meats), carbohydrates (vegetables and starches) and fats are readily digested by the "bromelin" of pineapples. The digestive principle of pineapples is much more far-reaching than pepsin, for pepsin is only active [illegible] when combined with acid of some kind, [illegible] foods of any kind are practically [illegible] its action. But pineapple juice exerts its [illegible] ity in any medium, acid or alkaline.

A striking illustration of the digestive power of pineapple juice is shown by the irritation [illegible] caused on the lips and in the mouth if the skin be bitten or chewed. This soreness is really caused by the "bromelin" commencing the process of digestion on the mucous membranes of the lips and mouth.

Few people realize the quantity of juice that can be obtained from a pineapple if it is preferred to [illegible] the juice rather than eat the pulp. From an [illegible] sized pineapple from half a pint to three-quarters of a pint of juice can be obtained by cutting the whole fruit, skin and all, into cubes about an inch square and squeezing them in an ordinary lemon squeezer.

Pineapple juice, mixed with an equal quantity of ice water or seltzer, makes a healthful [illegible] and is particularly valuable for children, because being such a help to complete digestion it counteracts the ill effects of over-eating.

How SELF CONFIDENCE Affects Your HEALTH

THE state of mind which we know [illegible] confidence exerts a more important influence on a person's health than [illegible] would believe. When we are confident [illegible] heart beats regularly and powerfully [illegible] circulation perfect. The passage of [illegible] through the arteries and veins carry [illegible] supplies the lymph and the cells of [illegible] with just what they need, and keeps [illegible] in ghost possible efficiency. So [illegible] heart seats in this regular way we [illegible] easily, the brain is clear and we judge [illegible] actions and the actions of those [illegible] fairness. Just because we are confident [illegible] ow to feel pain.

Self confidence leads to continue the action of all the organs, and actually [illegible] the continuity of health. The blood pressure [illegible] not rise too high, the pulse is regular [illegible] The skin performs its functions [illegible] [illegible] e off waste products and prevents [illegible] of poisons.

Autumn Oddities from Paris

The New "Nun's Headdress," the "Eiffel Tower" Plumes, Very Transparent Tea Gowns and the "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" Earrings.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York City

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile").

FOR some months the evening headdress of the smart woman has been a thing of barbaric beauty—an orgy of ospreys and an avalanche of aigrettes, outspreading and upstanding in every possible—and impossible—position.

But now the panoply of plumes is to be torn from the heads of the fashionable fair—and dark—and if the milliner is to be obeyed the women who have for so long been trying to rival a wild Indian chieftain will now take a nun for their model, in the matter of headgear at any rate.

But it will be a nun with a difference—for daring instead of demure is this close framing of the face and hair, and in place of fair white brow there is a banding of shimmering silver lace, bordered with a line of light and diamonds

Of course, only the woman—or, in fact, the girl—with a perfectly oval face should adventure upon its close silhouetting in this way, but, granted the beauty of the wearer, the provocative allurement of the headdress is undeniable—and delightful.

It is easy to imagine, too, how wonderful an all-black "nun" headdress would look on a Madonna-faced girl, exquisitely fair of skin and with dead gold hair. Altogether there are distinct and decorative possibilities in the new creation of sensation

Hats are—admittedly and undoubtedly—growing larger, and perhaps lovelier, too. But that the small hat is by no means deth-roned is proved conclusively and pleasantly by a new "Lewis" model, as worn by one of the prettiest of Parisian actresses

Only the brim is of velvet, the crown being just a soft semi-transparency of black crepophane, against which—and here every petal shows up in striking relief—are clustered some white and golden-hearted marguerites and a couple of roses—white and pure.

Catching the flowers together at the back is a bow of wide black velvet ribbon, so arranged that two long looped ends fall far down over the hair, while the others are raised just sufficiently above the crown of the hat to relieve it from any suspicion of flatness.

Have you, I wonder, discovered just exactly the right kind of hat to suit those moments when the clerk of the weather and you yourself are both alike in your sunniest moods?

Because if not, I can tell you what to choose—an exquisite affair of pink tulle in that three-cornered shape which when set at the correct angle on the head is so deliciously jaunty and becoming, and which is made doubly so in this case by a soft ostrich feather bordering to the upturned brim, and the further finish of one long plume, which sweeps far outwards and then upwards at the back.

The whole dainty thing is so far in the one faint and fascinating shade of pink, but there is finally tucked away at the base of that soft ostrich feather a little cluster of black-petalled and golden-hearted marguerites. And so the whole effect is increased by the contrast.

I like, too, the union of tulle and feathers, and, altogether, this is a hat to wear when "all is well with the world"—and the weather—and to make you still better pleased with both. But of course also it is a hat used alone or together

A great contrast to the pink tulle hat I have just described is the 'chauffeur's' hat of black velvet, with its curious leaning plume. The instant I saw it I thought of the Eiffel Tower, and lo, it was named. This is a trying shape perhaps, but given large dark eyes and fluffy hair a woman may wear it unchallenged.

One of the strangest and yet individual arrangements of the hair is shown in the lower picture. Paris calls this the "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" earring. "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" being considered by Parisians to be a perfectly proper "Americanism." These rings are made of the hair twisted about a bit of the thinnest of gold wire.

This velour hat with its stunning ostrich fancy is one of the latest models, and one, I am sure, that will prove a great favorite with the ultra-fashionable woman.

Of the making of hats there is no end, nor of the making of delightful handbags. The bag of the Autumn must match the costume in color, and to be absolutely correct it should be made of the gown material. The present cheapness of the Oriental embroideries has led the smart woman to discard her bag of these most charming fabrics which demands the accompaniment of a rather smart gown of charmeuse and ninon or lace, so if you feel more inclined toward a "sweet simplicity" style of attire you should fix on a hat of soft white felt, the brim so upturned as to reveal an underlining of powder blue crepe de chine, while the almost inevitable touch of tulle is in this case transferred to the crown, where it forms an encircling kilting, held in place by a trail of white wheat-ears.

The Nun Headdress of Diamonds and Lace That Is the Rage in Paris.

The "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" Ringlets About the Ears, and Another "Tower" Plume.

There is, too, an upstanding sheaf of these decorative things at one side, and peeping out from their midst one full-blown rose of delicate pink, with a spray of fresh green leaves. So I can imagine the hat looking quite lovely—can't you?—as worn by a pretty fair-haired girl, whose gown of the finest white chiffon or marquisette is arranged with three deep and closely pleated skirt flounces, the cross-over corsage being sashed with blue, and one long-stalked pink rose being stuck in the girdle.

The two extremes of fabrics meet in the hats of the moment, just as in the gowns. Tulle, that most fragile of all materials, and velvet, the most durable, are the favorites.

BE DIFFERENT INSIDE OF YOUR BRAIN

IN this age the intelligent advertiser appeals to the man who considers himself "different" or who is fond of declaring that he is "particular."

We are told that such and such a breakfast food should be eaten by the particular man.

Forty-seven hundred different kinds of collars, with points up or down, or with no points at all, are recommended as being DIFFERENT.

Tailors and manufacturers of shirts, shoes, neckties, socks and even belts, urge the young men of the day to be DIFFERENT and to get without fail the shirt, belt, trousers, socks that are different from others of the same kind.

You see another "particular" silly person, rejoicing in the fact that the pockets on his coat slant up and down at an angle of forty-five degrees instead of being straight, or very happy indeed because his necktie, shirt and socks are of the same color.

One gentleman, proud of himself, will order a wild duck in a restaurant, and insist upon having a lime instead of a lemon to squeeze over it. He wants you to know that HE is different, AND particular.

* * *

As for the poor women of this world, Heaven only knows what THEY won't do, to be different.

They will wear dresses as big as balloons one minute.

The next minute they will wear a dress so tight that they must slit the dress up the leg in an indecent fashion in order to walk.

They will wear hats as wide as a cart wheel, and then a "toque," smaller than the top of the head.

They are willing to squeeze their waists or have no waists at all, they will fasten in their hips with bands of iron and rubber—although the hip is the most important and valuable thing about a woman except the brain, they will puff out those same hips ludicrously with what they call paniers, or baskets.

Anything on earth they will do, or wear or suffer.

* * *

Now, young and old men, and old and young women, please note that there is only one kind of difference in the world that counts.

And that is the different thinking that goes on in the brain.

Never mind about your clothes. Be clean, don't be conspicuous. That is all you need worry about in regard to the outside of yourself.

Be Particular About Your Thoughts --- Never Mind Your Clothes, Collars, Cravats or Socks.

But concentrate your attention upon being DIFFERENT AND PARTICULAR inside of your brain, where the REAL YOU lives and where your real life goes on.

One different THOUGHT is worth a million different pairs of socks, or collars, or any other kind of outside wear.

You don't want to pass over this earth like a silly monkey and then be forgotten.

You want to add something to what men have done here, and take your place as a real human being, not as a tailor's dummy.

The real men and women have been those who have given to the world new and DIFFERENT THOUGHTS.

* * *

Before Columbus came they used to go to India in a roundabout way. Columbus had a DIFFERENT thought. He thought that he could get to India by sailing out across the ocean to the West. He didn't pay any attention to the silly people who told him that at a certain point the ocean ended and that he would drop over the edge into eternal nothingness. He believed and knew that he could go on sailing and he went. He bumped into this continent, of which he never dreamed. And because Columbus THOUGHT in a different way America was discovered.

Before the days of Galileo people believed and religion taught that the earth was flat and that it had four corners. Some of the old Greeks knew better, but they didn't circulate their knowledge very widely.

Galileo, as he looked at this earth and the outside universe, thought differently from others. He taught men something about the shape and character of this moving planet upon which they lived. His DIFFERENT thought changed and improved the thoughts of all men. And he was very wise.

When the religious power told him that he must get on his knees and deny that the earth went around the sun he thought differently from some others who had been martyrs unnecessarily. He thought, "It doesn't make much difference what these poor ignorant religious gentlemen believe, or what they make me say. But it would make a good deal of difference if I permitted them to burn Galileo alive for telling the truth." So he did get on his knees and solemnly said that the earth did not go around the sun, at the same time repeating under his breath, "Still she moves."

* * *

There in Galileo's head was a brain that could THINK DIFFERENTLY. The moment he heard that a maker of lenses in Holland had invented a glass which brought distant objects near Galileo, without even seeing the new invention, MADE THE FIRST TELESCOPE and was able to show to those very religious gentlemen who had made him deny the truth on his knees that the whirling planets in the distance had rings and moons accompanying them on their journeys.

The difference between Galileo and the ordinary man who amounts to nothing, kind friends, was not a difference in neckties or socks, but a difference INSIDE OF THE HEAD.

And so it was with our American friend Edison. When he was a cheap little operator, tapping away at a wire, the other operators, who probably had their minds on different socks and different neckties, thought that only one message could go over a wire at the same time. But Edison had a DIFFERENT thought. He sent several messages over the same wire, and he did other things to prove the importance of thinking differently.

The stepmother of Abraham Lincoln was very far behind the times in dress. She never wore a tight corset. Probably never wore any. She would not have known what to do with a high-heel slipper. But she knew what to do with Abraham Lincoln. His mother had made him a big powerful boy, and his stepmother made him a thoughtful, good boy.

In her THINKING as a stepmother she was different. What she did for him gave Lincoln to the world. His own mother made his brain and his big, powerful body. But that brain and body without the slight education, and the mental direction that he owed to his stepmother, might have led nowhere.

* * *

In everything it is the different thought that counts.

Young men and young women who work for a living, look at those about you. You will find that those who put the most attention on the different neckties, or the different dress, are those that put the least attention ON THE DIFFERENT WAYS OF GETTING AHEAD IN THE WORLD.

You will find a young idiot with a different shaped collar each week, always doing his work IN THE SAME DULL WAY.

You will learn that he thinks it very intelligent indeed to be different as regards his hat, or the cut of his shirt. But he doesn't think it at all important to be different in the display of energy, of power and determination to succeed.

Let the other clerks near you be different in collars and neckties. YOU BE DIFFERENT IN YOUR WORK AND IN YOUR THINKING.

Realize that work is OPPORTUNITY.

Realize that you can't possibly cheat an employer. You can only cheat YOURSELF.

The employer hires his man on the assumption that he will do about as little as he can do. And when you do that you do the usual thing, you don't cheat the employer.

But you do cheat YOU.

AND LET WHO WILL BE DIFFERENT IN THE CHOICE OF CLOTHING.

When "The Other Man" Entered the Home of "The Money Master"

Fascinating Studies of the Picturesque Canadian Habitants in Sir Gilbert Parker's Latest and Greatest Novel, Now Appearing in HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

TO those who know and love Sir Gilbert Parker's wonderful stories of Canadian life, and to those few who do not know them, the great writer's newest novel, now appearing in HEARST'S MAGAZINE, will appeal as the most delightful literary treat many years. Greater than "The Right of Way," stronger and fuller than any of the stories he has ever written, is that of Jean Jacques, the "Philosophe," and his ardent wife, Carmen. In the current instalment in HEARST'S MAGAZINE the "other man enters the house of the Money Master." The scene between the lovable old Judge and the Clerk of the Court who has discovered the fact, is told as no other writer could. By permission of HEARST'S MAGAZINE the incident is reprinted here, a brief synopsis of what has gone before being included.

The True Aim of the Scientific Race Breeders-- By Sir James Barr

One of England's Most Eminent Thinkers Dispels Some Misapprehensions About Eugenics and Discusses the Vital Importance of the Right Kind of Marriages.

By SIR JAMES BARR,
M. D., LL. D., F. R. C. P., F. R. S. EDIN.

THE study of eugenics is largely concerned with the propagation and rearing of healthy and intellectual children, and therefore is an extremely wide subject, as anything which is calculated to lead to the moral, intellectual, physical and social improvement of the human race; but as charity begins at home we are primarily concerned with national eugenics, the improvement of our breed, and we should endeavor that the English-speaking peoples shall not be outstripped in the human race.

We are naturally concerned with the study of sexual subjects, which we are trying to raise from that disgraceful rubidry and obscenity with which mankind has frequently treated this sacred function. The propagation of the species is the highest and noblest function of the human body, and when people begin to recognize the enormous responsibility they incur in bringing human beings into the world this function will be studied and exercised to elevate and not to debase mankind.

Only for the wonderful working of Nature's laws in eliminating the unfit, the haphazard manner in which this function has been usually exercised would have left us with an even more degenerate population than that which we now possess. If the same care were taken we now possess.

The science of Eugenics labors under great difficulties, because it is popularly misunderstood. One hears it constantly stated that the eugenist wishes to introduce to the human race the principle of the stud-farm and scientific breeding as carried out in the lower creation. We wish to do nothing of the kind. We tell you plainly that the factors which make for the higher evolution of the human race are extremely numerous, and not all well understood, so we only wish to educate the public in known facts, and then allow the fit to work out their own salvation in their own way.

Some time ago the editor of a journal asked me to give him my ideas as to the measurements of the perfect man. It was very complimentary to be asked to set up such a standard, but I did not quite like the work, as I felt that all my friends would be left out in the cold, and I would run a great risk of being literally scalped, so I simply replied that I had not come across that variety of the human species, and I did not know what he was going to do with the perfect man when he found him, as such probably would not be fit for this mundane sphere, but in my opinion the mind is the measure of the man. I felt then that I was on safe ground, as every one would apply his own measure, and would frequently stretch an inch to suit self. You rarely meet with a human being who does not think he has got a gigantic mind.

Robert Louis Stevenson was a beautiful writer, and many of his epigrams are very fine, but much of his writings will not bear analysis according to the hard rules of facts, and I am convinced that if he had not been phthisical he would have written better and much more sanely. I shall leave to our teetotal friends the question of his sanity when he wrote: "Lastly (and this is, perhaps, the golden rule) no woman should marry a teetotaler or a man who does not smoke." I know a great many women who hold that this is the most sane advice which Stevenson ever gave.

Sir Francis Galton, the founder of the Eugenics Education Society, defined eugenics as "the study of agencies under social control that may improve or impair the racial qualities of future generations either physically or mentally." As you must have noticed from the broad standpoint of national eugenics, then every nation has largely the control of its own destiny, except for interference from its neighbors, and it is the duty of every nation to maintain its virility, so that it may be able to meet its opponents and competitors on equal terms.

The laws of Mendel show that the evolution of the race does not arise from any fortuitous concatenation of circumstances, but follows definite laws. Each individual, whether animal or vegetable, arises from the union of two organisms, male and female, or, as they are termed, gametes, and the fertilized ovum or individual is spoken of as the zygote. Now the great law of Mendel consists in showing that the character of the individual depends on the segregation or separation of the gametes of the parents and their union to form the offspring. It is highly probable that the determination of sex itself may eventually be found to be due to such segregation.

The Mendelian law upsets the Darwinian conception of evolution as proceeding through the gradual transformation of masses of individuals by the accumulation of impalpable changes. The great advantage of the Mendelian system is that it is analytical and experimental, so that if the system were rigidly carried out you could breed whatever characters you wanted in a few generations. The difficulty is to know what characters lead to the elevation of the race, but if we do not know of the characters we want, we do know many of those which we do not want, so we should begin our campaign by eliminating the undesirables, the idiots, the imbecile, the feeble-minded, the insane, the useless wastrels, the professional paupers, the habitual drunkards, the habitual criminals, and many hereditary diseases.

I am frequently asked the question: How is it that very great men often have very common-place sons? And some of my Radical friends frequently hurl the name of the late Right Honorable William Ewart Gladstone at my head, as the best example they can conjure up. This, I think, is very rough on the family and very inconsiderate on the part o. my Radical friends. I do not know anything about the family, nor do I know anything about the late Mrs. Gladstone, who had an important share in the production of the family, but I do know that some of the collateral branches of the Gladstone family are far ahead of the average intelligence.

What is much more to the point, and this applies to other great men, who do not produce able sons, the very exceptional greatness of Mr. Gladstone was to large extent acquired by his indomitable perseverance, and we know from Weismann that acquired characteristics are not transmitted. I do not know of one spark of original genius which he ever exhibited, and his name is not to be mentioned in the same breath with Darwin, Kelvin, Lister, Lodge, Ramsay and a host of others. You have got to study the innate qualities when you are considering the question of heredity.

There is another point which troubles a good many people, as to how to explain the great mental and physical differences which are often observed among members of the same family. This is no puzzle for the disciples of Mendel. You have only got to probe deeply into the family history and you will find the different characteristics in previous generations. In many families there is often a bad strain latent, and when it crops up it should be eliminated as soon as possible. Clever parents may not always produce clever children, but feeble-minded parents never will. The Mendelian law of inheritance is well exemplified in the lower creation. My friend, Mr. R. D. Laurie, has shown that if you cross a black Andalusian fowl with a white one, all the offspring of the cross will be blue. If you proceed to cross these blue birds among themselves 25 per cent. of their eggs will hatch into white birds like one grandparent, 25 per cent. into black birds like the other grandparent, and 50 per cent. into blue birds like their immediate parents.

Moreover, the blacks or whites transmit only blackness or whiteness, respectively, whereas the blues have the same powers of transmitting as their blue hybrid parents. That is to say, the characters blackness and whiteness are unit characters, capable of independent transmission, the heredity of which, moreover, can be definitely prophesied, and the intensity of which is not weakened during the process of crossing. They segregate in adelphite way in the grandfilial generation. This principle of segregation of distinct unit characters has been found experimentally to hold in the case of a large variety of characters numbered in hundreds of anumals and plants.

Jacob of old rather forestalled Mendel. He was a wily old Hebrew, and anything which he did not know was not worth knowing in those days. Witness how he selected the dominant colors for himself, and till he had got to do was to put a few dominant striped bulls among the herd and then there would be at most 25 per cent for Laban. His shrived rods were a makebelieve, except they were used for driving away the recessive bulls. He also selected the black or brown sheep, and we know that black is dominant to white; so poor Laban, who was then living three miles away, had not the ghost of a chance with his wily son-in-law; in fact, as he confesses, Laban only got the weaklings.

Sir James Barr, M. D., LL. D., President of the Section of Child Study and Eugenics at the Dublin Medical College

It would seem to me that the great financial ability of the Jews is inherited from this wily and unscrupulous Hebrew. No theory except that of Mendel would explain the origin of two such opposite characters as Esau and Jacob from the same parents, and they afford an excellent example of the difficulty which arises in assigning at the first a value of different characteristics.

It has been statistically found that there are a greater number of defectives among the first-born than among later children, and as the sense of its enormous responsibility. If we only stopped the reproduction of the unfit, it would then be able to look after [illegible] and the evolution of the race would go on rapidly.

[illegible] people in the [illegible] the selection of their [illegible] let not fall in love with any in[illegible] because he or she is of [illegible] and may possess a certain [illegible] for you. An old friend of [illegible] never to fall [illegible] has seen the mother; [illegible] all right then they can fall in [illegible] The engagement should [illegible] to examine the family tree for a [illegible] or two further back; though this is not always easy, and if there be any very black spots on the family escutcheon they are sure to be covered up.

I have a high opinion of the young women of the present day. So powerful [illegible] of the next generation [illegible] they do not show so much [illegible] except in the lowest strata, as the men, and in the upper and middle classes the girls of to-day will bear a very favorable comparison with their mothers and grandmothers. It is largely with them that the future of the race depends, and to them I would say, Do not fall in love with any man except you are convinced that he would make a good father of your family, and do not marry any man unless you are in love with him.

Now I wish them to set a high moral standard for men, and that will go a long way toward reforming them. Unfortunately women are very emotional and readily forgive the weaknesses of others, but the woman who marries a man to reform him usually brings untold misery on herself and her offspring. Do not marry a man because he is wealthy; intellect is a long way ahead of wealth. But, on the other hand, as Carnegie says, you need not reject a man because he is a millionaire. There is no objection to wealth if it be accompanied by intelligence, kindness, generosity, sobriety, morality, good health, vigor, temperance principles, and any other fine qualities which may appeal to your imagination. The maternal instinct is very deeply rooted in the female mind, but a woman should not only love offspring, but wish to have offspring of whom she would have reason to be proud.

Marriage is the most honorable state for women, and maternity the exercise of her most noble function, but many a woman in her haste to get married, for love does not last another chance, often lives to regret the day, and would be much better single than unsuitably matched. It is often deplorable to see a fine, handsome woman [illegible] match because he happens to be able to support her. Women often feel that there are not enough eligible men to go around, and when they are getting out of their twenties they take any [illegible] earlier years they would [illegible] that a woman should [illegible] and [illegible] It is advertised in the [illegible] with a pound of tea, and [illegible] and respect these [illegible] popular mistake mawkish [illegible] any kind of base sexual [illegible] who cannot live [illegible] better apart, but I have [illegible] who do not find out [illegible] before marriage, such [illegible] to their race. There is a [illegible] started by Conan [illegible] that racial advantage is [illegible] to all.

[illegible] wealthy, vigorous manhood and [illegible] I want men and women, who will [illegible] old age, of strong [illegible] and [illegible] a nation of stalwarts, [illegible] actuated by intelligent [illegible] the nation which will [illegible] most intelligent race [illegible]

[illegible] wealth of a nation is its most valuable asset, and I would say that every man between the ages of twenty and sixty able to bear [illegible] should a bayonet, and, if needs be, take [illegible] defense of his country. I would [illegible] universal military training for the youth [illegible] upward, as the best means of developing the physique and the moral and physical grit of the nation. As I said on a former occasion, some of the highest attributes of Christianity are love of country and kindred, obedience, faithfulness even unto death, for which we have been promised a crown of life—and all these qualities are developed by the military spirit. A nation in arms like Germany is not more pugnacious than we are. It is not the peaceful, which starts the fight, but the [illegible] Wars are not started by military men, but by politicians and low-bred financiers.

Military men make peace; civilians make war.

Teaching Girls to Be Sportsmanlike

By Jesse F. Williams,
Head Instructor of the Physical Department of Columbia University.

IT is the spirit behind the game rather than proficiency in the sport itself that we make the cardinal principle in our athletics at Teacher's College. It is sportmanship rather than records for which we strive. But do not misunderstand me, we go in to win and do, but the winning is of secondary importance to the formation and development of character Many of the most valuable lessons of life are taught on the athletic field: self control, courage, courtesy, loyalty, responsibility.

The girl who has been playing while playing baseball or basket ball is victorious, although she never makes a home run or a goal. We develop athletes, but more than all we develop women of athletic fields and in our gymnasiums. This is, of course, not new. The athletic training for boys has long been based on this principle

The generally accepted that girls are not sportsmanlike, that they are poor losers, that they do not always "play the game" is not entirely true. Fundamentally, girls and boys, men and women are not unlike in this respect. Many of the same attributes are in both sexes, but they lie dormant through lack of cultivation or use. Sportmanship is one of these qualities.

Girls have had no chance to develope it. Man has played games for centuries

But— just what is sportmanship? Can it be defined or is it an elusive something that we feel but can not logically explain or define? True sportsmanship cannot be defined in words, the man, the person, is really the definition of the word. For instance, we say that the tennis champion, McLoughlin, is a thorough sportsman, but we can not express our in words just what we mean. We feel, however, that he is a man of courage, courtesy, loyalty and truth, that he is a good loser, a kindly victor, that he has great self control; else he would not occupy his present high estate

Therefore, when we speak of sportmanship we have in mind, not the definition of the word but the figure of a man representing it. We do not think so much of what records the man has made but of what he is. The athlete triumphs over himself in his ability to throw straight and far, his prowess on the gridiron are not foremost in our minds when we speak of his sportsmanship.

It is this spirit, therefore, that we keep ever in the foreground in the physical education of our girl students. While they believe that they are building up character, we know that they are building up character. It is a subconscious building We do not preach loyalty to their college, their team, themselves, in words, but by object lessons.

For instance, we never give up playing a game because one or two important members of a team have failed us. We play the game even knowing we have no chance to win. We have played match games of baseball with only five members of the team in the field. We would play it with only a batter and pitcher rather than give up How does this teach loyalty? Suppose a game of baseball was scheduled for a certain Saturday afternoon It happens to be a delightful October day and several of the team prefer to go to the theatre or to shop or have made engagements of some sort that preclude their being at the game.

On their return to college they find that the game was played without them and probably lost to the visiting team But why did you not postpone it?" they will ask and they get their first lesson in responsibility when we explain that we were in honor bound to play the game because we had promised to We had as a team, as a unit, assumed a responsibility and we held to it. This teaches those who stayed away, loyalty and responsibility, and to those who went bravely into what they knew would be a losing game it teaches courage It is, by the way, only at the begining of the college year, before the new students have the real college spirit, that this is apt to happen

Later in the year perfectly legitimate causes may weaken our side in a contest, but those left to bear the brunt never refuse to "play the game."

Loyalty is shown in other ways. Personally I do not think that too much can be made of this characteristic My philosophy is that so long as a person is a member of any organization, be it a team, a college or what not he should be absolutely loyal in word and deed, should show loyalty under the most trying conditions, should not knock his fellows or his leaders and should support his organization with all his prowess. This is the kind of loyalty we try to teach at Columbia to our girls.

What is it that brings a boy or man to the football field or to the diamond every day, even when he knows that he is not going to play and that, perhaps he may never have a chance to play in a big game? What is it that brings him to the same [illegible] day after day dressed in his playing clothes? What keeps him from cutting away and having a good time in town? Loyalty to his team, himself

This loyalty, of course, and responsibility is as strong in girls; the fundamentalities have however, been of a vastly different nature for centuries and it takes sometimes months of training to [illegible] them realize that there is a responsibility in play as well as in work, that play brings opportunities and with oppor tunities come responsibilities

Every opportunity comes responsibility The worker, the athlete who fails to seize that opportunity, shows a lack of responsibility On the athletic field, for instance, a girl may have a chance to make a goal she does not grasp it, perhaps because it came as the result of an unusual play, but she fails She does not meet her responsibilities, you see Tact is forcefully explained at the time and not only the girl herself, but her team mates receive a lesson in loyalty and responsibility which will affect their future action on the athletic field as well as in life

At the beginning of a new term when a girl begins to take an interest in athletics he naturally wants and expects to become of the teams, she does not make it but you tell that she may join the practise game and [illegible] may have a chance later to take a [illegible] place Being perfectly human and [illegible] not perfect, she does not like the [illegible] kindly or otherwise, she states [illegible] games entirely or talks about the [illegible] everyday clothes rather than in her [illegible] costume This is one of the [illegible] of disloyalty toward her [illegible] the new student

There is no natural gang spirit among girls As a child, the normal girl plays [illegible] plays for which only [illegible] perhaps two is needed She plays [illegible] or if older, reads her story books [illegible] the contrary are natural [illegible] They [illegible] flock together [illegible] to [illegible] many games at the [illegible] In the [illegible] brought forth [illegible] men have led to [illegible] girls [illegible] games entirely [illegible] everyday clothes rather than in her [illegible] costume This is one of the [illegible] of disloyalty toward her [illegible] the new student

There is no natural gang spirit among girls As a child, the normal girl plays [illegible] plays for which only [illegible] perhaps two is needed She plays [illegible] or if older, reads her story books [illegible] the contrary are natural [illegible] They [illegible] flock together [illegible] to [illegible] many games at the [illegible] In the [illegible] brought forth [illegible] men have led to [illegible] girls [illegible] games entirely or talk about the

ABRUZZI HOTLY ASSAILED FOR TANGO ACTIVITY

Accused of Introducing Dance Into Italy; He Wins Prize in Private Competition.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Wireless to the Sunday American.

ROME, Sept. 6.—The religious press of Venice, Milan and Naples is just now repping the Duke of Abruzzi for what is considered his open official encouragement of the introduction into Italy of the tango dance, which is about to be banished from the dancing program of Italian society on the ground that it is extremely detrimental to the morals of the young of both sexes.

The Duke's encouragement happened this way. On Thursday last, at the Ridotto Hotel, Venice, he decided to give a quiet dinner to a number of old friends who were in Venice for the season. Among those present were Princess Letizia, the Duke's stepmother, Count and Countess Szechenyi, formerly Gladys Vanderbilt; Lord Carnarvon, Prince and Princess Liechtenstein, Louis Rothschild, Princess Gargarine, Princess Odescalchi, Princess di San Faustino formerly Mrs. Mabel Campbell of New York, Mrs. Gardner, Marchioness Doria di Rudini and the Duchess of Argyll.

Was Meant to Be Secret.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the Count Szechenyi proposed to establish a tango academy and the Duke not only approved the idea, but offered handsome prizes for the best four dancers. The affair was meant to be strictly secret, but next day the Duke and his guests were surprised to read a long account of the dinner and the "scandalo" in one of the leading newspapers of Venice.

According to these accounts, the Duke won first prize himself; he had as partner, Miss Gerda Ladine. The second prize went to Princess Gargarine, a Russian beauty of the legendary type, who danced with Signor Segarolo. The third went to Count Szechenyi, whose partner was the Princess di San Faustino.

Other dances followed in a waltz competition the Duke of the Abruzzi, Lady Diana, Count Rocca and Mrs. Gardner received first prizes.

Miss Ethel Irving with Frohman Now

Appears in "Years of Discretion" at the Globe, London, Tomorrow.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Miss Ethel Irving, a talented English actress, has come under Charles Frohman's wing. With her husband, Gilbert Porteous, Mr. Frohman will present her in Frederick Lockton's play, "Years of Discretion," at the Globe Theatre next Monday night.

Mr. Frohman is very hopeful of the London pleasure of this play, which ran for eight months at the Belasco Theatre, New York. Miss Irving will tour America under Mr. Frohman's employ, playing the title role of the famous Bernhardt thriller, "La Tosca," and also in Maugham's "Lady Frederick."

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Duke of Argyll, who married the King's aunt, Princess Louise, is in town en route to Oban where he is to preside at the Gaelic concert on September 10. He boarded an omnibus under the Kew Gardens Palace and alighted at Park corner. A lady said to the conductor:

Three American ladies sitting opposite her heard this and at once pursued the Duke, one capturing his autograph in a neat little album just inside the park gates.

Chinese President's Boys Are Under Lord William Cecil's Wings.

LONDON, Sept. 6. Two sons of Yuan Shi-Kai, President of the Chinese Republic, bright, intelligent youngsters, seventeen and fourteen years old, have arrived in England to be put in an English tutor. They spent last week-end with Lord William Cecil at the Rectory, Hatfield.

Lord William, who knows China and Yuan-Shi-Kai himself, is interested in the boys and has given them numerous introductions to nobilities.

The lads cannot speak English. They will be selected from there to Harrow then at Oxford or Cambridge.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Pure white tresses hair is quoted at $500 a pound. "Give us hair," cry the bald. "Give us gold," retort those who possess "woman's crowning glory."

Some offer their locks by the foot to the dealers; others demand $25, $50—almost any extravagant price. Many women sell their "combings" to be made into toupees and frizzes.

Next to snow-white hair that with the warm "Titian glow" is rarest.

Russia's Famous Millionaire May Educate His Proteges Here.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 6.—N. A. Shakhoff, the famous Moscow millionaire, is starting for New York next week on his first visit to the United States.

Mr. Shakhoff is famous throughout Russia as the man who brings up and educates the children of people who have no. His political trouble. Some months ago some one suggested that the St. Petersburg raided the Women Academy on the ground that the pupils were receiving instruction in the liberal, board and education fees of any of them who wished to complete their training outside of Russia.

Recently the Russian Education Department selected the 3 per cent. of Jews, the maximum allowed in the higher educational establishments in Russia, by drawing lots, instead of, as previously, after an examination. Mr. Shakhoff, who is an Orthodox Russian Christian, is now sending many of those who had good medal qualifications, but who had not drawn successful lottery numbers, to finish their education in France or Switzerland.

Recently there has been some feeling displayed both in Geneva University and in the Sorbonne, in Paris, against foreign students.

Mr. Shakhoff says that if conditions there prove unsatisfactory he will withdraw during his visit to the United States whether he cannot get his protege to get an American education.

Over $10,000,000 Graft Is Charged

Stolen by Russian Officials Building Amur River Railway.

ODESSA, Sept. 6.—More than $10,000,000 has been stolen by government officials, it is charged, in building the new line of the Amur River Railway of Khabarovsk, the Imperial Comptroller, is personally investigating the railway's financial administration.

Some 12,000 convicts have been working on the new line, and thousands of them contend that they have been cheated on the payrolls, it is said.

There has been introduced grafting, too, at the new shops at Nicolaieff. An official commission has just been appointed to learn where $4,250,000 appropriated on the Admiralty yards in twenty months has gone.

M. Dimitieff, the director-in-chief of construction of the new Black Sea dread noughts, was dismissed from his post at Nicolaieff a few days ago. He received a salary of $60,000 a year, but it did not satisfy him it is strongly suspected.

Spurious Antiques as Bait for Americans

Roads Out of London "Planted" with Alleged Old Furniture.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Pieces of antique furniture, whose origin only the long-faced dealers know, are increasing. Business is booming in alleged Jacobean sideboards, old dressers and Georgian corner cupboards.

A new scheme has increased the trade. The spurious furniture is placed in cottages on roads most frequented by Americans and other foreign sightseers and tourists.

"Unwillingly" the cottagers sell their "heirlooms" for a high price. If the buyer should pass again he would find a specific similar "antique" awaiting a new purchaser.

They Point Out Huerta Has Armed His Troops with Japanese Rifles.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—In many quarters in London the view is now entertained that Japan is responsible for Mexico's obstinacy.

It is well known here that for a long time past Japan has been paying court to the Mexicans and it is certain that General Huerta has armed his infantry and cavalry with rifles and carbines of Japanese manufacture.

There was no object in going to Tokio for military equipment unless it was thought possible that Mexicans and Japanese troops might some day be operating together in the field.

Health of Empress Worries the Kaiser

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Disquieting reports have arrived in England in regard to the health of the German Empress Her Majesty has not been well during the last twelve months and the Kaiser has sought medical advice.

Since Her Majesty's stay at the Royal Schloss, Hamburg, some of the trouble has again manifested itself. This was why the Kaiser, immediately after his cruise to Norway, hurried back to join her.

AMERICANS STIR RUSSIAN JINGOES

Special Wireless to the Sunday American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 6.—Russian jingoes are raising an immense cry over a report circulated officially from Kamchatka regarding the sale of spirits to natives by American schooners.

The Russian version says that when Police Inspector Stohnoff boarded an American vessel to prevent the sale of drinks to natives of the Tchuktchen peninsula, he was wounded in the back by a revolver shot from American, who then threw him overboard. This happened at the beginning of June, but the report has only just reached Petropaulovsk, whence help is be ing sent to her.

The natives have taxed the side of the drink sellers and are hostile to the Russian government. The last official report from the Tchuktchen peninsula says that whenever a vessel arrives drink laden, which is for the most profitable cargo for that region, all the native families come down to the shore, bringing their handiwork and belongings with them, which they barter for drink.

First they make the children so saturated with spirits that they remain helplessly in a trance throughout the few days their parents' debauch lasts. When they have parted with everything and finally everything the shore is covered with hundreds of hapless drunkards; the only sound is the bowling of their dogs.

Safer "Harbors" for Germany's Airships

Even Subterranean Dock Is Planned for Kaiser's Aerial Dreadnought.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—Germany is providing airship "harbors" along the French and Russian frontiers. Already she has thirty hangars that shelter forty dirigibles and are supplied with stores of hydrogen and petrol.

New and improved hangars, each capable of holding two Zeppelins, will be built at Darmstadt, Mannheim, Hanover and three other cities. Some will revolve on the wind vanes to admit monster airships entering or leaving.

MOST CHARMING OF GOWNS FOR A SEPTEMBER BRIDE

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Prominent among September brides will be Miss Marion Glen Coats, who is marrying Major Parsons on the 10th. A truly wonderful trousseau it seems is being prepared for her, the chief gem being the wedding gown with a train composed entirely of old French lace.

Another charming creation is a gown of fine suede cloth in delicate champagne color. The skirts falls in rich sculptured folds around the tall figure of the wearer and opens slightly in a few fan pleats in the front, while the folds are caught together at the sides with a silk cord.

Buttoning about the height of the knees, the coat is of old blue charmeuse lined with champagne cloth, there is a light fall of lace of the color of clotted cream, on either side.

The sleeves are imposed of a shaped material, but are finished at the elbow with a line of piping the long cuff being split open to show a puffing of lace.

KAISER'S 4 SONS INCOG. IN ENGLAND

German Crown Prince, His Wife and Three Brothers Wander Where They List.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Four of Emperor William's sons have invaded England recently. They are in the strictest incognito, which is just as well, else some ultra-Pinpes would be crying "German spies."

Crown Prince William and his vivacious wife have been traveling for a fortnight as the Count and Countess of Hohenstein of Potsdam. They stayed for some days at Clifton. The crown Prince has also tried the famous waters at Bath.

Prince August William and Prince Eitel Frederick have been promenading the streets of the city while the youngest son, Joachim, is also somewhere in Scotland.

The Kaiser really gave his sons per mission to visit England on the strict understanding, however, that they were to go about as quietly as possible, just like ordinary private citizens.

This was precisely what his sons want ed more especially the crown Prince, who, although appearing anti-British when his countrymen expect him to be so, is really devoted to everything English.

Young Prince Joachim, who is the youngest of the four, positively refused to have any attendants, and his eccentricities have caused some anxiety to the German Embassy.

Are One of the Happiest Coteries of Royal Children in All Europe.

ROME, Sept. 6. Royal matchmakers are much exercised with what future welfare of the children of Queen Helena, called the most beautiful princess in Europe before her marriage to King Victor Emanuel of Italy. For the first time today the Sunday AMERICAN produces photogroups of her three famous little daughters, which plainly indicate that they have indeed inherited much of the beauty of their illustrious mother.

Princess Mafalda, eleven years old, on the left; Princess Yolanda Margherita, twelve years old, at the right and the old Princess Giovanna, with their brother, Prince Humbert, nine years old, compose one of the happiest coteries of royal children in all Europe. With the exception of the grandfather he is the greatest and nurses of these little ones keep them under the closest watch, shield and guard but many episodes illustrate that in spite of their surveillance Royal children are growing up with a touch of human nature.

Their mother is the daughter of the King of Montenegro. Princess Yolanda, whose beauty is already being discussed at the different European royal courts, has the full name of Yolanda Margherita Milena Elisabetta Romana Maria. As she grows older, sometimes she is a little serious and "old-fashioned" in her manner, but at play time the princess and her brother and sisters can be depended upon to be as merry and fond of outdoor games as if they were the son boy or girl of the same age.

German Embassy's Washington Home

Count Von Bernstorff to Choose Finally from 265 Plans Submitted.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—The German government has met with an unexpectedly large response to its request for competitive designs for the new Embassy building in Washington, two hundred and sixty-five designs have been submitted.

The committee to award prizes, amounting to $5,000 is already in session. Probably the result will be announced in a few days. The head of the committee is well known Germany's greatest Professor [illegible] Berlin, and it is expected that his selection will have [illegible] in the foreign Office. Many [illegible] the best designs.

Finds English Diary of Queen Victoria

Also Love Letters from Prince Consort; Queen Mary Collecting Them.

LONDON, Sept. 6. Queen Mary is collecting personal belongings and souvenirs of Queen Victoria which possibly she will present to the London Museum.

At Osborne, Isle of Wight, Queen Mary found a most interesting diary which Victoria kept when a girl and many reflections by her of celebrities of mid-Victorian days.

MRS. BELMONT IN THE PANKHURST SECRET COUNCIL

At American's Deauville Villa Mysterious Militant Campaign Has Been Planned.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Sept. 6. Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, the Duchess of Marlborough and [illegible] leaders of the English suffragettes said to be out on the continent [illegible] heads in their councils, and in the field in open conflict.

Every one who knows who Mrs. Pankhurst is could select no situation a spot for a secret council [illegible] than Deauville, where Mrs. Belmont has a villa.

In that villa many troubles of four days have [illegible] Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Pankhurst, Miss Christabel Pankhurst and Miss Annie Kenney, their faithful lieutenant.

Mrs. Belmont who has always expressed her [illegible] methods of dealing with the suffragettes has declared it was the greatest moment of her life when Mrs. Pankhurst accepted her invitation. She is particularly [illegible] that no one may possess [illegible] suggesting and, in consequence has been admitted to the innermost secrets of the ring leaders.

The "militant" campaign which the [illegible] suffragette campaign will be mostly outside the four leaders can say. But from [illegible] there word dropped in the [illegible] Miss Christabel when strolling with Annie Denzil the other day: "Our [illegible] intended [illegible] effect and we shall be unable to bring the causes even more prominently to the attention of royalty."

This means that the life of [illegible] royalty is going to be made a very unpleasant thing.

Moonstones and Opals to Deck Fair Ladies

Will Wear Oriental Charms, Too, of Amethyst, Turquoise and Onyx.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Moonstones in fairy circlets mounting of gold, silver and platinum will be fashionable this season. Black opals are second favorites. Pendants are taking the place of necklets. Earrings are long dangling lobes.

The King Cheops stone, a fine opal from the mine in Asia Minor that King Cheops is said to have worked is being worn a good deal.

Women with a taste for the Oriental are adopting thumbrings with charms suspended from a long neck chain. They are carved out of amethyst, turquoise, onyx, lapis lazuli and other stones, and represent peacocks and elephants and strange Eastern beasts.

Polaire Adopts the Starch Bath Fad

"Ugliest Woman" Gives New Impetus to the New Fashion.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Mme. Polaire, who prides herself on being "the ugliest of French artists" and who is one of the most fascinating of women, is a devotee of the new fad, starch baths.

She has given a new impetus to the fad by many other actresses and fashionable women are taking starch baths which they vow, benefit their nerves and have the soothing effect of a bath in a mountain stream.

MARKETING SYSTEM OF THE CANADIANS INVESTIGATED BY FOOD EXPERT CASSIDY

Reveals Conditions Which Benefit and Injure the Dominion

Mr Cassidy in a recent analysis of the Canadian food market as compared with the American showed great opportunities possible for the New England business man who wishes to extend his trade in foodstuffs

He told some of the conditions in the meat, fish and fruit markets Today he discusses the vegetable, poultry, butter, egg and milk markets

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

If [illegible] carried on to [illegible] Canada of this [illegible] the United States [illegible] Winter [illegible] and are cannot be [illegible] to their [illegible] in sellers.

[illegible] Canada, [illegible] very rough and are received in very poor market condition. Receivers can not afford to re-pack or cull out, and unless the buyer examines the packages closely he will get a big loss.

If the [illegible] of packages [illegible] be severely [illegible] which supply [illegible] any loss [illegible] is not [illegible] supplied

CELERY CANADIANS EAT IS POOR STUFF.

Canadian celery is very poor stuff and too coarse for high class table service, although it is of a very high flavor

Ordinary Canadian vegetables in season such as [illegible] carrots, carrots, cabbage and cauliflower are equal to the best to be had on the American market with one exception, perhaps of potatoes which seem to be of a higher grade than what they are in Canada.

Potatoes [illegible] and there are no restrictions as to the growing of the most numerous varieties, while the export of potatoes in the Province of Quebec a bag of potatoes is supposed to weigh eighty pounds. The other layers are smaller, there run sixty pounds to the bushel. But no legal weight is recognized.

Montreal tomatoes are as high class as any of the American goods. But they are very inconsistent in size and show absolute carelessness in picking and packing

No classification is made in size or condition Green, ripe, and over ripe you will find in the same package. A box of tomatoes ordered over the telephone means any quantity from a small purple box to a large red box

Bunched early vegetables come into the Montreal markets, such as young carrots, beets, turnips, etc., and are brought in for sale long before they are sufficiently matured and are bunched in infinitesimal quantities.

Sometimes a bunch contains three of any of the above named vegetables. And sometimes six More often four

Parsley grows in abundance, but no dependence can be placed on the size of bunches. Corn on cob is poor stuff in the Canadian market and is usually sold ten cents a dozen in a bag When counted, very often you will find that a bag contains but eight

Quebec turnips are pronounced as being the finest on the continent Montreal cabbage and cauliflower can be as highly classed

VEGETABLE MARKETS GOOD AS AMERICAN.

The fresh vegetable market in Montreal and Toronto, so far as quality is concerned, is as good as the American markets. But there packages and manner of handling [illegible] is to be desired.

Some steps should be taken by wholesalers to regulate their packages to certain standards and to use more care in the marketing of their products.

For instance, all bunched vegetables should be sold by the pound rather than by the bunch, as it is the only way you can expect definite quantities when ordering.

The poultry market in Canada is so far inferior to the American market that it is hardly necessary to make a comparison Turkeys, ducks and geese receive absolutely no care from the Canadian farmer.

They are brought into the markets in very poor condition. The very small percentage of the above named that is really prepared for high class service is sold by producers who specialize Their supply is small and the prices demanded are too high for the dealers. The result is that this class of goods finds its way to private individuals, who are willing to pay the high price for quality.

Scientifically fed poultry is not marketed by the Canadian farmer. The leading packing houses in Canada claim that they always have on hand a sufficient supply of milk fed roasters and broilers.

But the term "milk fed" is misapplied to about three-quarters of the stock the marketman has in storage Any plump, well-aerated broiler or good color is classed as milk fed It may be strictly [illegible] but a regular customer thinks that has fed off the same bugs as a great many of its tribe that have not brought the farmer the price for this so-called "milk-fed" one has.

There is a vast difference between milk fed or corn-fed birds, and the public will find if not look into the matter closely that a very small percentage of the strictly milk fed chickens in Canada are entitled to the distinction.

Very few ducklings are brought into the Canadian markets by the Canadian producers. Any old duck of suckling weight is sold as duckling. Fresh broilers and roasters are not to be had in sufficient quantity until September 1.

Squab is very scarce in Canada and all squab game is imported. Both ducks are very plentiful in the Fall of the year as in reubon These two items are equal to the American goods Imported poultry and game is very high and is not shipped from the Canadian dealer to the ex owner in the condition in which it is received

Eggs are to be had in Canada in abundance during March April and May, and the earlier part of June there is little or no trouble in securing fresh eggs During the cold months the new laid eggs are very hard to get The big majority of farmers do not understand the care of poultry nor do they give poultry raising the attention that it requires.

MAYOR BLUFFING, SAYS BALLANTYNE

Attacks Policy on Vine Street Church; Candidates Offer Varied Endorsements.

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

Endorsements of all kinds are printed on the cards of different candidates for the House in the city and suburban wards. These endorsements are alleged to have been given the candidates for services rendered in the lower branch of the Legislature in the interest of organized labor

And still some of the candidates while members of the lower branch allowed themselves to fall from their estate of reason and vote for measures which have a bad odor of corporation affiliation If you do not believe it ask back numbers of the AMERICAN

Over in East Boston there is a row [illegible] over the question of giving Representative Thomas J Gibbin of Ward 1 his sponsor for that honor. He wants the incinerating plant removed from the harbor So do the members of the Sheridan Club of Ward 9, who while enjoying a moonlight excursion down the harbor, were covered by a blanket of smoke.

Councillor Walter Ballantyne of Ward 17 says he does not understand the delay in razing the old Vine Street Church to make room for the new municipal building. He declares Mayor Fitzgerald is "bluffing" when he says the delay is due to "the stringency of the money market"

Attacks Policy.

"It appears to me that the delay is caused on account of the approaching State and city elections," he said. "The Vine Street Church is a good drawing card for cafes, Schmeerkopf to patrols and a public be d- point seems to be the animating spirit that guides some so-called leaders of the people."

Speaking of Ward 17, there is a merry little war going on out there. Former Congressman Michael J McEttrick was last year drafted by the so-called leader of the Tammany Club to run for the Senate against Senator Tom Joyce Later Tim Callahan was substituted and McEttrick was endorsed by the Hon. McEttrick true to his ideals, represented the whole people instead of the social set leader of the Ward 17 organization. McEttrick refused to wear the New Haven collar for his now running for renomination for the House on his record

John J. Leo of Adams street, who is also a candidate for one of the two House nominations, is making a unique platform, which reads:

"I believe in the enfranchisement of the voter from one year of the Ward and Tammany Club dictators.ip

"I believe in the principles enunciated by William Randolph Hearst," said Leo "Hearst spoke a truism when he said in his recent article on 'Tammany Insanity' that it is the leading issue That applies to Ward 17 as well as New York."

Impressed by Article.

Thomas J. Meldon, another candidate, was much impressed with Mr. Hearst's Tammany article "The part which appealed to me," said Meldon, read:

"The only way for the people to prevent unfaithful public service is to publish proven public frauds. Consider the parable of the faithful and unfaithful stewards, and act according to the scriptural injunction 'To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.'"

John L. Fitzgerald, candidate for the State Committee on the Democratic ticket in Wards 9, 12 and 17, has a corps of supporters to hang out nightly at a place called Sheehan's corner in the Joyce stronghold in Ward 17 Fitzgerald is anxious to meet Joseph A. Guzman, the Tammany Club candidate, in debate.

Former Alderman Frank J O'Toole last night issued a statement that he is the choice of all the factions in Roxbury for the Democratic nomination for the Governor's Council Senatorial candidates in the Fourth District meet tonight at the corner of Dudley and Hampden streets. Representative Joe Leonard of Ward 9 may be seen talking it over with Senator Joyce and Tim Connolly.

Grady Expects to Win.

Former Representative Billy Grady, who made a good run for the House nomination last year, expects to be one of the winners in the House count primary day He believes in a square deal for all House candidates. So does Jack Devine, who stands strong with the carpenters and other laboring men.

Down in Ward 9 they are whooping things up for John A Kelher's candidacy for Mayor. Sub-committees have fired up a number of political fences in each of the twenty-six wards for Kelher's candidacy. It was done the past month in a quiet manner. The news leaked out Friday night in a Ward 9 brewery

But Kelher's fences are not the only ones spoken of in the South End ballwick. Joe Ferreira, who on Sunday last, collected $24 in nickles, dimes and quarters, improvised the erection of a wooden fence at a place called "Death Wharf," on Albany street, opposite Union Park street. Ferreira is now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the House in Ward 9. He feels that his fences are all built

"Little Johnny" Sheehan, who essayed the moonlight excursion of the Sheridan Club down around the incinerating plant and into the blanket of smoke, says the political horizon is clear for his entry into the House next year

"Automatic Soldier" Deadliest of Weapons

PARIS, Sept. 6—"The Automatic Soldier," the deadliest instrument of war ever devised, has been patented by a Danish engineer, it is reported.

The machine is governed by wireless telegraphy from a distance of five miles if need be. It consists of a steel cylinder sunk vertically in the earth, containing another cylinder which rises out of the ground when the delicate machinery is set in motion by wireless.

In the second cylinder is affixed an automatic rifle which immediately pumps bullets in the direction in which it is pointed, firing 400 times with speed and accuracy.

Then the rifle and its cylinder sinks back into the buried cylinder, where an enemy can find it only with great difficulty.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WHEN the final history of the American stage is written there will be two names in the list of notables which will stand out with particular distinction above all others in one respect. These will be May Irwin and Blanche Ring, who have done more to make bad music popular than all other singing comediennes combined. Miss Irwin is at it again at the Plymouth this week, with a string of songs that reminds you of the lively days when she gave the stage its first ragtime melodies. There is a wide difference of opinion among music specialists regarding ragtime—you can get almost any view on its quality that you prefer. But whether it is deadly or soothing, unharmonious or delicious, there is only one way to accept the popular melodies that May Irwin pours upon the troubled waters of the drama.

Miss Irwin has a personality of humor that puts her in friendly touch with everyone she meets, whether it is across the footlights or across a table. Her good nature is as infectious as the measles. You might as well try to make cheese from railroad iron as to remain uninterested and dull when Miss Irwin gets a fair start in a lively song. She is deadly to drooping spirits. Miss Irwin is unquestionably the most genuine comedienne of the stage of today. She has mastered the art of making her audiences catch the good cheer of her own happy nature, and with almost any kind of material in the shape of a play she has no difficulty in providing sparkling entertainment.

In "Widow by Proxy" Miss Irwin has a comedy that is sound enough to stand any test. It is bright and attractive, with dialogue and situations of a particularly mirthful quality. When you amplify this really good comedy with Miss Irwin's expansive sense of humor and her intimate knowledge of theatrical values you have humorous entertainment in its most perfect form. Miss Irwin and "Widow by Proxy" may be safely recommended to all who like the cheerful things of life.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

YOU might be pardoned for harboring a suspicion that the lurid thrills of "The Ghost Breaker" were carefully planned and perfected before a line of the play was written. It is not so much a play with thrills as it is a series of thrills put into a play. The main thing in any play, and in all acting, is to make an audience feel what is taking place on the stage. To see a play is not sufficient, for if the play is to be successful it must take the audience out of its comfortable chairs into the story that is being presented. This, as you may infer, is why many perfectly constructed plays fail, and why so many imperfectly constructed plays succeed. In one case the audience cannot be made to feel and in the other it can be attracted to the story. Technically, "The Ghost Breaker" is primitive and faulty, but as an entertainment it more than holds its own. Probably it is the swift succession of "thrills" that sweeps the audience out of the real into the unreal scenes the dramatist has designed. At any rate, no play of recent memory has found a more instantaneous response to its sensations. Good melodrama is always entertaining, but here is a case where doubtful melodrama catches popular fancy and holds it to the end. Possibly the tendency of the times is drawing playgoers back to a taste for melodrama, for the season that has just begun will find the theatres carrying a heavy load of plays that are expected to win on their thrills. One of the earliest of these will be "The Conspiracy," which will follow "The Ghost Breaker" at the Park next week.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

"THE CONSPIRACY" was the first of a long string of white slave plays that are beginning to flood the stage. It is really a police-detective-white slave drama, with all the exciting moments you might expect in a play that has an East Side atmosphere. One of its chief claims to distinction as a thriller is a terrific fight in the dark. "The Conspiracy" ran an entire season in New York and a long engagement is planned at the Park. Another entertainment of the same class that will arrive in October is "Within the Law," which was unquestionably the most emphatically successful of all of New York's dramatic productions last year. This is also advanced melodrama, and its producers believe that it will finish the season at the Majestic, when it comes to this city.

MENTON has been made before of Sam Bernard's liking for the sweet jingle of the public's money as it drops into the box office till. But to insinuate that Mr. Bernard's idea is simply to find out in advance how much money will be in the house each night would not only upset that gentleman's good nature, but would also be an injustice. I have it from Mr. Bernard himself that his nightly visits to the box office are purely psychological—and he didn't strangle when he mentioned that word. Audiences change nightly, and, according to Mr. Bernard, the wise actor changes his methods to fit his audience. The quicker the actor is able to gauge his audience the more readily he can utilize his versatility and bring his efforts and the mood of his hearers into closer harmony. Now, doesn't that sound just like Sam Bernard? Well, the comedian makes a rule of meeting his playgoers face to face at the box office window, merely to study them before trying to entertain them. That's the psychology of the thing. That it is a safe plan is evident from Bernard's success in the shape of a near-million in the bank. He doubtless believes in the efficacy of the slogan, "I saw you coming." Incidentally Mr. Bernard is a star built on foreign rather than American specifications. He is his own producer and manager, but he is smart enough to risk other people's money in his productions. That is where he has the best of his English brothers in the profession. He follows their methods, however, in looking after every detail of his business, from the acceptance of the manuscript to the rehearsing and costuming of principals and chorus. Mr. Bernard is really a very nifty little stage director, and every "effect" used in "All for the Ladies" is his own invention.

PLAYGOERS have become so accustomed to inartistic and unattractive theatre programs that the new program designs at the Shubert and Majestic Theatres last week supplied something of a shock as well as a treat for the eye. For the first time in Boston program covers that were really artistic and beautiful were put into circulation. It has been the policy of the Shuberts to give special attention to the artistic side of their programs in New York, and now the two local Shubert houses fall into line. While the public may be surprised at the innovation, it will also be grateful. The Shubert program appears in colors of striking contrast, showing a stalwart grand opera figure holding close to him a stunningly gowned show girl, 1913 model. The Majestic cover, in soft shades of green, with light sky and yellow moon, pictures a half-submerged water nymph in a lily-covered pool. This movement toward artistic programs is expected to be followed at all of the Shubert theatres in the country.

CAN'T YOU STAY ALL NIGHT, HORATIO!
NO MY BOY, GOT TO GO BACK TO TOWN. REHEARSAL IN THE MORNING. HOPE I'LL GET BACK ALL RIGHT. MY CAR ISN'T BEHAVING WELL.
4
BANG!
CRACK!
SOUNDS LIKE AN AUTOMOBILE BUSTING
5
LOTT, MY CARBURETER EXPLODED AND CRACKED THE TRANSMISSION. IT'S TOO LATE TO GET A MACHINIST. CAN YOU GIVE ME A BED FOR TO-NIGHT.
6
I'LL OPEN THE BED FOR YOU, HORATIO!
7
DID YOU FELLOWS SEE THIS NOTICE IN TO-NIGHT'S PAPER ABOUT MY NEW PLAY? JUST LISTEN; - "HORATIO DE FOOZLE IS ABOUT TO APPEAR IN A NEW PLAY ENTITLED "THE TIN PASHA!" SURE!
8
"MR. DE FOOZLE COMES FROM KENTUCKY BUT NOW LIVES IN NEW JERSEY. HE MADE HIS FIRST APPEARANCE IN THE CHORUS OF THE "HOT STUFF" COMPANY, FIVE YEARS AGO."
9
10
HELP!
BLEST IF I KNOW. THE BED SUDDENLY CLOSED UP ON ME. WHERE DID THOSE CHAPS GO TO!
